HAS TICKED FIVE CENTURIES
Famous Old Clock in Rouen Has Kept Time for 510 Years.

From the Cincinnati Enquirer: Rouen, one of the principal cities of France, and the greatest seat of its cotton manufacture, possesses the oldest public clock in the world. The great Rouen clock has held its place in that city for 510 years and is the pride of its citizens. Placed in 1389, it has been running without interruption from that day to this, requiring nothing except cleaning and a few trifling repairs of its accessory parts. The great clock has so accustomed the citizens to look upon its exactitude as a matter of course that when, in 1572, the breaking of a wire prevented its sounding 5 o'clock one morning, the population was in a state of consternation. The magistrates summoned the custodian—Guillaume Petit—and remonstrated gravely with him. Until 1712 the great clock had no pendulum. For 323 years it had no other regulator than a "foliot," an apparatus unknown to the majority of modern clock makers. The pendulum in clock work was introduced in 1659, but so well satisfied were the people of Rouen with the time keeping qualities of their famous old clock that fifty-three years were allowed to pass before a pendulum was substituted for the "foliot." Equipped with this new apparatus it has continued to this day to strike the hours and chime the quarters.

How a Sea Gull Catches a Mole.
A farm manager at Fodderty, Dingwall, Scotland, watching a mole catcher at work, saw sea gulls hovering over, and occasionally alighting upon a turnip field, in which the observer and others were at work. A particularly large and handsome bird attracted his attention by the graceful way in which it floated slowly over the drills, intently scanning the surface of the ground. Suddenly, steadying itself a moment, it dropped, dug its bill into the ground, and rose with a mole for its prey. Resting a few minutes, it gracefully began again a further search for prey. In a few minutes a second mole was unearthed.

Mrs. Barnard Thanks MRS. PINKHAM FOR HEALTH.

[LETTER TO MRS. PINKHAM NO. 15,924]
"DEAR FRIEND—I feel it my duty to express my gratitude and thanks to you for what your medicine has done for me. I was very miserable and losing flesh very fast, had bladder trouble, fluttering pains about the heart and would get so dizzy and suffered with painful menstruation. I was reading in a paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I wrote to you and after taking two bottles I felt like a new person. Your Vegetable Compound has entirely cured me and I cannot praise it enough."—Mrs. J. O. BARNARD, MILLTOWN, WASHINGTON CO., MAINE.

An Iowa Woman's Convincing Statement.
"I tried three doctors, and the last one erid nothing but an operation would help me. My trouble was profuse flowing; sometimes I would think I would flow to death. I was so weak that the least work would tire me. Reading of so many being cured by your medicine, I made up my mind to write to you for advice, and I am so glad that I did. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills and followed your directions, and am now well and strong. I shall recommend your medicine to all, for it saved my life."—Miss A. P., Box 21 ABBOTT, IOWA.

COURTING IN PORTO RICO.

LOVE-SICK AMERICANS FIND IT HEDGED WITH DIFFICULTIES.

Young Women Always Guarded by Chaperons by Day and by Night—After the Engagement—Preparations for Marriage—Queer Wedding Customs.

It is next to impossible for a marriage engagement without the concurrence of the elders of the family to be contracted in Porto Rico. The constant surveillance maintained over the girls of the household and their continued subjection to parental authority, even after reaching years of maturity, is a successful barrier to anything sensational in contracting a life partnership. No association is tolerated that may lead to a mesalliance, and few opportunities are afforded to create an attachment without the full knowledge and consent of the heads of the family. The only occasions upon which this may happen are the larger social gatherings, such as Mardi Gras balls and dances at the Casinos Espanol, which occur several times a year.

Young women are always surrounded with a suitable guard of chaperons by day and night. After reaching a place of social rendezvous the young folk are allowed some liberty to promenade, dance and chat together while those charged with guardianship sit near and take note of the proprieties. The attention of an inamorato to the object of his devotions must not be too ardent nor too continuous, he must not dance with her more than twice, nor hover near long enough to excite comment, which is prone to be prompt and free.

Under these conditions the susceptible young American who succumbs to the winking glance of a sweet, soft eyed senorita finds the paths of love anything but flower strewn. It requires heroic measures to break through the human walls of bristling dunnas and scowling matrons that guard the approaches to her shy young heart.

After an engagement is announced the conditions are changed. Henceforth they can dance only with each other. For centuries it has been decreed to be a flagrant breach of propriety for an affianced or married woman to step through the mazes of the dance with any other than her fiancé or husband. However, the chaperone continues until marriage. Courtship must be conducted under the parental eye, members of the household remaining in the room during the visits of men, and rarely can the sweet, loving nothings be breathed without reaching other ears than those for which they are intended. Sometimes the Argus watchfulness is relaxed for a few moments, which are imagined, but are liable to be broken into unexpectedly and frequently by the scrupulous and anxiously responsible parent or matron in charge.

In the preparations for marriage the bridegroom is expected to provide a home according to his means, more or less completely equipped with household linen and all necessities for housekeeping. This in virtue of the sentiment that the bride must bring to him nothing but herself and her trousseau. In this country of fine needlework this trousseau is something remarkable in variety and execution, often of such daintiness that many American brides might envy them.

Porto Rican brides do not waste much time or money upon many street gowns or those for public display. It is to please the eye of the husband alone that all the arts of construction are expended in house gowns, lingerie and negligees. A popular model is a cambric princess, the front a mass of lace and drawn work round neck and gossamer tight fitting or flowing angel sleeves. A number of these enter into the outfit, each a marvel of exquisite work, according to the purse or deftness of fingers of the bride.

A fashionable time for the marriage ceremony is from midnight up to two o'clock in the morning. The bridegroom, with his immediate relatives and friends, proceeds to the home of the bride, and from there a wedding procession is formed to the church. Carriages are rarely used, the party, if living in town, making the short journey on foot, the bride walking with her godfather, the bridegroom with his godmother. The ceremony over, they return to the bride's home, whereupon she lifts the veil from her head and throws it over that of her nearest girl friend, who cuts it into bits and distributes it among the unmarried guests.

The bride then strips to pieces the orange blossoms of her crown, and also those which deck her gown more or less elaborately, according to the number of her guests, and a spray is presented to each. The fun then grows lively over counting the blossoms, those full blown signifying years, the half blown months and the buds days which will intervene before the recipient's marriage.

The bride then retires to make a change in another special feature of her array, the bridal garters, which are elegant affairs, ornamented with white satin rosettes and orange blossoms and suspended from the waist by strands of white ribbon. Each garter is enclosed in a pretty box and presented to her most intimate girl friend, and distributed among the other guests. Then, simply attired in the wedding gown, sometimes even this laid aside for another, the bride and bridegroom lead the dance, and the festivities take the form of those usual to such occasions.

Refreshments are served, never omitting chocolate, which from the time immemorial has been the nuptial beverage, so generally recognized that when a friend wishes to ask the date of a marriage the question takes the form of "When will chocolate be served?"

After several hours of gayety the bridegroom takes his bride to their new home, and they begin a life of domesticity. They continue to be seen occasionally in society, but generally chaperoning some young friends, or chatting with their contemporaries, or quietly and contentedly moving through the dance, always, invariably, with each other.—New York Herald.

FRESH TRADE DEVELOPMENTS.

United States Consul Dudley, writing from Vancouver about the deposits of platinum, osmium and associated metals in British Columbia, says that a leading mining engineer told him that these substances were usually found in all places that yield gold. He believes that much platinum is thrown away by the miners without realizing its value. Search is now beginning to be made in the river beds and gravels.

Special inquiry having been made of the State Department in regard to the duty on druggists' scales in foreign countries, a report has been received from France saying that as such articles are considered as "instruments of precision" no duty is demanded. Germany taxes them, and bases the rate on the material used in making them and the degree of finish and polish imparted.

On the other side of the Atlantic the riveter, which operates by percussion, delivering a series of blows with a hammer as by hand, has almost entirely replaced that one which merely squeezes the rivet. In this country, however, the former device has been used only in an experimental way.

In the judgment of the Cotton and Wool Reporter, the most important advances in the department of dyeing of late are the improvement of artificial indigo and the production of caustic soda and bleaching powder more cheaply by electrolysis than by older methods.

The great novelty in cut glass this season is said to be a cameo like product made in alternate layers of transparent and translucent glass. The pattern is cut through from one layer to the other in such a manner as to give the effect of a cameo.

A Great Enterprise.
A worthy American citizen, having made a fortune, fared forth to see the world. European business ways and habits thoroughly disgusted this nervously keen expert in money-making, and he poured forth his scorn to some friends he met in Paris. One of them, knowing the ignorance of the old gentleman on subjects without the circle in which he had lived, ventured on a joke.

"I agree with you," he said, "I agree with you thoroughly. Why, do you know, sir, I was last week in a city of one hundred and twenty-five thousand inhabitants—and I was overcome, sir—overcome to find they hadn't a livable stable in the city."

"No, you don't tell me!" answered the victim. "Gentlemen, see there! Just consider that!" Then, jumping to his feet, as the though struck him: "Why, gentlemen, a fortune's awaiting some one there! Where's the place? What's the name of it?"

"Venice," said the joker.

"Good! I'm tired of this place anyway. I'll go right down there tomorrow, and put a little horse-sense into the town. Gentlemen, you're in this good thing with me, if you choose."

They were all in it, and they invested their friend with powers plenary, and the story has no dramatic point, save that it is a historic fact that Venice was visited. No one ever heard an account of that visit, but for long afterward no participant in the joke could get within hailing-distance of the self-appointed pioneer of American enterprise.—Harper's Round Table.

Speed in Marching.
Among the various qualities that go to make an army powerful and efficient, the speed of the foot soldier must evidently be one of the most important. If he be slow of movement he becomes the target of a mors active foe, even though armed with more efficient weapons. The speed of any body of men must be the speed of the slowest of their number, and the force that can uniformly depend in traveling even a little faster than the enemy has a material advantage. No English regiments have ever been scientifically trained to accomplish the feats of long and rapid marching, of which there are authentic records in two or three European armies. There can be no doubt that one of the chief factors in the success of Sir Herbert Kitchener's brilliant campaign has been the excellent marching of the troops. Any experiments, therefore, that are being made for a definite increase in the speed to which the soldier can be trained are worthy of study.—Contemporary Review.

What Golf Form Is.
"Form" is everything in golf, as it was thought to be in rowing and other athletic sports, until the youngsters came forward who utterly without form and merely by pluck and skill won the laurels from the brows of those who had so long worn them. Whether or not form is all essential in the modern game of golf will probably long remain an open question. Whether it is right or wrong, with professionals form is the whole thing. By this is meant not the appearance of a player to the eye of the ordinary spectator, but the correctness of his swing and that particular attitude of his body when playing which experience has demonstrated to be the proper attitude and the proper swing for getting out of the game all there is in it.—The Pathfinder.

ORIGIN OF THE TERM CADDIE.

Ingenuous Explanation of Common Golf Term by Frank Boyd.

To some, at least, of the unnumbered and innumerable host of golfers the question may have occurred at one time or another—Whence came the word "caddie"? Frank Boyd, in his "Omitted Chapters in the History of Monifeth," which he contributes to "The Book of Monifeth Golf Links Bazaar," offers an ingenious as well as highly amusing explanation of the term. There, he says, a Culdee, or "Keledei," establishment at Monifeth at one time, till the monks of Arbroath dispossessed the Culdees of their lands and made them their servants. One day it occurred to a monk, while having a game of golf, to make the Keledei carry his clubs. He found this contributed greatly to his comfort. "The plan was adopted by the rest of the monks, and henceforth they never went out without being accompanied by their Keledei. Now you know," continues Mr. Boyd, "that in these parts the practice is to cut short words in which the letter 'T' is used. A native, for instance, never says 'Balgray,' it is always 'Baigrie.' Thus it was natural that in the course of time the 'T' should drop out of the 'Keledei,' and it should come to sound like 'caydee,' and to this day this is how the word is pronounced by superfluous Scotch youths. In the strong Forfarshire vernacular it was, however, broadened out to 'caddie.' As a matter of fact, the origin of the term 'caddie' does not appear to have ever been satisfactorily explained. Jamieson, who defines caddie as one who earns a livelihood by running errands, delivering messages, and so on, expresses the opinion that the term was originally the same with the French cadet, which, as he remarks, is sometimes used to denote a young person in general. Dr. Murray, in his colossal work, holds the same view, but how the word came to be employed to denote the lad who carries a player's golf clubs has still to be elucidated.—Literature.

WISHIN'

What's the use a wishin',
A-wishin' every day;
A-wishin' every minute
Never golden time away?
Some folks are born a-wishin',
An' wish until they die;
An' die a-wishin', wishin'
They led another try.

What's the use a wishin',
A-wishin' any day?
If you are goin' for it
Yew'll git it no way.
So don't be wishin', wishin',
It won't do any good;
When I could stop a-wishin',
I really wish I could!

Young Playwright—What did you think of my climax? Critic—It was very welcome.

"Yes, poor Mrs. Gabber died an unexpectably hard death." "What killed her?" "Lock aw."

"How old are you, little girl?" asked the kind lady of a three-year-old. "I'm not old at all," was the reply. "It's most new."

"Won't it be delightful when we all have flying machines?" "I don't know about that; of course our creditors will all have them, too."

"Look how the bookkeeper is smiling!" "Has his salary been raised?" "No; the stenographer is letting him brag on his home-grown tomatoes."

"You don't seem to have much to say about domestic affairs." "You are mistaken, sir. I have a good deal to say, but I never get a chance to say it."

"The landlady says coffee still keeps up." "Well, I don't see how the coffee we get can keep up. It's so weak I should think it would go to bed."

"Is the cashier out?" he asked, as he looked around. "No," replied the president, as he glanced up at an examination of the books, "the cashier is not out; it's the bank that's out."

Miss Antique—"No, I'm not going to Mrs. Whitehair's reception." Miss Budd—"Why not?" "Oh, she always talks about old times, and that makes me tired; I don't see how you can stand her." "But, my dear, her subject is new to most of us, you know."

A little girl, who was trying to tile a friend who had been unkind to her grandpa was, said: "He walks around, thinking about nothing; and when he remembers it, he then forgets that what he thought of was something entirely different from what he wanted to remember."

A paper published in Paris recently contained the following unique advertisement: "A young man of agreeable presence, and desirous of getting married, would like to make the acquaintance of an aged and experienced gentleman who could dissuade him from taking that fatal step."

A young Scotch volunteer was waiting at a railway station one windy day, and the wind was blowing round his legs, which were quite like and very thin. An archer with a big bulldog was trying to keep it still. The volunteer looked very scared when the archer cried out, "I say, gawn, you'd better move away, because my dog thinks they're bones!"

"He Lighted a Match."
The halls of many tenements are dark. There should, under the law, be a light burning, but it is one of the rarest things to find one, says Jacob A. Riis in the Atlantic: The thing seems well high impossible of accomplishment.

We had a curious instance at one time of the difficulties that sometimes beset reform. Certain halls that were known to be dark were reported sufficiently lighted by the policeman of the district, and it was discovered that it was his standard that was vitiated. He lived in a tenement himself, and was used to his gloom. So an order was issued, defining darkness to the sanitary police. If the sink in the hall could be made out, and the steps overflowing on the floor, and if a baby could be seen on the stairs, the hall was light; if, on the other hand, its shrieks were the first warning that it was being tramped upon, the hall was dark. Some days later the old question arose about an Eldridge street tenement. The policeman had reported the hall light enough. The president of the board of health, to settle it once for all, went over with me to see for himself. The hall was very dark. He sent for the policeman.

"Did you see the sink in that hall?" he asked.

The policeman said he did.

"But it is pitch dark. How did you see it?"

"I lighted a match," said the policeman.

Was Born a Colonel.

One was from Kentucky, and, of course, a colonel, and the other had served in the northern army during the civil war. The had been discussing with rising heat the conduct of the Philippian campaign, when some remark of the colonel's raised the northerner's ire and he said:

"What do you know about military matters, anyway?"

"I am a colonel," replied the Kentuckian, with dignity.

"I don't see what that's got to do with it," rejoined the northerner; "you were born a colonel."

And then for five minutes their mutual friends were extremely busy trying to pry them apart.—New York Tribune.

THE LAUNDRY CLASS.

In many of the schools of Domestic Science, Laundry work is now taught in a thorough and scientific manner. In the Laundry class-room Ivory Soap is always used to wash the articles that require special care and it is frequently used to the exclusion of all other soaps.

It is as important to know the best materials for domestic use as to know the best methods for using them, and Ivory Soap is very generally recognized, by those who have carefully investigated the subject, as the safest and purest soap.

Spanish Cave Dwellers of To-day.
We commonly refer to the cave dwellers to pre-historic times, but there are still some of these people in parts of Europe that are considered civilized. Their primitive dwellings are, in some cases, natural caves, and in others have been hewn out of the rocks. Some of these homes in Spain are described by a writer. He says: "There is no need of an alarm house in Alcala. One side of the hill, above the town is honey-combed with caves, which are used by the poor as dwellings, free of rent and taxes. These caves run in tiers, with paths between them, and before each is a garden in which grow the prickly pear, fig, vilas, maize and vegetables. The combination of rock and foliage gives the whole hillside that singular appearance of rocky fertility seen only in southern lands, and particularly in the presence of cactus growth. The people seemed quite as comfortably situated as many who lived in houses, and in general appearance the aims house hill of Alcala was more attractive than the gipsy quarter of Granada. Doubtless these caves have the advantage over ordinary houses of being warmer in winter and cooler in summer."
