Baltimore and Ohio.
From time to time articles appear in various papers about the so-called "Hill control" of Baltimore & Ohio, together with exhaustive details of various struggles which are supposed to be in progress between Mr. Hill and other people in the Baltimore & Ohio board. The plain facts of the matter are, first that Mr. Hill does not control Baltimore & Ohio, nor has he at any time expressed any desire or taken any steps in that direction; and second, that there has at no time been any difference of opinion between Mr. Hill and the Baltimore & Ohio people with regard to a selection of general manager, the selection of Mr. Underwood being satisfactory to everybody. Third, that Mr. Hill is not interested in Baltimore & Ohio, on the theory that he could be of great service to the property as an adviser, and to this end he, with some of his friends, purchased a substantial interest in the preferred stock of the company. This interest is nowhere near a controlling interest, but is still very large. It may be said without fear of contradiction, that there is entire harmony in Baltimore & Ohio circles from top to bottom.

RELIEF FROM PAIN.

Women Everywhere Express their Gratitude to Mrs. Pinkham.

Mrs. T. A. WALDEN, Gibson, Ga., writes: "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Before taking your medicine, life was a burden to me. I never saw a well day. At my monthly period I suffered untold misery, and a great deal of the time I was troubled with a severe pain in my side. Before finishing the first bottle of your Vegetable Compound I could tell it was doing me good. I continued its use, also used the Liver Pills and Sanative Wash, and have been greatly helped. I would like to have you use my letter for the benefit of others."

Mrs. FLORENCE A. WOLFE, 515 Mulberry St., Lancaster, Ohio, writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For two years I was troubled with what the local physicians told me was inflammation of the womb. Every month I suffered terribly. I had taken enough medicine from the doctors to cure anyone, but obtained relief for a short time only. At last I concluded to write to you in regard to my case, and can say that by following your advice I am now perfectly well."

Mrs. W. R. BATES, Mansfield, La., writes:

"Before writing to you, I suffered dreadfully from painful menstruation, leucorrhoea and sore feeling in the lower part of the bowels. Now my friends want to know what makes me look so well. I do not hesitate one minute in telling them what has brought about this great change. I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough. It is the greatest remedy of the age."

CENTURY OF EXPANSION

OUR COUNTRY'S GROWTH FROM 1798 TO 1898.

It Represents a Physical and Moral Advancement Without Parallel in the Annals of the World—From a Population of 5,000,000 to One of 85,000,000.

A comparison of the territorial area and the national influence of the United States with those of 1798 will show the vast material and moral advance which this country has made in 100 years. In the historical books 1798 does not figure with any prominence, but in reality it is an important landmark in the country's expansion. It was just a hundred years ago that the provisions of the treaty of peace with England in 1783 were fully and finally carried out. For fifteen years after that date the United States, in its endeavors to secure the boundaries guaranteed in that agreement, was obstructed by two nations, England and Spain. The British held possession of posts at Oswego, Niagara, Detroit and other places in United States territory on the northern frontier, until Jay's treaty, which, among other things, provided for their evacuation, went into operation in 1796, and even then the work of abandonment was carried on with a slowness which was exceedingly exasperating to the people of the United States.

With Spain, however, the United States had much more trouble in securing its treaty rights under the agreement of 1783 than it had with England. Then, as now, Spain was slow in grasping the justice of any demand by another nation, and in that particular crisis the situation for this country was rendered doubly embarrassing by the fact that Spain was still one of the great powers of the earth, while the United States was only an insignificant spot on the map and had no rights which any of the great nations felt bound to respect. Spain contended that the Florida region which she gained from England during the war of the American Revolution, and which extended west to the Mississippi, went as far north as the mouth of the Yazoo, about the parallel of thirty-two degrees north latitude, which would make the southerly line of the United States on the Mississippi end at that point.

Both England and the United States, on the other hand, insisted that this country's southern boundary went down to latitude thirty-one degrees. At last the protests and threats of the United States and Spain's dangers in Napoleonic wars then under way compelled the latter to accede to the American demands. Spain did this in the treaty of San Lorenzo in 1795, which was ratified by the Senate in 1796, but 1798 arrived before the Spanish flag went down in Natchez, the most important town in the territory in dispute, and the Stars and Stripes went up. Then fifteen years after the treaty of independence and just a hundred years ago, the title of the United States to all its territory between the Atlantic and the Mississippi and from the Great Lakes to the Florida line was definitely confirmed.

America's situation in 1898, materially and morally, makes a striking contrast with that of 1798. On the day when Gayoso's forces lowered their flag in Natchez and sailed down to New Orleans, the person who stepped below the southerly line of Georgia, into the lower end of what is now the State of Mississippi, or who crossed the Mississippi River, would be in a foreign land. We were surrounded on three sides by powerful nations. England was north of us as now, and Spain was south and west of us, as she held Florida, which comprised the present State of that name and a strip westward along the southerly line of what are now the States of Alabama and Mississippi to the Mississippi River, and she had all the region west of the river. The population of the country was about 5,000,000.

The Louisiana cession and all the other annexations were still in the distance. Nobody could have foreseen at that time that the narrow strip of populated area east of the Alleghenies, with the scarcely less diminutive stretch of wilderness between those mountains and the Mississippi, would ever reach the Gulf of Mexico and the Pacific. Much less could anybody have foreseen then that this country would annex all of Russian America, absorb all the islands of value in the Gulf of Mexico, and acquire possessions scattered through the Pacific extending almost to the continent of Asia. The growth of America from an area of 827,000 square miles and a population of 5,000,000 in 1798 to an area of 3,800,000 square miles and a population of 85,000,000 in 1898, attended as it has been by a rise from a position in which its enemy had no menace for even the feeblest of foreign States to one in which its friendship is sought by the most powerful nations of the earth, represents a physical and moral advancement without parallel in the annals of the world.

The President's Letters.

The President of the United States receives an average of 1700 letters a day. One-half of them ask favors of one kind or another. The other half offer advice on every subject under the sun, or express their approval or disapproval of executive acts and policy. Just now the question of expansion suggests the topic for most of the letters, and ninety-eight per cent. of them approve it.

INDIAN WITCHCRAFT IN ALASKA.

The Government Trying to Stamp Out the Practices of the Medicine Men.

The United States Court of Alaska, acting under instructions from Washington, is endeavoring to stamp out witchcraft, as practiced by the Indian tribes on the southeastern coast of the Territory. A number of Indians are at Juneau under arrest, and their cases are being considered by the Grand Jury that is now in session. These Indians are very superstitious, even more so than those of the interior. If the medicine man is unable to effect a cure in any case he pronounces the patient bewitched. The relatives of the sick Indian will accuse some of the tribe of being the "witch devil." The accused is confined until the fate of the patient is decided. In every case he is put to death if the sick man dies. The number of Indians killed as "witch devils" increased during the past year, and Governor Brady gave it prominence in his report.

Judge Johnson, in charging the Grand Jury, said: "You will be called upon to investigate a number of offenses peculiar to this Territory growing out of the belief in witchcraft prevalent among the native people. Many of the cruel murders among them may readily be traced to this belief, and it is your duty not to ignore, but to make patient inquiry and return true bills where the evidence so warrants, for the protection of these people. The stamp of the law's disapproval of all such practices must be emphatic."

Added Terror to War.

Reports have been published of experiments with the Canet quick-firing field gun, which is to be the new weapon of the French artillery and concerning which until quite recently the greatest secrecy was maintained. Judging from these reports, the effectiveness of the gun must be truly wonderful. Twenty-two shots per minute were fired at one official trial, and two hundred dummy soldiers placed at a distance of two and one-half miles by way of a target were bowled down in one minute and three-quarters. Simultaneously ordnance officers in England, putting a new field piece made for the British army through a test, were delighted by the almost incredible accuracy of the weapon. First a shot was fired without particular aim, and a telescope, having been focused on the point of impact of the shell, was fixed in that position. Each succeeding shell fired from the gun—and they were many—exploded within the field of the object glass of the telescope. Such are the pleasant diversions of nations which have officially accepted invitations to the Czar's peace-congress—and the most advanced nations at that.—Philadelphia Record.

Stuff the Regulars Are Made Of.

A volunteer who took part in the Santiago campaign relates the following incident as having occurred on July 1 at San Juan Hill:

One of our men who was killed that day was Private Brown. He was shot just as we reached the barbed-wire fence, but survived several hours in an unconscious state. He was a college lad from Cornell and a general favorite. Four of our men started to carry him up the incline to the crest of the hill. He was heavy and it was slow, hazardous work. To the left of our line were some men from the Sixteenth Regular Infantry. When the order came to retire one of the men, Private Morris, a musician, saw our men struggling up the incline with poor Brown. He did not know them or Brown. They were not of his regiment. But he stopped in that leaden hailstorm and helped. And, first of all, he had our men put Brown down while he wet his lips with water from his canteen.

That was the stuff the regulars were made of.

The Endurance of Africans.

Two cases notably illustrative of the African native's power of endurance are reported from the British Central Africa Protectorate. In each instance a man was dragged from his canoe by a crocodile, and had an arm bitten almost to a pulp. The men had to be taken long distances overland. On reaching Zomba each had the injured limb amputated and quickly reconnected. Dr. Douglas Gray, acting chief medical officer there, remarks further, in his report, upon the growing confidence of the native in the European medicines. Reports of cures—more especially in relation to surgery—spread rapidly amongst the natives, and the old cure—a fibrous band tied round a limb above the seat of disease—is, he says, fast losing its reputation.—London News.

Famous Dog Actors.

Of all the illustrious dogs which ever trod the boards, the most famous is Dragon, the property of Capt. Montfidiar in the French army. This gentleman was murdered in the Forest of Bundy by his friend, Lieut. Macaire, of the same regiment. After the crime Dragon showed such a strange aversion to Macaire that suspicion was aroused against him. In the end he confessed his crime, and his accomplice, Landry, in trying to escape, was seized by the faithful animal and bitten to death. This story has held the English stage, on and off, since the year of Waterloo, and it is only three decades since two "stars" named Lamb and Emmet, played in it with their trained dog Carlo at the Marylebone Theater, London. This animal was also the principal performer in a canine drama named "Poor Dog Tray." Eighty years ago there was a theater at Peckham, where a youth named John Baldwin Buckstone made his debut as the injured captain. There is a venerable theatrical legend which deals with a piece called "The Caravan Driver and His Dog." One evening the leading tragedian was taken ill, and the prompter rushed off to the manager to inform him that the play must be changed. "How you alarmed me," said the worthy man, ordering a glass of strong brandy and water to steady his nerves; "the tragedian unwell! I was afraid it was the dog."—New York Times.

Did Dr. Johnson Eat Horse?

Dr. Johnson in his journal mentions the interesting fact that he had on a certain day had "palfrey for dinner." Now these three words have caused not a little trouble to the critics, and for this reason, that they knew not what palfrey really is. It has been suggested that palfrey is a clerical error made by the doctor himself for pastry. But the doctor wrote so legibly, and there is so much difference between the words palfrey and pastry that this position is not at all tenable. Palfrey is defined in Johnson's celebrated dictionary as "a small horse fit for ladies," and some have thought that the doctor (whose feats as a trencherman were notorious) may have broken a record on the day in question, and disposed of a small horse. All these and other conjectures are wrong, and we will proceed to give the correct explanation.

The word palfrey (sometimes palfrey by the interchange of l and n) is still in use among the rustics of Scotland and the North of Ireland, and means young cabbages when they first come to table in the spring. Such cabbages have not begun to "close," or become solid in the centre. They are generally spoken of as "early palfrey," and are considered a luxury. Dr. Johnson probably picked up the word from his friend Boswell, or from some other Scotch acquaintance.—Notes and Queries.

A Great Every Season.

From nearly every section of the country come reports that game of all kinds has not been so plentiful for years as this season, and the large quantity of game that has already found its way to the city markets is prima facie evidence of the truth of these reports. And what has made game so abundant? First, the season has been especially favorable; second, better game laws prevail in nearly all of the States than in years gone by; third, the sportsmen of the country have been taught to respect the close seasons better than heretofore, and last, though by no means least, the game laws are being more strictly enforced, and those who ordinarily would pay little attention to the laws have been made to respect them. If these conditions continue to prevail, game will continue to increase, until it will be plentiful everywhere and the sportsman will have good shooting without traveling hundreds of miles and spending large sums of money to gratify his desire for a little pleasant recreation with dog and gun in forest and field. There is really no good reason why there should not be game enough for all if the men who hunt will only be moderate in their demands upon the supply and the laws are respected and thoroughly enforced everywhere.—American Field.

Equine Fasters.

Down at Nevada they are trying to determine how long a horse can live without food. A horse belonging to Ed. Lexton was by mistake left in a box stall at the fair grounds four weeks and lived. This was considered the limit, until last week Dr. Worth came in with the following story: "In 1868 I was living on the St. Clair and Hickory County line. On July 22 of that year a horse I had staked out with a lariat rope got away. He went into the woods and the rope fastened him to a hickory rack, where he remained with only eight feet of rope to play upon until August 27, just five weeks and one day, with nothing to eat except what hickory limbs he could reach, and no water except what rained in a hole which the horse had pawed in the ground."—Kansas City Journal.

The Force of Habit.

"I guess there's something the matter with my boy," said the father of one of the sixth gradation boys yesterday. "He got home about 11 o'clock Wednesday night and went to bed about midnight, and half an hour later when I went up to his room he was curled up on the floor. He had just pulled the clothes off the bed and crawled into them. I asked him about it and he said he never wanted to sleep on a bed again. Said he had a bed in San Francisco, but it was too soft for comfort."—Albany Argus.

IRON GRAVEYARDS IN VENEZUELA.

Proposals Asked in This Country to Build One That Will Hold 25,000 Bodies.

The iron manufacturers of Pennsylvania have been asked through the medium of the National Association of Manufacturers to submit proposals to the Government of Venezuela for an iron graveyard in which to reinter 25,000 bodies. The proposal is novel with iron industries of this State, although there are a few iron cemeteries in Southern cities.

The graveyards, particularly in Caracas, heretofore have been built of stone, but these have proved unsatisfactory. They were not waterproof. They could not be made so; at least the skill of the average Venezuelan failed in this direction. When the Venezuelans came to look into the wonders on display in the Manufacturers' Association's sample warehouse at Caracas they decided that American ingenuity would solve the problem of the proper care of the dead. The water persisted in percolating through the rock barriers. These were as costly as they were insufficient.

The Venezuelans have become tired of building stone graveyards. They have been erected at great expense of marble and granite, and it is believed that iron will answer every purpose. But it must be made waterproof, and Mr. Nagle, of the Manufacturers' Association, says he has no doubt that Pennsylvania mechanics could furnish a structure that would answer every purpose.

IVORY SOAP PASTE.

In fifteen minutes' time, with only a cake of Ivory Soap and water, you can make in your own kitchen, a better cleansing paste than you can buy.

Ivory Soap Paste will take spots from clothing; and will clean carpets, rugs, kid gloves, slippers, patent, enamel, russet leather and canvas shoes, leather belts, painted wood-work and furniture. The special value of Ivory Soap in this form arises from the fact that it can be used with a damp sponge or cloth to cleanse many articles that cannot be washed because they will not stand the free application of water.

DIRECTIONS FOR MAKING.—To one pint of boiling water add one and one-half ounces of Ivory Soap cut into shavings, boil five minutes after the Soap is thoroughly dissolved. Remove from the fire, and cool in convenient dishes (not tin.) It will keep well in an air-tight glass jar.

Life in the Levant.

The Oriental official chuckled gleefully. The iron boot had been placed on the foot of the victim, and the royal minions were screwing it tighter and tighter to force a confession from his lips. "Aha!" merrily laughed the official. "Dost thee not feel almost persuaded to confess that thou wert in a conspiracy to poison the water of the Golden Horn, with the contents of the vial which my faithful officers found in thy pocket? By the beard of the prophet! Screw tighter, men, for he seems to be enjoying the whole affair!" "Why, you doddering old fellow!" cheerfully replied the victim, "that vial had corn cure in it; and as for your old fashioned iron boot here, why, let me tell you that I lived in America, when the styles of shoes changed from broad toes to pointed.
