The Asthracite Situation. From the Coal Trade Journal. It is not doubted that the coal producer is in a more genial frame of unind at the beginning of this year than in some time. It is a coal-burning weather, and the best of its kind, so that no one who has coal to sell is worrying about the possibilities. We shall have an output of 3500 dono tons of anthracite this possibilities. We shall have an output of 3,500,000 tons of anthracite this month, and that, with what is in hand, will meet the requirements and put the business on a firm basis for the future. Prices do not advance in the general

Durstness on a lirm basis for the future. Prices do not advance in the general market, although the demand for pea and chestnut is such that some people are getting a goodly range of prices for these particular sizes. With anything like proper management of this indus-try during the coming year there ought to be somewhat better results for the owners of anthracite. We gather that there will be changes in the manage-ment, and that these will be in the line (conservation and therefore profit near, and that these will be in the line of conservatism, and, therefore, profit. If this anthracite trade is a limited one,
