An Experiment with the Memory.

Starting with the word Washington, write down one hundred words just as they occur to you. Let your second word be the one which Washington naturally suggests to you. Possibly it will be capitot. It may be President. Take the word which first comes into your mind. In the same manner let the third word be suggested by the second, the fourth by the third, and so on. Be careful that the third word is not suggested by both the first and second. Drop the first entirely, and let your mind go from the second alone to the third. Having written this list of words, you will have furnished your self with a cheap but very useful mirror of your mind. If you are able to use this mirror, you may discover some very serious defects in your mental processes. You may discover that you think along certain lines too frequently. You may discover that you are using superficial principles quite too much to the neglect of more important laws of mind. You will be led to avoid certain linkings and to encourage others of a more philosophical nature.—Saturday Evening Post.

TWO GRATEFUL WOMEN

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"Can Do My Own Work."

Mrs. PATRICK DANIELY, West Winsted, Conn., writes: "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—It is with pleasure that I write to you of the benefit I have derived from using your wonderful Vegetable Compound. I was very ill, suffered with female weakness and displacement of the womb. "I could not sleep at night, had to walk the floor, I suffered so with pain in my side and small of my back. Was troubled with bloating, and at times would faint away; had a terrible pain in my heart, a bad taste in my mouth all the time and would vomit; but now, thanks to Mrs. Pinkham and her Vegetable Compound, I feel well and sleep well, can do my work without feeling tired; do not blot or have any trouble whatever.

"I sincerely thank you for the good advice you gave me and for what your medicine has done for me."

"Cannot Praise It Enough."

Miss GERTIE DUNKIN, Franklin, Neb., writes: "I suffered for some time with painful and irregular menstruation, falling of the womb and pain in the back. I tried physicians, but found no relief. I was at last persuaded to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has done for me. I feel like a new person, and would not part with your medicine. I have recommended it to several of my friends."

TAPE WORMS

"A tape worm eighteen feet long at least came out of the scene of my taking two Cascarets. This I am sure has caused my bad health for the past three years. I am still taking Cascarets, the only cathartic worthy of notice by sensible people."

WOMAN'S WORLD

The Latest Bracelets.

Bracelets are again among the fashionable articles in feminine jewelry. Amber ones inlaid with pearl are quite the newest.

A Patriotic Blouse.

A new blouse is of white china silk. The front strip covering the buttons, and the cuffs and collar are composed of red, white and blue taffeta silk, stitched on in white. The dash of patriotism will prevent the waist being laundered, but it can be dry cleaned and one must be in fashion, you know.

Cutting Children's Hair.

The best authorities on the hair say that a child's hair should not be cut until it is four or five years of age. It should be kept cut after this until the child is about fourteen. After this a little girl's hair should be allowed to grow long. It should be trimmed at the tips, however, or burned off monthly to keep it even and the hairs from splitting at the end. Do not wash the hair too often unless it is very oily. In that case wash it often to remove the excess of oil. Dry hair that is inclined to come out should be kept clean by daily use of the brush applied vigorously to the scalp. It should not be washed oftener than once in six weeks.

A Cheerful Sitting Room.

A bright Vassar girl has invented a simple way of making a sitting room seem cheerful. It consists in putting a thin coat of pink varnish upon the glass of the windows, or where it is feasible, of using the lightest colored pink glass for the purpose. No matter what the weather is outside, it always looks cozy and comfortable within. In her house she has what she calls the cabinet of horrors, and the unneatly atmosphere of the place is produced by a similar use of a light bluish glass. Where a small amount of color is used the eye does not notice the fact, although the mind is affected by it, pink light causing a slight exhilaration and bluish light the feeling of depression.—New York Mail and Express.

Women Students in Germany.

"I think the hatred of the educated woman grows more savage every day," writes a young American girl studying in Germany. "The women clamoring for admittance to lectures and lessons are mostly Americans and Germans, and only a great deal of pluck prevents the former from throwing up their studies and running away, so bitter are their experiences sometimes, owing to their double crime of being women and being foreigners. Some great and stirring lights of the University, such as Virchow and Leyden, have spoken up bravely in favor of the matriculation of women, but the lesser men grudge them every privilege that they seek. Thus, on the door of a certain professor at the Berlin University is, at the present moment, the following notice: 'Female Hearers Not Admitted.' Not that the subjects treated within might wound feminine delicacy—oh, no! The professor—Grimm by name, and grim by nature—lectures upon 'Art and Culture in the Nineteenth Century.' It is a beautiful satire."—New York Post.

To Be Short or Tall?

It is a curious fact that the majority of men do not seem to be attracted by tall girls. We wonder why? asks an English critic. Perhaps, remarks the Chicago News, it is men are so accustomed to be looked up to—at all events by the fair sex—that it is only natural for them to prefer the girl who, in her little caressings and fascinating lover-like ways, has, on account of her shortness, to look up at him for the purpose of peering into his loveliest eyes. But very short women can only sound the note of a forlorn condition, unfortunately, for fussy, modern man, taking him in the abstract, passes her over and lets his choice fall upon her comparatively taller sister. The superlatively tall woman and the positively short woman the average man leaves severely alone.

Tall women are usually dignified and would appear to scorn kittenish ways, and although they manage to draw admiration, it is rather of the awe inspiring kind. No doubt, owing to their smallness of stature and pretty, playful ways, men give to little women more petting than the tall, dignified woman demands. The lover's oft repeated expression, "You little darling," could hardly be applied to the very tall girl without tickling the risibilities of those who overheard it. This is certainly very hard, and looks like a punishment for being tall, but who can help her stature? And it is a fact, too, that men are rather shy about approaching tall women, because of restraint which they feel but cannot explain. They are under the impression—why it's hard to tell—that tall women are built to be commanders, and that they are in their natural element when left alone in their reserved dignity and masings in their lonely wanderings.

The Sweetness of One Woman's Garden. A certain woman had a flower garden at her home in the suburbs of a busy city. She had no gardener, but did all the work herself.

humbler flowers grew at her bidding, and it became a great pleasure to her to see her friends' delight in her garden. No caller ever left with hands empty of flowers.

At first this was all she did with her flowers except to use them inside her home, but gradually she fell into the way of sending them to the sick among her neighbors. Many a weary invalid was refreshed with the sweetness of roses or the perfume of carnations, or the dreamy, restful fragrance of violets. Children, going home from school, loved the common, bright-hued flowers she gave them—ragged-robins, snappers, sweet-williams, marigolds, poppies, nasturtiums, and geraniums.

One day she missed her car into the city, and while waiting for the next one sauntered, gloves in hand, about her glowing garden. For pure love of them she gathered a bunch of crimson carnations, and carried them with her into the horse-car.

"Something sweet to smell," she thought. When her shopping was done she caught a saleswoman's eyes bent wistfully upon the glowing blossoms, and she gave them to her. It was a revelation to her to see the flash of pleasure which lit up the tired face. "Oh, thank you," was all the delighted girl said, but her happy face expressed far more than was conveyed in her words.

From that day to this that woman has never taken the car into the city without a bunch of flowers in her hand, and some one who needs them always gets them. Sometimes it is a crippled boy, whom she chances to meet on the street; sometimes a tired-faced woman, with her heavy basket of clothes; and often it is a saleswoman, worn and weary with long hours of standing.

All cannot gather flowers every day in the year, but she who has even a few flowers can do much in a quiet way. A bunch of violets or pansies, cool and fragrant, given with a smile and a kind word; a few sprays of roses placed in a tired saleswoman's hand; a cluster of carnations laid upon a poor woman's heavy basket, will lighten the load, will breathe sweet stories of the country and freedom and space, and the delicious out-of-door life of it all.—Home Comfort.

Fashion Notes.

White lawns with forget-me-nots and small figures are among the pretty summer dress patterns.

Large bunches of violets tied with bow knots form one of the pretty designs seen in wash gowns.

Black dotted Swiss gowns are made up over color and trimmed with rows and rows of black lace insertion.

The Empire tortoise-shell comb, set in below the knot of hair at the back, is as useful as well as ornamental adjunct.

A French gown of blue is enlivened with a touch of burnt orange, and the hat to be worn with it is of gray, trimmed with orange velvet.

A pretty bit of dainty underwear is a short chemise of the finest crepe de chine, finished around the neck with a lace-trimmed frill of finest white lawn.

Several dresses have been finished with yokes of solid embroidery and braid. If these are at all of open design they are lined with bright satin or silk.

Some of the new round hats of Spanish yellow braid are trimmed with nothing but black ostrich plumes, black velvet ribbon and black poppies with yellow hearts.

The regulation caps are made so as to stand out from the shoulders like a rain-shed, "the more flare the more fashion" seeming to be the idea in their making up.

The latest silk shirt waists are corded; in fact, everything corded is the rage, the cords ranging in size from a common wrapping twine to the size of one's finger.

Yellow vies with blue for prominence in millinery. Yellow flowers, yellow tulle, chiffon and yellow straw are brilliantly conspicuous, besides all the warm tints of burnt orange.

Braided black nets, with tiny frills of gauze ribbon between the bayader patterns, are a very popular material for the transparent gown which is a fashionable necessity this season.

BRAVE AMERICAN WOMEN.

In the Revolution They Were Not Behind the Men in Patriotism.

From memoirs, dairies and old letters enough comes down to give us an idea of the tone of the women of the Revolution, and the mothers stand out as heroically as any Spartan woman. A Mrs. Martin voiced the general feeling when a British officer asked her whether she had a son.

"I have seven."
"Where are they?"
"Fighting for their country."
"All of them?"
"All."
The officer sneered. "Well, you sent enough," he said.

Mrs. Martin looked him squarely in the face. "I wish I had fifty sons to send against you."
Such instances pile up before the searcher, and there were mothers braver still. One of them sent an only son to the siege of Augusta. A British soldier, full of hatred for the rebels, rode out of his way to tell the woman of her son's death. She met him at the door, and without a word of warning, he brutally announced: "You had a son. I saw his brains blown out at Augusta."

"The mother's form grew rigid, but she said proudly:
"He could not have died in a nobler cause."
There are mothers in the land today as brave as she, if a cause like hers should call; and, even when the cause is the liberty of another race, the mothers have been brave and stopped their tears. Women's work was needed more in the old days than it is in this time of Government supplies and a well-filled Treasury, and wherever women were needed, there they were found.

Mrs. Draper, of Dedham, Mass., sent her husband and sixteen-year-old son to the army. Then she called in her neighbors and began baking bread and pies, which she kept on a long table before her gate, for the refreshment of all hungry American soldiers who passed that way. After Bunker Hill, when the scarcity of ammunition induced Washington to call for all available powder and lead, she made Mrs. Draper came to the front again. Powder was dear to the heart of the New England housekeeper, and she had one of the finest collections in New England; but without a moment's hesitation she melted it down, and not content with furnishing the material, she obtained a mould and made the powder into bullets, which she forwarded to the army. Then a new war arose. The men were insufficiently clothed. The indefatigable Mrs. Draper had piles of domestic cloth stowed away for family use. She made it into soldiers' coats. Her splendid stock of sheets and blankets was transformed into shirts, and even her own flannel clothing was altered to men's garments.

She was only one woman among thousands like her. The famous Mrs. Motte, who had given signal evidence of patriotism, was at one time obliged to leave her handsome home, which fell into British hands. Mrs. Motte took up her residence in a farmhouse back of the American lines. The American commander became convinced that the only way of ridding the British was by destroying the Motte house, but he hesitated to mention this to the patriotic women. When he did pluck up courage to do so, he was relieved of all embarrassment. Although the place was dear to her, and was almost her only property, she assured the commander that it was altogether at his service, furnished him the bow and arrows by which combustibles were to be carried to the roof, and stood beside him, with no sign of regret, while her home and fortune burned to ashes.

Net all of the Revolutionary women had great sacrifices to make, but they did what they could; and so many of the girls pledged themselves never to accept the attentions of young men who refused to fight for the country that there was really no merit in a young man's going to the front.

American women gave up tea, too; and in that day that was a sacrifice as heroic as it would be in England now. Peggy Stewart, of Annapolis, went further than that in the tea fight. She was the pretty wife of Anthony Stewart, a merchant and shipowner; and when a bark, named for her, the Peggy Stewart, came in with a cargo of tea, she ordered both tea and bark to be burned in the harbor; and forced her husband to hold the torch with which the fire which destroyed his property was kindled.

The Flag of Betsy Ross.

The first flag made for the Continental Congress was the handwork of Miss Betsy Ross, of Philadelphia. It was on August 3, 1777, that it was first raised over Fort Mifflin, near Rome, in this State. Paul Jones, who used to have the rattlesnake flag, was the first to show it to a foreign Nation when he unfurled it in France.

On June 14, 1777, the Continental Congress adopted this resolution: "Resolved, That the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the Union be thirteen stars in a blue field, representing the new constellation."

It was this flag, not officially born yet, but substantially the same, with which Perry inspired his gallant crew on the deck of the Lawrence, as he waved it in his arms before the battle of Lake Erie began and pointed to the words of Captain Lawrence, blazoned across its folds: "Don't give up the ship." And they didn't. The British did that. The victory saved the great Northwest to the Union.—New York Mail and Express.

Stone in Her Stomach.

From the Gazette, Blandinsville, Ill.

The wife of the Rev. A. R. Adams, pastor of the Bedford Christian Church at Blandinsville, Ill., was for years compelled to live a life of torture from disease. Her case baffled the physicians, but to-day she is alive and well, and tells the story of her recovery as follows:

"About six years ago," said Mrs. Adams, "I weighed about 140 pounds, but my health began to fail and I lost flesh. My food did not agree with me and felt like a stone in my stomach. I began to bloat all over until I thought I had dropsy. I had pains and soreness in my left side which extended across my back and also into the region of my heart. During these spells a hard ridge would appear in the left side of my stomach and around the left side.

"These attacks left me more and exhausted. All last summer I was so nervous that the children laughing and playing nearly drove me wild. I suffered also from female troubles and doctored with ten different physicians without receiving any help.

"My husband having read in the newspaper of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, I decided to try them. I began taking them last November but experienced no relief until I had taken six boxes. I am now taking the eleventh box and have been greatly benefited.

"I was also troubled with nervous prostration and numbness of my right arm and hand so that at times I could hardly endure the pain, but that has all passed away. I now have a good appetite and am able to do my own work. I have done more this summer than in the past four years put together. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People cured me and I think it my duty to let other sufferers know it.

Hundreds of equally remarkable cases have been cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Vanity of Dummy Shoes.

It is said that a coquette trick prevailed among the women at the seaside and watering-place hotels in Europe. They have extra sets of tiny boots and shoes made, not for wear, but to be left outside their bedroom doors. It seems that foreigners, particularly Frenchmen, are in the habit of scrutinizing closely the ladies' boots in the corridors of hotels. The furnishing of such tiny sets is a recognized part of the boot and shoe trade in Paris. It is also said that similar sets of very small boots, and shoes, and slippers are sold by the big shoe houses of Paris to be placed on exhibition with the bride's trousseau. The French boot-makers say that the Madrid ladies have the smallest feet, the Peruvian and Chilian ladies next. Ladies from the United States are also remarkable for their small feet. Russian ladies have heavy, splay feet. In Northern Europe the best-shaped feet are those of the women of Sweden. In Paris, the Jewesses are noted for their small feet, and are very particular about their chausserie. German women have large feet, and English women are noted on the Continent for awkwardly made boots and shoes. Dona Bertha, wife of Don Carlos, the Pretender, wears a five-and-a-half. Lady Malet, wife of the ambassador, has a phenomenally small foot.—Saturday Evening Post.

A Fortune From a Scar.

An inventive genius who suffered from attacks by stray dogs when riding his wheel, set his wits to work to devise something which would be an efficacious, and yet comparatively harmless, means of defense. As a result he has brought out and patented a pocket pistol which will shoot ammonia, water or other liquid. The most vicious dog cannot withstand a few drops of ammonia in his mouth or eyes, and yet there is no danger of actually injuring a valuable animal which might playfully annoy a rider. The weapon has proved so much of a success as a means of defense as well as fun-making, that the lucky inventor is realizing much money from his device.

In the Crimean war 55,615 lives were sacrificed, and at Bородино, when the French and Russians fought, 78,000 men were left dead on the battlefield.

LIQUID PROTECTION

50c. ACTUAL SIZE.

SHOOTS AMMONIA, WATER, COLOGNE, OR OTHER LIQUID.

It is a weapon which protects bicyclists against vicious dogs and foot-pads; travelers against robbers and toughs; homes against thieves and tramps, and is adapted to many other situations.

It does not kill or injure; it is perfectly safe to handle; makes no noise or smoke; breaks no law and creates no lasting regrets, as does the bullet pistol. It simply and amply protects, by compelling the foe to give undivided attention to himself for a while instead of to the intended victim.

It is the only real weapon which protects and also makes fun, laughter and lots of it; it shoots, not once, but many times without reloading; and will protect by its appearance in time of danger, although loaded only with liquid. It does not get out of order; is durable, handsome, and nickel plated.
