The address of the silver Republican tate committee of Nebraska, sent to oters just before the close of the late campaign, is one of the strongest in-dictments of the present national ad-ministration that we have seen, aside from Bryan's thirteen-inch speeches.

"The Republican state platform, adopted at Omaha, Sept. 21, 1899, says:
"We adhere unequivocally to the gold standard, and we are unalterably opposed to the free coinage of silver."

ver."

'It further says: 'After more than twenty years of harmful agitation the people of the United States, by a majority of more than 500,000, decided in favor of that standard.'

"Now, is not that a fine statement for honest men to make, in face of the fact that the national Republican platform of 1896 promised to promote the free coinage of silver through international bimetallism and that congress appropriated $100,000 for the purpose of trying to rid this country of the gold standard?

Columbus, Ohio, Telegram: Strong esolutions denouncing Hannaism and trusts were passed at a mass meeting of the city traveling salesmen the other night. Every wholesale and jobbing house in Columbus which sells to the city trade was represented by one or more men. Of the total of 140 city salesmen a large majority were present. In selling goods to the retail stores of the city the salesmen have had bitter occasion to rue the existence of trusts. Prices of the staple commodities used in every household of necessity have been steadily rising for the past year. The work of salesmen has therefore been made harder. while in no instance have their salaries been increased proportionate to the extra work involved, and the increased

The Egotist Backs Down

The Egotist Backs Down.

Nebraska Independent: Nebraska's great egotist, J. Sterling Morton, in the pompous way peculiar to egotists only, recently made the charge that Mr. Bryan had said that he wanted of fice for what there was in it. The New fice for what there was in it. The New York Sun and many other papers expressed their disgust at this charge, and being called upon from every quarter for proof now says:

"The Conservative published that when William J. Bryan first began asking for office in Nebraska, in the year 1899, he assured a person that "it is the money that is in the office and not the honor that attracts me." year 1899, he assured a person that "it is the money that is in the office and not the honor that attracts me." It was supposed that the Conservative could prove, by a person whom Mr. Bryan's friends would not attempt to impeach, that such assurance was given by William J. Bryan. But circumstances at present prevent introducing the evidence of the individual who would establish the truth of what the Conservative has heretofore asserted."

After that complete backdown he degrades himself still further by adding:

"Possibly in some future issue of the Conservative the evidence of the person referred to (a person, by the way, of whom Mr. Bryan thinks a great deal) may be secured and published."

A New Nursery Rhyme.

New York World: The news of the consolidation of virtually the entire railway business of the country under one management suggests that parents who are tired of the old nursery rhyme "This Little Pig Went to Market," as played on the toes or fingers of the baby, may now vary it to adapt it to the inculcation of the principles of modern American political economy into the minds of the future citizen. The rhyme so adapted might read:
This little pig (Morgan) works the coal mines;
This little pig (Armour) packs the meat;

ion-rests with a list of captains of industry not more numerous than the 'little pigs" represented by the fingers of one hand or the toes of one of his infantile feet.

They were telling snob stories, says the New York Commercial Advertiser, and the demure-looking woman said: "The most amusing upstart I ever met had a horror of any one suspecting that she ever practiced economy. She was very fond of walking and loved to walk in the park, but she seldom permitted herself this pleasure, always going in her carriage—for fear some one she knew should meet her and imagine she did not have a carriage. Her household was conducted on the same principle. She knew few people whom she thought worth entertaining, so her dinner parties were small, but so anxious was she to be thought rich and liberal that she would have a butter and three or four assistants to wait upon half a dozen persons. Of course, they got in each other's way and often collisions and crashes occurred. Then she would sigh and say she didn't understand why she couldn't get good servants. She paid enough, goodness knows. Her follies were many and very funny before she finally entered the sacred portal and was given a throne of her own and a scepter to wield, but one of her pet extravagances was really quite original. It was in her early days, when money didn't seem to be able to buy everything, after all. She gave a dinner to which she had reason to think several grandees would come. "If you want a Persian cat bring me any common kitten you like, and within six months I will return it to you with a coat which would put to shams that of the shah's favorite pussy," said a cat fancier to the writer. "No torture or fake is employed. Some time ago it was brought to my notice that the cats living in refrigerating chambers got coats of enormous thickness, and also that they grew to nearly double the size of the ordinary pussy. The idea being given, the rest was easy. I had a small refrigerator fitted up in my premises, and made an experiment. It was so successful that I have since made a profit, by turning common pussies into genuine Persians, of $2,500 a year. Again, I now have only one cure for cats, never mind what disease they are suffering from. I freeze them, for cats, never mind what disease they are suffering from. I freeze them, and am by this remedy able to return them to their owners, within a week, perfectly happy and well. Again, for the last two years the majority of show cats have come to me in the early autumn to have their winter coats made by my method so that they shall

A Notable Silver Anniversary.

With the close of the present year M. David C. Cook, of Chicago, will celebrate his first quarter-centennial as editor and publisher of Sunday-school iterature. Starting twenty-five years ago, without reputation or assurances of support, he has been supported by nown publishers in this line. Beginning in 1876 with two small publications, his periodicals have grown in number and favor until there are few schools in this country that do not find it to their interest to use some of his pure and helpful publications, while many in distant lands pay ribute to their merits. The past quarter of a century has witnessed many changes among Sunday-school publishers, and much less time their usefulness. On the contrary, Mr. Cook is preparing to celebrate the beginning of another quarter-century with additional improvements and new publications. Among these may be mentioned The New Centrary Sunday-school Trachers Monthly, a large and thoroughly up-to-date magazine for super-intendents and teachers, the first issue of which will appear in December. Among the most remarkable of his publications is the contrary of the Sunday-school, such as we remember in our childhood days, and furnish something natural, interesting and ennobling, has been its aim, and we are not at all surprised at its popularity.

Why Changes Are Needed

Why Changes Are Needed.
Change of scene, change of occupation and frequent changes in furnishings and diet are all important at this season, and the time of rest may be secured from these changes even when an expensive outing, or the usual summer vacation, has not been afforded. No woman who has ever tried it can conceive of the rest and pleasure resulting from a change of some sort. Make such changes as are possible by rearranging rooms in the matter of furniture, pictures, ornaments, etc. Do something, anything, to rest the eye and brain from dead-level monotony. It is said that marked cases of insominia have been cured by changing from one sleeping-room to another. The wise woman will also change her family dietary as completely as possible as a completely as possible as a completely as possible as expense.
