AN OPERATION AVOIDED.

Mrs. Rosa Gaum Writes to Mrs. Pinkham About it. She Says:

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I take pleasure in writing you a few lines to inform you of the good your Vegetable Compound has done me. I cannot thank you enough for what your medicine has done for me; it has, indeed, helped me wonderfully.

For years I was troubled with an ovarian tumor,

He said nothing could be done for me but to go under an operation. In speaking with a friend of mine about it, she recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, saying she knew it would cure me. I then sent for your medicine, and after taking three bottles of it, the tumor disappeared. Oh! you do not know how much good your medicine has done me. I shall recommend it to all suffering women.—Mrs. Rosa Gaun, 720 Wall St., Los Angeles, Cal.

The great and unvarying success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in relieving every derangement of the female organs, demonstrates it to be the modern safeguard of woman's happiness and bodily strength. More than a million women have been benefited by it.

TALES OF PLUCK AND ADVENTURE.

Boy-Freacher and Panther.

A venerable presiding elder of the Methodist Church, Rev. Frank A. Hardin, now of the Rockford (III.) district, began his ministerial career at the age of sixten as a "junior preacher" in Indiana, when the region that he served was for the most part an unbroken wilderness. He spent most of his time on horseback, and used his saddle-bags at night for pillows.

On one occasion, the stowe of which lows.

On one occasion, the story of which was told by Rev. Mr. Hardin at a recent conference, the boy-preacher found the settlement of Millersville in a high state of excitement over the ravages of a great panther amongst the live stock.

ravages of a great panther amongst the live stock.

At a wayside cabin Hardin was warned not to go on, as the panther had been seen on the road, and it was necessary for him to travel at night in order to meet an appointment for the next day.

But the servant of the church had no notion of being turned from his duty by the presence of a wild beast in the woods. Moreover, he had no fear, for the moon was shining and his "claybank" mare was a spirited animal.

The trail led through a love of the stock of the moon was a spirited.

animal.

The trail led through a dense piece of woods known as the Sugar Flats. Hardin had not gone far into them before the forest of maples, then in full leaf, quite shat out the moon.

"A good place this to meet the panther," the boy-preacher said to himself.

Almost at that moment his mare seemed to drop to the earth, or to crouch closet ot the ground. He knew well enough that she had seen something that he had not, and that that something was highly dangerous to them both.

He knew that her next move would be a jump, and on the instant he propared himself for a possible parting of the saddle-girth by gripping the mare's mane. He had no sooner done this, and leaned as far forward as the horn of the saddle-girth by gripping the mare's mane. He had no sooner done this, and leaned as far forward as the horn of the saddle would permit, than the mare made a leap, and went bounding along the dark trail like lightning.

At the very instant in which she leaped Hardin heard the most terrible scream that ever snote his ears. It seemed to come from directly over his head; and in less than one second after the screech and the leap of his mare, Hardin heard a heavy body strike the ground in the very spot where the mare had been standing while she crouched preparatory to the spring. She had plunged forward just in time to avoid the claws of the panther, which had dropped from the tree at horse and rider.

Now the mare was flying through the woods to escape possible pursuit. Probably Hardin could not have held her if he had tried—and he did not try. He had all he could do to cling to her back on the uneven ground, with tree-branches brushing him.

Not until she had reached a large open space on the crest of a ridge did the mare slacken her pace. Thou she stopped and drew a deep, shivering sigh, as if to say, "Intat was a narrow escape for both of us!"

The mare went on now at an easy trot, as if she had put the whole episode behind her. The young preacher could not say as much, for the terrible seream of the animal haunte away, to wait for the tiger to come for the goat. The ranchmen he sent a little distance back with instructions to await his summons.

"Surely enough, the tiger came, but after reconnoitring the ground unseen, as was shown by his tracks next day, instead of tackling the goat, he made a circuit and pounced upon one of the hunters lying on the ground behind his blind. A heavy overcoat that he wore, the season being winter, when the nights are cold in the mountains, saved the hunter for the moment from the tiger's teeth and claws, and his shouts brought the ranchmen to the rescue. They attacked the tiger pluckily with the give up his prey. He drove the ranchmen back twice, returning to the Englishman each time and standing guard above him, with his forepaws on his body. At last one of the ranchmen threw a lasso over the tiger's neck and jerked it tight. The animal charged him at once, but the men got a turn of the rope round a small tree, and both pulling hard together, drew the tiger's head close to the trank. Then, as the tiger snapped at the rope with his teeth, one of the ranchmen severed his spine with his machete. The Englishman was badly shaken up by the unexpected outcome of his hunting scheme, but was not much injured otherwise. He finished the beast, which now, of course, was helpless, with a shot in the head, and he always claimed the glory of killing him. But it was never heard that he tried East Indian hunting methods again with Venezuelan pathor-tigers."

A Hero at El Caney.

Captain A. H. Lee, R. A., British Military Attache, with Shafter's army in Oab, writes as follows in Scribner's Mayazine: Close in front of me to a slight and boyline lieutenant completed my attention by his persistent and reckless gallantry. Whenever a man was hit be would dash to his assistance regardless of the fire that this exposure invariably drew. Suddenly he sprang to his feet, gazing intently into the viliage, but what he saw we so never knew, for he was instantly shot through the heart and fell over backward, clutching at the air. I followed and asked them his name. "Second Lieutenant Wausboro, sir, of the Seventh Infantry, and you will never see his better. He fought like a little tiger." A few convolving gasps and the poor boy was dead, and as we laid him in a shady spot by the side of the road, the sergeant drew a handkertel, this officer, and you died like a true soldier," Who would wish a better end?

In the towns of Chile most shops bors. The panther turned ont to be one of the largest ever killed in Indiana.

Attacked by a Venezuelan Tiger.

"To try to hunt the panther-tiger of Venezuela," writes a correspondent of the New York Sun, "as the lowland jaguar is hunted with tiger hounds, is next to useless. In the rough, rocky country in which he makes his home he will trarel away at a speed which leaves the hunters hopelessly behind, and it is rarely that the dogs can come up with them. If they do, it means some dogs killed, with the panther usually gone before the hunters can arrive on the scene. Sometimes the ranchmen trap or poison the panther tiger to stop his ravages among their stock, a thing, despite his cunning, not so difficult to do, owing this ravenousness.

"An Englishman named Turnbull, who had a ranch east of Merida, being bothered by a panther-tiger which killed his stock, thought that he would hunt him after the method often employed in India with tigers and leopards. Taking with him two of his herders and a goat, he went at nightfall to a woodland which the creatures was accustomed to visit. There he tied the goat to a stake and took his position behind a blind, fifty yards

The Coming Battleship.

The coming Battleship.

The achievement of the Oregon during the recent war has demonstrated the fact that upon our battleships and cruisers we must rely for our offensive and defensive conduct on the high seas. The Oregon and Brooklyn have proven themselves ideal defenders. The little converted yacht the Glou cester made short work of the Furon and Pluton, which ranked among the very best of the destroyers. There was a great hue and cry about torpedo boats, destroyers and rams when the war began and everybody was on the qui vive to know just exactly what was likely to happer when this flotiling to in line of battle. But for some reason or other they came to grief quite early in the action, and the smaller craft steamed about among them with as little fear for them as they had respect for the power that owned them. That they came to grief and struck a heavy blow at the future of such craft will be the verdict of history.

Where Fish Spend the Winter."

James B. Church, of Tiverton, Rhode Island, a recognized authority on fish and their habits, thus writes: Fish are, except the birds, the best pilots in the world. Either the birds or fish know more when asleep about piloting than a man pilot does when awake. Now, as to the habits of fish. They come on the coast in the spring, when the migratory instinct starts them out of their winter's sleep. In winter they are in a dormant state, like the bear, skunk and woodchuck. The old theory that fish migrated south is all wrong. Fish simply leave the coast and go off shore on the northern edge of the guil stream, get into water of the right temperature and go into winter quarters. Before the time comes for them to start on their annual pilgrimage for their winter quarters they have taken on a good coat of fat. It is under their skin, and their stomach is lined with it, and it is also all through their bodies when they arrive at the spot that they have selected for their winter home. Then there grows over their eyes a white film, and they the south they have selected for their winter home. Then there grows over their eyes a white film, and they tremain until the time comes for them to start for their summer home.
