WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, November 21, 1899. Nothing could more clearly show the close relations existing between Secre-tary Gage and the Wall street spectary Gage and the Wall street spec-ulators, and the absolute control of this administration by the money kings, than the manner in which Secretary Gage went to the resens of the Wall street crowd, by purchasing $25,000,000 worth of government bonds. Not two hours before the order was officially issued to buy those bonds, Secretary Gage assured newspaper men that no bonds would be bought. Later he re-ceived his orders from Wall street, and orders from want street, and promptly obeyed by ordering a purchase of bonds. When the Wall street gang squeezes the public, the government never goes to the relief of the public, but let the screws be turned a few times on the big speculators, and the treasury dumms a big wad of public money into out let the screws be turned a few times on the big speculators, and the treasury dumps a big wad of public money into Wall street to ease the pinch, and the guilible public is expected to accept the statement that it is a patriotic act, done to prevent a financial panic, when it is well known that it is really done to prevent loss on the part of the big speculators, who do not hesitate to make situations threatening a money panic whenever they think it profitable to do so, because of their knowledge that the United States treasury is behind them. There will come a time—it will have to come—when Wall street speculators will not dictate the actions of the United States treasury, but it will not come until there is an administration in power which does not owe its election to money put up by the great speculators of the country. There will be a chance to elect such an administration next year.

Representative Richardson, of Tennessee, is the first one of the four candidates for the Democratic nomination for speaker of the house, which carries with it the Democratic floor leadership during the Fifty-sixth congress, to reach Washington and open head-quarters. Mr. Richardson says he has received more pledges of support than any one of the other three candidates—Bankhead, of Alabama; De Armond, of Missouri, and Sulzer, of New York—and expresses confidence in his success, but the friends of the other candidates also express confidence of the success of their man in this good-natured contest for the Democratic leadership in the house. Mr. Bailey, of Texas, has contest for the Democratic leadership in the house. Mr. Bailey, of Texas, has not yet reached Washington, but he stated during the last session that he would not again be a candidate, but would support Mr. Bankhead for the honor. Some are predicting that there will be a deadlock in the caucus and that the friends of all the candidates will compromise by nominating Mr. Bailey again.

Balley again.

In order to get control of the senate finance committee, of which a majority have for years been silver men, even since the committee was controlled by the Republicans, the gold worshippers are going to reorganize the senate committee, giving the Republicans nine members in those consisting of thirteen and seven in those consisting of they are the theorem of the committee, as Jones, of Nevada, classed as a Silver Republican, and Wolcott, of Colorado, who calls himself a Republican bimetallist, can be counted upon to Bailey again. Colorado, who calls himself a Republican bimetallist, can be counted upon to act with the silver men on the question of reporting a bill to enact the single gold standard. Unless Mr. McKinley gets frightened by those Republicans, who, although willing to vote for a gold standard bill if compelled to do so, believe it will be bad policy to pass one on the eve of a presidential campaign, such a bill is likely to be jammed through at this session of congress.

If there were any doubt about Representative Henderson having been the administration's choice for speaker, it would have been dissipated by what has occurred since his arrival in Washington. Almost before he had removed the dust of travel from his clothes, he called at the White House to know whether Mr. the White House to know whether Mr.
McKinley had any orders to give as to the committee assignments, aside from the packing of the committee on banking and currency in favor of the single gold standard bill, which was ordered last summer. Mr. Henderson is going to be a McKinley speaker, and this house, instead of registering the will of Care Read as the last and idle will nor Czar Reed as the last one did, will reg ister the will of Mr. McKinley son—Dress for Everyday and for Parties—Suggestions for Children's Dresses—Hints About the Hair.

How to Remodel Old Gowns This Sea Parties-Suggestions for Children's Dresses-Hints About the Hair.

(New York Fashion Letter.)

Crabbed Alexander Pope showed his knowledge of the vagaries of fashion, when he penned his famous lines of advice:

"Be not the first by whom the new is tried.

Nor yet the last to lay the old aside." So the wise virgin who has not alaready ordered her winter wardrobe, is now able to take advantage of the more settled styles.

Unless you can have many gowns. John the habit skirt. Choose rather the latest model, which fits as closely about the hips but has two box pleats in the back. The pleats turn under and are stitched for a few inches, below which they fall in a graceful familie folds, quite becoming to the average woman.

It is an easy matter to remodel old gowns this year. Of course, the amount of work depends on the original cut. One five gored skirt was made into a habit skirt by simply taking out the two back gores and allowing the superfluous soutache braid to outline the seam in the middle of the back.

Another skirt which had the buttoned placket in the back was easily remodeled by simply making a narrow single box pleat in the back, outside instead of inside.

A pink taffeta waist was made as good as new by the addition of a few yards of wide faney ribbon with a black edge. The ribbon was adjusted to simulate a bloero. It was laid in fine box pleats, starting from the under arm seam, and following the arm hole to the shoulder seam, whe e it was fastened. The ribbon was almost endless variety to choose from, beginning with the simple ribbon and ending in the fluffy combinations of chiffon and lace that are so universally becoming.

Most of the searfs have very high stocks ending in points in the back, while the knot and ends are of vari-

Most of the scarfs have very high stocks ending in points in the back, while the knot and ends are of various shapes and materials.

Crepe de chine is the most popular material for neck sashes made to go twice around the neck before tying, while the favorite colors are the "pastel" shades.

The children come in for their share of finery and the exorbitant sum asked by a fashionable dressmaker for a single frock of a schoolgirl, would enable many a mother who makes her own little girl's dresses to buy a good outitiofor the winter.

So overdressed are some little maidens that a few schools have sent out word that they will not allow their pupils to be attired extravagantly. For everyday wear, gored wool skirts, made plain or trimmed with rows of braid are worn with fiannel shirt walsts. For parties, dresses of fine lawn, trimmed with lace are used, and the all silk frocks are worn on many occasions. A little maid of six years was critically comparing a tan covert cloth box coat, beautifully stitched with a red cloth one made with flaring skirt and broad cape collar. The little witch knew as well as the sales woman which was the later style.

Boys often three to six years wear Dewey suits of navy blue broadcloth, trimmed in full military style with braid and brass buttons, and the long sleeved, double-breasted coat, cap and long trousers make them look like Lillputan soldiers.

Boys older than six combine many of their fathers' styles with their knew many and streach.

Hers is made of black velvet and hand-painted roses scattered over both the crown and brim. In the direct front of the bonnet, nodding over the poke, are four black ostrich tigs. There are long streamers of pink Liberty gauze, which are both caught to the bonnet in the back with a little bunch of pink rosebuds, and then are brought around and tied under the chir in a big fluffy, captivating bow.

COST OF PRESENTATION.

Enormous Expense Attached to This Ceremony.

It costs more to make one's debut in England than in America, for over there a girl is not properly introduced till she has been presented at court, and the cost of launching a daughter in society is something to drive impecunious fathers into a lunatic asylum. One girl who came up from her Berkshire home to be presented last spring has given an account of what she endured, and what her father's pocket-book suffered. First, a large, aristocratic and handsomely furnished house was rented in London for the season—nearly everyone rents his town house now—and a big rent charged. Then began the work of laying in a wardrobe.

This girl first made a visit to a place where corsets are made to order. She had a pretty figure, but madame insisted that she must have an eighteen linch waist to be beautiful. She was measured and fitted for riding, opera and ordinary corsets, and the bill came to $100. Twenty-five pairs of the smartest boots and slippers added to the bills. A score of pretty hats, to go with various dresses, made a big hole in $500, and three times the amount went to the dressmaker. A riding habit cost $50, a bleycle suit the same, and several dozen pairs of gloves to match were no small item.

The presentation dress cost $600, though it was plainly made of exquisite white satin broche. For a fee of $15 a lady came and taught the young woman the court bow, the way to contesy and carry her train. This was hard work for a debutante, and she said she was as tired after an aftersonon with her teacher as though she had spent all the time on the golf links. And after all the time and trouble it was but a few brief seconds she spent in the royal presence. But she was properly launched and happy.—Kansas City Star.

THE HABITS OF FISH

WAYS OF THE SALMON, THE COD AND THE BLUEFISH.

Practical-The Cod Is Actually Ridiculous-Clams Are Siliy, of Course -Bluefish Are Warlike.

It is not too much to say that in some ways the love of salmon passeth that of women. To reach the object of their affection they perform feats and undergo hardships greater than any man could do or bear, and to maintain it they fight with a courage and fury which might make many soldiers en-which might make many soldiers envious.

The salmon trials begin when they first leave the sea on their long upriver Journey to meet their sweethearts. Presently, perhaps, they meet a high waterfall. Then the soldon backs away as far as possible, makes a locomotive-like rush and leaps for the top. He actually whizzes through the air, his tail is moving like lightning, his scales shine like silver enamel. Perhaps he falls to reach the top by a footbut he catches the water, langs suspended for a moment, and then with miraculous strength forces his way up and reaches the quiet water beyond.

Perhaps the next waterfall is five feet higher, and the salmon leaps in vain. Then, finding the feat impossible, he actually clinbas the sides, jumping up from ledge to ledge and resting in little pools until the water above is reached. Then he goes on pushing through rapids and floundering over shallows until the spamning in the salmon is no beauty when he reaches his journey's end. His scales, perhaps, are torn off, his fins tor; and his body a mass of bruises. But neverthless he woes his ladylore soldly, caresses her tenderly, fights his rivais fiercely and whis his bride like a scidier.

But all fish are not so romantic. The codfish, for instance, is unsentimental and actually ridiculous. He is a great, gray, ugly fish, and his name itself is absurd. If there was such a thing as submarine humor—e would figure in it as the goat does in our conics. The codfish, for instance, is unsentimental and actually ridiculous. He is a great, gray, ugly fish, and his name itself is absurd. If there was such a thing as submarine humor—e would figure in it as the goat does in our conics. The codfish, has, in fact, an appetite which makes the goat's look pale, and when the fishermen cut the sho poen they assert that they often flud such things as scissors, suspen eter buckles, horse-shoes, potato parings, oil cans, door-knobs, marilin spikes, corn cobs and India rubber shoes.

Another sartling story told by fishermen is that in heavy weath knobs, marlin spikes, corn cobs and India rubber shoes.

Another startling story told by fishermen is that in heavy weather codfish eat stones to balance them, but it is more likely that these rocks are taken in while attached to sea anemones, of which the codfish are very fond. It may be inferred that codfish on not object to nibble the fingers or hands of human beings, because the wedding ring of a drowned woman; was once found in a cod's stomach, and the finder got £50 reward for its return.

Oysters and clams in the shell are very popular with the codfish, and there are vast heaps of dead shells in the ocean, "nested" together like strawberry boxes, which are believed to have once been in the stomachs of codfish. The appetites of these fish are insatiable. They will fill their mouths with food and still try to get more.
