Logsing with Automobiles.

In its logsing operations this winter the H. C. Akeley Lumber company is using a new power for hauling logs. The Mississippi Valley Lumberman says that F. S. Farr has designed and constructed a log-hauling macnine, which consists of a boiler and engine mounted on an ordinary sled. The propulsion is by means of four heavy calked wheels, two forward and two back, which run in about the same tracks as horses would. The runners of the sled run in the ice ruts of the logging road, and the calked wheels are so arranged that they rise of fall to accommodate themselves to unevan places in the road. This engine is made to do the work of four teams, as it will haul four loaded sleds of logs. The machine is roughly gotten up this year, but Mr. Farr believes he has the correct idea, and will improve on it for the next season in the woods.—Minneapolis Journal.

WOMAN'S DEVOTION TO HOME

MRS. ISABELL BRADFIELD, tells in the following letter how she fought with disease of the feminine organs until finally forced to take to her bed, She says:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I feel it my duty to write to you to tell you that I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and think there is no medicine in the world like it. I suffered for nine years, and sometimes for twelve weeks at a time I could not stand on my feet. I had female troubles of all kinds; backache, and headache all the time. Seven different doctors treated me. Some said I would have to go to the hospital and have an operation performed. But oh! how thankful I am that I did not, that I tried your Vegetable Compound instead. I cannot say too much in its praise, nor thank you enough for what it has done for me. I want you to publish this in all the papers for the good of other sufferers."

The wives and mothers of America are given to overwork. Let them be wise in time and at the first indication of female trouble write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for her advice. This advice is promptly given without charge.

The present Mrs. Pinkham's experience in treating female ills is unparalleled; for years she worked side by side with Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, and for sometime past has had sole charge of the correspondence department of her great business, advising and helping by letter as many as a hundred thousand ailing women during a single year.

MAN-EATING LIONS.

MAN-EATING LIONS.

They Catch Human Beings Because It is Less Trouble.

When lions become man-eaters, these inert and treacherous brutes take no unnecessary trcuble to catch men, and while human beings are plentiful, none of them undertake perilous enterprises or proceed on any haphazard expeditions. They know what to do and where to go in order that prey may be procured with the least amount of risk or exertion. Such a lion is well aware of who tills this cornfield or that mealie patch. He has informed himself of how many men accompany the village herds, where any outlying camps are situated, and how they are guarded. There is no route by which travelers proceed or traffic is carried on, that such animals have not studied with reference to the facilities of attack they afford and their own bodily powers. If otherwise good strategic positions present natural difficulties, the lion not only considers how there can be overcome, but, perhaps, practices his part beforehand. At all events, he has been watched while engaged in exercises that can only be explained in this way.

So puny a creature as man is, when unprovided with effective implements for offence, stands little chance against such a foe—an assailant having forty times his own strength, backed by marvelous activity and an intense passion for carnage. Under these circumstances savages can only shut themselves up, or assault their enemy in large masses. On the other hand, those precautions taken by a murderous lion might not seem to comport with that bold and often reckless temper attributed to this species. But such a discrepancy has no real existence; it only appears when a judgment is made without taking all the facts into consideration. This animal's intelligence, developed in man-eaters to its highest point, together with an organic stealthiness of nature and proclivity toward unexpected attacks and strategems, fully account for everything a lion does in the way of guarding against failure."—Dr. Porter, in Outing.

The Earliest Record of Golf.

The earliest representation of authentic golf yet discovered is the Flemish miniature (1500-1510) reproduced in the Illustrated London News of June 9, 1894, and described by Mr. Mayhew. The "course" is a field surrounded by palings. There are three players, each having only one club. One player has teed and is "addressing" his ball, but from his "stayed" grip and the look of his club he does not seem to be meditating a full drive. One of the other players is "holding out." The attitude of the latter may be recommended to the notice of a distinguished golfer and author, whose grip of the putter seems to get lower and lower, becoming more and more deadly as it descends. Etymological speculation is as unsafe as it is fascinating, but it may be of significance that the Dutch word for hole is "put," from which one is tempted to derive our word "putt," which used to be pronounced "poot."—Harper's Weekly.

"Either things have changed since I was a girl," said an elderly woman, "or men and women sew differently. I know I was taught to sew most carefully, and the one thing that was impressed upon my mind was that I must take short needlefuls of thread. That was to save time and energy, and the thread was in better condition to put into the work when it had not been drawn through so many times. But the other day I happened to see the men sewing at a ladies' tailor's where they make the most beautiful gowns, and such needlefuls of thread and silk as I saw! A big man with a long arm in taking a stitch would pull out his thread as far as he could reach, and that must have been at least a yard. I suppose that man knows how to make gowns, but he wasn't taught to sew up in New England in my day."

WILD GAME GETTING SCARCE

Bears, Bears, Deer and Chamols Have Been Exterminated.

Switzerland will soon be entirely free of wild animals if the rate of extinction that has prevailed of late is maintained. In the official archives of Zurich are records of the various kinds of beasts that once existed in the land of the Red Cross, Evidences of beaver life have been found on the shores of Lake Morat, the bones and skeletons being fully six centuries old. One of the tributary streams which feed the lake is called Beaver Brook, the title being due to its former inhabitants. That the name is old is shown by the fact that no beavers have lived in Switzerland since the twelfth or thirteenth century. Brown bears were plentiful in the mountain lands until the seventeenth century. The last one killed of which there is any official knowledge came to his end in 1693 in Barbereche. Nowadays the bears are raised in Berne for various show purposes. Deer were more than plentiful in the highlands in olden times, but they were cleaned out pretty well in 1748 to 1750. There is a record in the Swiss archives that a deer was seen in the woods in 1871, but it was apparently far from its own stamping ground. Up to the seventeenth century wolves were such plagues that several cantons offered substantial premiums for their heads and skins. It took ages to chase them off the plains, and fully 100 years more to clean them out of the highlands. Not a live wolf has been in Switzerland since 1837. The 1ynx disappeared about the same time. Wild boars were numerous in the fitteenth and sixteenth centuries, but none has been encountered since 1880. A few wild-cats are reported to have been shot since 1831, but the authorities doubt the authenticity of the reports. No less than seven prominent kinds of quadrupeds have been exterminated in Switzerland in five centuries, not to mention the world-famouus wild goats or chamols. A few of the beautiful animals are raised and kept by the landlords of some of the leading resorts to maintain the impression that chamois are part a Chinese Arrogance.

It is not realized in England how proud, indeed arrogant, the Chinese are. The idea that any other race is equal to their own is one that cannot find place in their brains. They believe all foreigners to be a sort of savages. They look at European men and women mixing together, and believe that these savages have no morals, but live in a rough sort of promiscuity. They look at our dress, our men with short coats and nether garments showing their two-legged forms, our women actually indicating their walsts and much of the outline of their figure, and they believe we are without decency. They do not see us observing their ceremonial, and they believe we are without decency. They do not see us observing their ceremonial, and they believe we are without manners. A recent minister, accredited to Germany, was talking to Sir Robert Hart before leaving Peking, and upon the latter's regretting his lonely condition without his wife, said to him: "Ah, but, of course, you have a number two." Sir Robert proceeded to explain that such a course was impossible to him, as it would make his wife very angry, and, indeed, arouse the sovereign displeasure of his queen. The Chinese diplomatist patted him good-humoredly on the shoulder, saving: "Let us hope by longer intercourse with us you may become more civilized."—Correspondence St. James' Gazette.
