Everyone is looking forward to a lively session of congress next winter for Republicans as well as Democrats expected to fire hot shot into the administration for the policy pursued in the Philippines. Senators Hoar, Wellington and Mason, all Republicans, are known to be outspoken in their opposition to the president in this and their ranks are being added to

The election of a president arouse enthusiasm everywhere, but the result to the individual is not worthy of com parison with the result of a local elec-tion. On Saturday there will be a local election in Freeland. The result to every citizen of the borough is of sufficient importance to demand his presence at the polls and the casting of a ballot for or against the advancement on Saturday, then the result would show whether or not Freeland is deserving of the reputation for progressiveness that

If the administration follows its pres If the administration follows its present method of showing its confidence in General Otis to its logical conclusion, there will be a new commander in the Philippines before the fighting campaign opens. It began to show its confidence in General Otis, who had continually declared that 30,000 men were all he needed, by issuing the necessary orders to make the full strength of the army in the Philippines

There is a paragraph in an official report just received by Surgeon General Sternberg from Major John R. Hoff, chief surgeon of the military district of Porto Rico, which is not calculated to make new shouters for imperialism among the thoughtful. In considering this very serious matter, it should not be forgotten that Porto Rico is the healthiest of our new island possessions. The paragraph is too polan-spoken to be quoted in the Trinune. Suffice it to say that in it Major Hoff speaks of the alarming prevalence of private diseases among our soldiers over there and says indications are that it will not be long before a large percentage of them will be as thoroughly infected as the native population. He also points out the danger of returning soldiers spreading the contamination at their homes, a danger which Great Britain has found to be of the gravest proportions in here experience with her tropical possessions. Something like this has been said before, but it was shooted down as the talk of an alarmist. It begins to look as though the man who said, "the less desire you have to live there," was about right.

Bryan and favors him for the nomination in 1900. In regard to the war in the Philippines, the platform has the following to say:

If war against Spain was right, and it was, that against the natives of the Philippines, who have committed no offense save to love liberty and to be willings to fight and die for it, is wrong. The attempt, unauthorized by congress, to conquer the natives of Oriental Islands is a repudiation of the American doctrine of consent affirmed in the Declaration of Independence, and in conflict with the principal which George Washington and his fellow-patriots of the revolution made sacrifices to establish.

-Lion Flesh Said to Be Good Eating.

It was Punch who pathetically complained of the monotony of eternal beef and mutton, and prayed for the invention of a new meat. Indeed, the English bill of fare is an exceedingly limited one, and many besides Punch have sometimes wished that a new meat could be invented. But we do not take advantage of all the dainties which nature offers; it is not necessary to invent a new meat, but simply to acquire courage to taste and cat hitherto uneaten animals, birds and reperto uneaten animals, birds and repertouneaten animals, birds animals, birds and repertouneaten animals, bi uneaten animals, birds and rep erto uneaten animals, birds and reptiles.

The cow, sheep, pig, various fowls,
game and fish furnish all the Items
of the various bills of fare; indeed the food of the vast majority of the people
simply consists of beef and mytton,
with occasional changes to pork and fish. There are, however, many other animals which, prejudice apart, would furnish just as nourishing ard tasty and more novel food. Horse flesh is regarded with popular horror, but the dislike is one simply founded on prejudice. No doubt the flesh of old, wornout nags is neither very panatabe or and more novel food. Horse, flesh is regarded with popular horror, but the dislike is one simply founded on prejudice. No doubt the flesh of old, wornout nags is neither very paintable or nourishing. But a horse which from its birth is intended for food, and fed and cared for like an ox, supplies excellent meat. It is much finer in flavor than beef or mutton, and much more expensive. In Paris the restaurants include horse beef in their daily menus. In England it is sometimes served at great feasts as a novelty, and 10 shillings a pound is the usual price paid for it. Similarly, donkey flesh is very good earing, provided it is young. A donkey more than eight mouths old is not edible. In taste it is said to "nuch resemble a turkey though very much finer in flavor. Two shillings a pound is the price for donkey ment, but a big demand would, of course, reduce this to a reasonable figure; the same remark applies to horse-flesh. In Arabia the horse is caten and considered a great delicacy.

Custom and prejudice alone prevent many really tasty and common animals helpig used for food. Of all animals the pig, with its filthy, groveling habits and food, seems the toost unlikely to be appreciated by human beings. Yet the pig, whose name is a synonym for all that is low and bestial, is eaten without repugnance—nay, with relish. Charles Lamb wrote a prose epic in praise of roast pork. A dainty lady will eat and enjoy roast pork, but she would scream rud shudder at the very idea of eating a roast rat. Yet the rat is a vegetarian, and most cleanly in its habits, while no-body can claim that for the pig, Rat pie is a great delicacy, and was a dish of which the Rev. J. G. Wood, the celebrated naturalist, was extremely fond.

During the slege of Parus, in 1871, the starving inhabitants ate up all the animals in the zoo. Elephant and lion steaks and the flesh of other will animals were enten, and, though it was a case of Hobson's choice—that or none at all—the Parislans found that they were very palatable. Even now the gear of a c bit of the beast, and when plump and fat is a dainty indeed.

In the South of France snakes are sold, ready for cooking, under the name of hedge cels. Frank Buckland, the famous naturalist, stated that he once made a hearty neal off a boa constrictor, its flesh being exceedingly white and firm, and not unlike veal in taste. Fried or stewed rattle-snake is very like cel, which people cat without a qualm of stomach or conscience. Lion flesh is said to be very good eating, but tiger is tough and sinewy. Nevertheless, the latter is eaten in Indiana, as there is a superstition that it imparts strength and cunning to the eater. Bear's flesh is a great favorite in Germany, and smoked tongues and hams are considered great delicacies. On account of the rarity of bruin, they are expensive. Snasge—so dear to the Teutonic heart—and stomach—is also made with bear liver; 25 pounds of sausage can be made from a single liver.

of sausage can be made from a single liver.

There appears to be considerable diversity of opinion as to the merits of elephant's flesh. In India and Africa it is a favorite dish with the natives, but a European who has traveled much in Africa says: "I nave tasted elephant over and over again. It is more like soft leather and glue than anything else I can compare it to." Another traveler, however, declares that he cannot imagine how an animal so coarse and heavy can produce such delicate and tender flesh. All authorities, however, agree in commending elephant's foot. Even the traveler quoted above, who compared elephant's for a king. When an elephant is shot in Africa the flesh is cut into strips and dried; it is then called "biltong." The elephant's foot is a dish fit for a king. When an elephant is shot in Africa the flesh is cut into strips and dried; it is then called "biltong." The elephant's foot is cut off from the knee joint, and a hole about strips and dried; it is then called "bittong." The elephant's foot is cut off from the knee Join, and a hole about three feet deep is dng in the earth, with the sides of it baked hard with burning wood. Most of these fagots are then removed, and the elephant's foot placed in the hole. It is filled up with earth, tightly packed down, and a blazing fire built on top, which is kept burning for three hours. Thus cooked, the flesh is like a Jelly, and can be eaten with a spoon. It is the greatest delicacy which can be given to a Kaffir.
