DRIFTING BOTTLES. Valuable Information as to the Ocean Currents.

Give Valuable Information as to the Ocean Currents.

Washington Spec. Baltimore Sun: Some "aluable information respecting ocean currents has been obtained by the Naval Hydrographic office through floating bottles thrown overboard by steamers and recovered by passing ships, which report the exact points at which they were found. Frequently the bottles are picked up and again tossed overboard after the latitude and longitude and the number of the bottle have been noted, so that the office in Washington may know the direction taken by the bottle since put into the sea or last sighted by some vessel. In this way the direction accurately estimated. There are some recent returns which show that bottles have floated thousands of miles and one has a record of covering 2,400 miles in 92 days. This bottle was tossed overboard from the steamship Furst Bismarck on May 1, 1898, shout 55 miles southeast of Cape Race, and recovered on August 1 in the vicinity of Gluck stadt, on the Elbe. The distance between the two points, following the route through the English Channel, is about 2,400 miles, giving 26 miles as the lowest possible estimate of the daily average velocity with which the bottle traveled castward. The longest distance made by any bottle was one thrown from the steamship Electrician, which covered 6,300 miles in 18 little over three years, on a average of 15.3 knots a day. In Glasgow a $75 householder ob-tains for $1.42 per annum a continuous never failing, unrestricted stream of the purest water in the world delivered never failing, unrestricted stream of the purest water in the world delivered right into his kitchen, wash-house and bath-room. It is calculated that 350 gallons of pure water are delivered to the citizens of Glasgow for every penny paid. And it is water of such peculiar softness that the householders of Glasgow can pay their water rate out of what they save on soap. Loch Katrine water is not only soft—it is remarkably bright, clear and free from vegetable matter because of the bare and precipitous character of the hills which drain into the loch. It is uniform in color, temperature and quaity, is absolutely free from pollution, and must remain so because the corporation have now bought up the building rights of the whole drainage area; it needs no filtration and is practically unaffected by the change of seasons.—Engineer Magazine.

A Prince's Dilemma.

The German emperor likes to study the characters of his group of small sons, and to that end has given them a room next to the one used for business purposes for himself. A certain great scientific man, having on one occasion an interview with the emperor, left his hat in the adjoining vestibule. There the little brothers discovered it; and the crown prince, explaining to the younger ones that "papa" sometimes sat on his opera hat and it came all right again, proceded to give a practical illustration of this statement, to the ruin of the beaver. The emperor's door suddenly opened and "papa" and the professor appeared. Like a manly little fellow the crown prince owned up, apologized to the laughing professor and went off to buy for the old gentleman a new hat with his small pocket change.

Britain's Roman Roads.

Up to the year 1824 the modern roads of Great Britain were inferior to those the Romans built prior to the fifth century. The complete system included six main roads from London, with their branches, and a perfect network of cross roads, measuring all teld some 6000 miles, and connecting Edinburgh, Glasgow, Bath, Bristol, Newcastle, Dover and other points still unoccupied by thriving towns.

The Roman roads were narrow, but built to last for all time. The usual width was about fifteen feet, the depth 'three feet. The bottom was day out and well rammed, a foundation of larger stones was laid in cement and layers of smaller stones tapered off toward the top, which was laid crowning in the middle to shed rain. Such coment as Romans used made these roads practically solid blocks of stone.

WINDMILL INSTEAD OF SAIL'S. motive Waterman Has Devised a New Motive Power For Yachts.

Inventive Waterman Has Devised a New Motive Power For Yachts.

Windmills can be put to other uses than that of drawing water on stock raisers' farms throughout Illinois for the cattle to drink. This has been demonstrated by an ingenious boatman on the lake front, who has attacked a mill to his toy yacht. The fans of the mill revolve fastest when the wind is high, and the craft is one of the swiftest between Michigan City and Waukegan. The owner of boat accepted a wager that he could not constructed a boat which would be able to make progress in the teeth of the wind. The bet was made early in the spring. The boatman began to think all day long. Last Sunday he announced that he had constructed a boat according to specifications and was ready to try it in order that his point might be proved and his money won.

was ready to try it in order that his point might be proved and his money won.

The craft when in the water proved to be a skiff-like boat, three feet long. Directly under the bow was a deep keel. From the sternrose along vane, like those seen on country barns, to show the direction of the wind. Right above the bow there was a shaft with a windmill ten inches in diameter on the end. The sbaft inclined aft and ran through what would have been the sternpost until itstruck below the water line. A five-inch propeller was attached to this end of it. It was such an absurd-looking craft that everybody laughed when its builder put the univeldly thing into the water.

A strong west wind was blowing The queer boat quavered for a second as it struck the water, then slow! but steadily came to the wind. The mild mill canglit the force of the gaie and began to revolve. Little by little the boat forged ahead The harder the wind blew the more rapidly it gained headway. The forward keel and the after weather vane kept it dead in the wind. The absurd little vessel stood out from the dock until its owner had to get in a rowboat to capture it. Everybody cheered and the wager was declared won. It is quite probable that the inventor will build a boat on the same principal big enough to carry him and a friend or two. The little model has created no end of talk along the lake shore.

Making Love in Peru.

The social restrictions of ancient times are growing lax in Peru, as in other Latin-American countries, because of contact with foreigners at home and abroad, although the young women are not yet allowed so much freedom as their sisters in United States and England. It is still a breach of decorum for a lady to receive a gentleman alone until after her marriage. A young man may call upon a young lady, but he must ask for her mother or her father. If they are at home it is proper for him to ask also for the daughter, and he is allowed also to tell her of his love, but their interview must be in the presence of her mother, and when she has consented to accept his hand his father and her father make it up between them and the match is arranged; but no contract is required, as in France, and money marriages are infrequent, although of course prudent parents look out for the welfare of their daughters with quite as much solicitude as in the United States.

An Interesting Samoan Ceremony.
The drinking of kava forms one of the most interesting ceremonies among the natives of Samoa. They are generally distinguished by the utmost formality, especially if a chief is present.
"In such an event the kava is brewed in the presence of the gathering by a comely Samoan girl, picturesquely garbed in bright-colored lava-lava, garlands of flowers and a headdress of brilliant feathers. The liquor is the emptied into a large bowl supported by three legs, from which it is dished up in cocoanut shells. The first to be served is the chief, who, however, haughtily rejects the beverage five times before deigning to partake of it. After the chief has been waited upon the liquor is passed around to the remainder of the company, according to their rank or years, and as each one is about to receive his portion heclaps his hands, which act is equivalent to a toast."

A Gun to shoot effices 1 des.

The Royal gan factories at Woolwich, England, have, it is stated, just turned out a gun with a range so much in excess of any previous ordnance that the Government range at Shootburyness has been found insufficient for ascertaining its maximum range. When fired for the first time, the shot went cut to sea miles beyond the targets. Though the range of the new weapon has not been actually measured or calculated, artillerists estimate it at fifteen miles, or about ten miles more than that of the latest rifle small arms. THE WORLD'S COLDEST PLACE.

THE WORLD'S COLDEST PLACE.

Russian Hamlet on Yana Rivef Holds That Distinction.

From the Philadelphia Press: Vercholausk is considered to be the coldest place in the world. It is a small collection of native log houses, planted near to, but not on, the Yana river. The street, if so it may be called, extends on either side of a narrow sheet of water, a kind of creek formed by the autumn overflow of the Yana, and which in winter forms a frozen promenade or driving place for sieds. It is a dreary place enough. The summer lasts only four months, and during the other eight of the year it is bitterly cold, the thermometer sometimes indicating 85 degrees below zero, and it seldom goes above 50 degrees until April 30. Corn will not grow in this desolate region. Barley and oats have been sown, but have always succumbed to the early frosts. Of vegetables, there are only the radish and the turnip, with, perhaps an occasional and very precarious crop of potatoes. Cabbages all run to leaf. The ground rarely thaws, even during the hot season, beyond twelve or eighteen inches deep, and in places much exposed to the heat never beyond a yard. Most of the dwellings are Rakut huts, built of fir trees against a square framework and covered thickly with mud to keep out trees against a square framework and covered thickly with mud to keep out

French Studying German.

It is said that the study of German is increasing in France, while the study of English is on the decline. In the Ecole des Sciences Politiques, in Paris, where diplomats are trained, many more study German than English. Many young Frenchmen are now being sent to Germany and Austria instead of England to get acquainted with the language of the victors of 1870. In a Paris lycee 143 students study German to 34 English. In another school the proportion of German to English is 500 to 188. In the Marseilles gymnasium two-thirds study German, one-third English. It is believed that this French interest in German will have a powerful influence in the commerce and politics of the world in the next generation.

Two Services a Year.

A clurch in which only two services are held during the course of any one year is a curiosity, yet such a one can be found in the middle of a large field near the village of Towton in England. It was originally erected as a memorial to Lord de Clifford, who fell in the battle of Towton in 1461. Services were instituted for the purpose of praying for the repose of his soul and those of his followers who fell in that historic battle. They might have been discontinued long ago did not the vicar of Ryther, in whose parish the church is situated, receive the tithes from no less than one thousand and nine acres of land that are delicated to the little same that the transport of the manual proper that the transport of the manual proper that the repair of the manual proper that the first successful and that are delicated to the
