First Come, First Served. Don't say that you couldn't get the valuable presents offered with "Red Cross" and "Hubinger's Best" laundry starch; your grocer has them for you; ask him for a coupon book, which will enable you to get one large 10c. package of "Red Cross" starch, one large 10c. package of "Hubinger's Best" starch, with the premiums, two beautiful Shakespeare panels, printed in twelve beautiful colors, or one Twentieth Century Girl calendar, all for 5c.

Value of Pictures. Pictures do more toward furnishing a house and determining the status of its inmates than anything else. If you have a suspicion that you are not wise in choosing and hanging pictures, get advice from someone whose taste need not be questioned, says the Pittsburgh Dispatch. Cheap pictures are not necessarily poor, but a poor picture is usually cheap. To be able to discern the difference is a quality with which every one is not blessed. A good plan is to purchase copies of famous pictures, etchings and engravings. These are almost sure to be good. In framing pictures remember that gold frames are for oil paintings and dark pictures, white frames for water colors, and black enamel or Flemish oak and modern oak for etchings and photographs.

FREE FROM PANICS.

REPUBLIC OF MEXICO CONTINUES PROSPEROUS.

Free Silver Coinage and Staple Government Currency Serve to Maintain Unequaled Activity in All Fields of Production—Bondholders Are Secure.

A New York banker has just returned from Mexico and was interviewed by the New York Tribune, but the Arizona Gazette insists that the Whitelaw Reid organ was afraid to publish the truth about Mexican prosperity. The returned banker did say through the Tribune that the republic is prosperous, paying off its national debt and furnishing hundreds of thousands of new laborers with employment every year. "There is more money coming into Mexico than ever before," quoth the banker; "banks are being organized all over the country and everything is in a cheerful condition. The Americans and English are putting up great sugar mills and opening up the tropical belt to the markets of the world. Here the Arizona paper takes up the interview and explains why the Tribune cut it short.

"There are no panic scares there. The monetary standard is stable. The supply of money is sufficient for the demands of trade. In fact, it is the abundance of money that starts trade and keeps it up. Every Mexican producer is making money and is happy. While other nations are hoarding their currency, that of Mexico is in circulation, performing the functions for which it was created.

"Mexican statesmen and financiers attribute the prosperity enjoyed by their people and the republic to the unlimited use of silver as a medium of exchange.

"They have currency which is not constantly appreciating in value to the detriment of all other forms of wealth; a currency which cannot be cornered, manipulated or controlled by a few to the injury of the many. A currency which foreign financiers cannot limit or lock up at pleasure. A currency which enables the producing classes of Mexico to realize from their products more than the bare cost of production—in short, a currency which is satisfactory to and sufficient for the tradesmen and producers and to everybody except the users and the money changers, who have been scourged from the temple of Mexican progress."

POLITICAL BROTHERS.

It must be an immense satisfaction to the American citizen, worrying over his financial condition, that William McKinley and Grover Cleveland are in full accord as to the "proper" remedy. Time was when William boldly and anarchistically, not to say treasonably, denounced Grover in no measured language for depositing public money in "pet banks." It is a suspicious sign, however, to now have two such master minds and prominent figures in the public eye engaged in smacking their lips over the public purse. It is said that "when rogues fall out honest men get their due," but here we have the unusual spectacle of two honest men clinging together like Siamese twins, staying the attacks of a dishonest people. We are all rogues, and we have departed from the principles established by the immortal Jackson. Grover says so, and William nods assent. What is the ligature which holds these incompatible, inconsistent elements together in such close relations? Is there a possibility amounting to a possibility that the next ticket to sweep the country in the interests of the foreign bond holder, the trusts, syndicates, money brokers, banks and other instruments of American prosperity, shall be McKinley and Cleveland, or Cleveland and McKinley? It matters little which way the ticket reads, so far as effects go. True, Grover did inconsiderately twist the British lion's tail in the Venezuela matter, but William has been graciously apologizing ever since, even to the surrender of the whole country to our British brethren. England would hail such a ticket with its approval, and put up money to secure its election. What difference, therefore, to the American people? The men who own and control the people's money also own and control the people themselves.

ABBOTT ON HARVEY'S BOOK. After four years, during which period he has at all times been laboring with voice and pen and organizing ability to fulfill the mission of '96, Mr. Harvey, author of Coin's Financial School, comes before the people on the eve of the new presidential campaign with a new book—in the familiar style of his former one, but treating of the later, though not more important, issues which have sprung up since the time that Mr. Bryan was defrauded of his election. "Coin on Money, Trusts and Imperialism" treats of at least one issue—imperialism—which had not raised its threatening head in '96. During that struggle, too, the trusts, though already offering a certain menace to the well-being of the people, had not developed into such startling proportions as they now present. To these issues Coin, in his new series of lectures, devotes much of his attention, but the old issue—the issue that will arise perennially until out of the hands of a favored class shall be taken the priceless privilege of issuing and controlling the money of the people—engages his attention in the opening chapters of the book. I do not think that Mr. Harvey has ever done anything so well as his dissection of the privileges enjoyed and the further ones demanded by the national bankers. In a clear and simple style, using as heretofore the dialogue form, he discusses the demand of the banking class that it shall be permitted to control the money of the people, and shows conclusively by figures, the authenticity of which cannot be disputed, how enormous are the profits they now derive and hope to continue to draw from their monopoly. The profit of the dealer in money is the "unearned increment" no less certainly than is the profit of the speculator in land who has contributed nothing to the productive forces of the nation. Mr. Harvey demonstrates this, though he does not use this particular comparison, and I believe that his logic will prove as irrefutable as his language is simple and direct.

In my opinion, this new book of Mr. Harvey's—notably better than "Coin's Financial School"—by its thoroughly human treatment of the questions of the campaign, deserves and will attain a popularity and a circulation quite commensurate with his earlier one. It is, like that one, cleverly illustrated by drawings which enforce the teachings of the text, and is given a certain up-to-date and living interest by the employment of the names of well-known men in the course of the discussions which it recounts. It is a book that will be read by the millions, and will be a most potent weapon in the hands of the people for their defense against privileged classes.

WILLIS J. ABBOT,
Chief of the Press Bureau of the Democratic National Committee.

EDITORIAL ETCHINGS.

While it would be a very beautiful thing to give everything to God, still there are some things which may belong to Caesar without offense to the Creator. Indeed, it was Christ himself who said: "Render, therefore, to Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's." Senator Beveridge, in his remarkable conversion of the American republic into an apostolic propaganda, does not seem able to draw the line in his anxiety to curry favor with his masters, the trusts, banks and the Republican administration.

Is it not a suspicious circumstance that all of the trusts, banks, money lenders, etc., are demanding McKinley's re-election, and are contributing heavily to the Republican campaign fund? Some say we cannot get along without the banks and great moneyed institutions, and therefore feel it obligatory to stand in with them. That is true enough when one wants to borrow money, but the difficulty is, the great majority want to earn it, but cannot because of the hoarding of the money for speculation.

We have gone so deep into the world's politics that a great standing army is said to be necessary to save the nation. If we had not gone in so deep we would not have required so much army, would we?

Gov. Roosevelt wants to know: "Has any individual been injured by the acquisition of wealth by any man?" Certainly, the man who has been robbed. If the governor had used the word "wronged," the United States treasury might have been indicated.

There is altogether too much argument among our grammarians about the proper number of the verb "to be" used in connection with the United States. Ought it to be "the United States is," or "the United States are?" By and by it will be "the United States ain't."

Gen. Alger is about to publish a book defending his administration of the war department and embalmed beef. Secretary Gage and a few others might also write books of explanation under the title, "How I Did It."

Owing to the impressive, not to say fierce, demands made by Ambassador Choate, the British government has released the American flour seized by it in Delagoa bay. Thus war has been averted by the firmness of President McKinley.

Jackson and Bryan.

Here is something for those who think Jackson would favor McKinleyism, were he alive, to consider:

"He was the first American to emphasize the Democratic doctrine that under the constitution congress alone had power to coin and issue money; and in his veto of the bill to recharter the United States bank he declared that this power was a governmental function, could be exercised by congress alone, and should not be delegated to corporations or individuals. He denounced the bank and denied the constitutionality of its creation. Against the advice of Webster and Clay, against the decision of the Supreme court, in the face of friends and foes alike, he took his stand and fought the fight to a finish against the most gigantic monopoly which American at that time had ever known."

The Republican organs have been eulogizing the memory of Andrew Jackson with fulsome praise. They seem to be afraid of him even in the spirit. But he comes out of his grave on occasions and speaks to the American people in such clear language that no man can be deceived.

Monopolies to the Front.

Those who studied the trust question in 1896 foresaw that an administration placed in power by the aid of great monopolies could not be relied upon to destroy the trusts, but many who could not be convinced by argument are now being convinced by the rapid growth and increased audacity of private monopolies.—W. J. Bryan, at Omaha, Jan. 8, 1900.

Ostrich Spoiled His Speech.

Anybody who heard Senator Allen of Nebraska, deliver his famous fifteen-hour speech against the bill for the repeal of the Sherman silver bill would hardly believe that anything could stump him. Yet there is an experience in the senator's life which shows that, after all, he is like unto other mortals, says the Washington Post. "I was campaigning in my state once," said the senator, "when I had occasion to speak at a fair grounds. The grand stand was full, and the occasion seemed to be full of promise for an orator overflowing as I was with political gospel. Just as I had commenced a man brought out an ostrich hitched to a sulky. I don't know whether you ever saw the trotting ostrich in the east, but out west he was a great attraction. Well, as soon as that bird began to run around the track I wasn't in it. The ostrich monopolized the attention of every man, woman and child. When the bird stopped the people listened to me, but when he threw out his long legs again there was a roar of laughter and applause which drowned every word I uttered. Finally, I gave it up. I let the trotting ostrich have everything his own way."

I Had a Bad Cough

"I had a bad cough for six weeks and could not find any relief whatever. I read what a wonderful remedy Ayer's Cherry Pectoral was for coughs and I bought a bottle. Before I had taken a quarter of it my cough had entirely left me."—L. Hawn, Newington, Ont., May 3, 1899.

Quickly Cures Colds

Neglected colds always lead to something serious. They run into chronic bronchitis which pulls down your general health and deprives you of sleep; or they end in genuine consumption with all its uncertain results.

Don't wait, but take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral just as soon as you begin to cough. A few doses will cure you then. But it cures old colds, too, only it takes a little more time. We refer to such diseases as bronchitis, asthma, whooping-cough, consumption, and hard winter coughs.

If you've just taken cold a 25 cent bottle is all you'll need. For harder cases a 50 cent bottle is better. For chronic troubles, and to keep on hand, the $1.00 bottle is most economical.
