Dup a Commen Bag For a Small Party. Cuba is a paradise for the sportsman, wild game and fish of all kinds being abundant. Parties of gentlemen on horseback, with their pack of hounds, hunt the fleet-footed deer. It is a common thing for a small party to kill eight or ten deer in a day. The wild boar is plentiful, and some-times, if cornered, dangerous, especial-ity the old master of the herd, called "un solitario," which will tear a dog to pieces or make a green hunter climb a tree, but a Cuban easily kills him with a machete. The island boar some-times weighs 200 or 300 pounds, and has huge tusks, often five or six inches in length. The meat of the female is much relished by the natives. Wild dogs and cats, wild cattle, horses and jackasses abound. But the jutia, pecu-liar only to Cuba, which looks like a cross between a squirrel with a ra's tail and a rabbit, and which lives in the trees and feeds on nuts and leaves, is the great delight of the Cuban. Fowls are in great numbers. Wild guinea hens and turkeys are found in flocks of from twenty-five to 100. The whistle of the quail and the ditter of the pheasant and perdiz are heard on all sides in the rural and mountain regions. Ducks in abundance come over from Florida in the winter and return with the spring. Wild ligeons, with their white tops and bodies of blue, larger somewhat than the domes-tic bird, offer, in hunting, the greats sport to gentlemen who will be re-strained within reason. In the early mornings the pigeons generally go to feed on the mangle berries when ripe, and which grow by the sea or near some swampy place. A party of three persons have been known to kill 1,500 of the pigeons within a few hours. Roblekes, tojoasa and guyaaros are souring and garfsh. The sierra, which weighs from forty to sixty pounds, is surreland garfsh.
