Very ordinary clitzens of Pennsylvania may now be nonplused over contrariwise reports on the coal situation:

Upon the one hand it is stated that there is a scarcity of this necessary product, and on the other that the collecties in several sections are only working three to four days a week instead of six, as they were one month area. In The building committee stated that the recent high winds damaged the skeep building on the Hill to some extent, but that no investigation had been made.

The secretary stated that he called the attention of the publishers of a certain book to the inferior binding of a recent consignment and they promised to do better on future orders.

Divorces are not rare in this county, but an application by one woman for three of them at once is somewhat startling. Mrs. Bella Fagan approached a lawyer the other day with this object in view. She was sincere in her desire for the three at once, and circumstances show that but for the discrimination of the law she would require them.

She has three husbands, all living, and she wants the fourth. The last man is the reason she desires the divorces. She was married to Milton Fagan, of and she wants the fourth. The last man is the reason she desires the divorces. She was married to Milton Fagan, of Wilkesbarre, April 1, 1888, and in course of time he left her. As a husband is a very desirable property in the eyes of Mrs. Fagan she took another without wasting time mourning for her lost first love. When No. 2 wandered away never to return Mrs. Fagan kept up a brave heart, cast her lot once more with fate and married a third man. The singular fatality continued, and he in time departed for pleasanter surroundings.

Now No. 4 is willing to try his luck, and Mrs. Fagan, with some sense of the proprieties, decided to get divorces from the preceding three. When told that only the first marriage was legal she was overjoyed.
