How a Little Boy Was Saved.

Washington, D. C.—"When our boy was about 16 months old he broke out with a rash which was thought to be measles. In a few days he had a swelling on the left side of his neck and it was decided to be mumps. He was given medical attendance for about three weeks when the doctor said it was scrofula and ordered a salve. He wanted to lance the sore, but I would not let him and continued giving him medicine for about four months when the bunch broke in two places and became a running sore. Three doctors said it was scrofula and cach ordered a blood medicine. A neighbor told me of a case somewhat like our baby's which was cured by Hood's Sarasparilla. DAWSON OF 1900.

City Has Changed Greatly During the City Has Changed Greatly During the Paat Year.

The Dawson of 1899 is no longer the Dawson of 1898, and much less that of the year previous. The thousands of bateaux that were formerly lined up against the river front, in rows six deep and more, and comprising all manner of craft from the small cance to sliced sections of scows, have mostly disappeared, and in their place we now find the graceful and ungraceful forms of varying types of steamboat. It is no uncommon thing nowadays to find five or more of these larger craft tied up at one time to the river front, and up at one time to the river front, and the amplitude and majesty of the Misissippi boats gain but little in com-parison with some of the larger craft of the Yukon river. Overhung signs parison with some of the larger craft of the Yukon river. Overhung signs call attention to the flying queens of the river, the Bonanza King, Canadian and Sibyl, and thousands are offered upon the result of the race to the White Horse rapids. So here, as in the olden days of the Mississippl, the struggle for supremacy has led to the opening of the throttle and to the scraping of the fire-box. Upward of a hundred arrivals from down the river were registered at Dawson during the season of open water of 1899.—Appleton's Popular Science Monthly for February.

Secretary Hay and other Anglomaniaes of our British administration to have Uncle Sam's official mail opened by the queen's imperial agents, and marked "V. R." (Victoria Regina), but it warms a patriotic American's blood up to the boiling and fighting point. It makes us feel like reaching out for our good old double-barreled shotgun, writes W. S. Bryan in St. Louis Journal of Agriculture. The queen is a most excellent old lady, a model, house-keeper and mother, and a dear old grandmother, whom we all love in those several capacities. But she is not "Victoria Regina" of these United States just yet. We taught her grandfather, George III., to quit signing his name that way 124 years ago, and we don't propose to allow the granddaughter to resume the habit, however agreeable it might be to the Hanna-McKinley-Hay combination of British bootlickers. Six weeks ago this paper declared that there was a big scandal back of the Macrum incident, but it is far more disgraceful and humiliating than we supposed. It is simply unbearable. The English agents would never have dared to detain and open United States official mail if there had been no "understanding of alliance" between British and American imperialists, as first asserted by Joseph Chamberlain, and now reiterated by Consul Macrum. Such an outrage would be a casus belli if committed against any other respectable government has ceased to be respectable since it fell into the hands of the Hanna-McKinley-Hay gang.

If any additional evidence were needed to establish the existence of a needed to establish the existence of a needed to establish the existence of a

If any additional evidence were needed to establish the existence of a secret understanding between the McKinley administration and the British imperialists, it would be found in the Hay-Pauncefote treaty regarding the Nicaragua canal, and many other collateral circumstances. This astonishing treaty provides for the building of the canal by the United States, and its mutual control by England and Americal. In other words, Uncle Sam puts up the money and digs the ditch, and then John Bull steps in and helps him enjoy the benefits. The ultimate purpose is the division of the North and South American continents between the English and American imperialists. We are to take everything north of the canal, including Canada and Mexico, while England scoops in everything south of that line. That is what the Hay-Pauncefote treaty means, and Mexico and South and Central America so interpret it. But the American peple will have something to say about the deal before the final closing of the bargain.

Hay may be "fired," but that will not atone for the outrage. The whole Republican administration is responsible.

atone for the outrage. The whole Re-publican administration is responsible. The people will so decide at the polls.

LOOKING FORWARD.

Dr. Lyman Abbott, among a long list of things he is engaged in looking forward to, and which he and other fantastic dramers will continue to look forward to until the dying breath of time shall fan the ponderous gates of eternity, is the following solution of the capital anl labor question:

"I look forward to the time when, by no sudden revolution, but by the gradual diffusion of education and the gradual diffusion of wealth, the capitalistic system will yield to a democracy of industry, as slavery has yielded to feudalism, and feudalism to capitalism; when the men who work, some with brain and some with hand and some with both brain and hand, will themselves own the implements of industry, and labor will hire capital, instead of capital hiring labor."

If there is any "gradual diffusion" of wealth beginning, nobody has discovered it. The farmer had a pair of balky mules. As an experiment, he tied a bunch of turnips to the wagon pole, just beyond the reach of the animals. Seeing them, smelling them and almost tasting them, they started forward on a run to catch them, but they never did. "Looking forward" is too much like the April fool joke in vogue among the street urchins: "Look behind, mister," and he always does, which is the essence of the joke.

The letter was mailed at Cape Town Oct. 4 by Consul General Stowe. It was held there one month apparently, for the next postmark is that of Durban, dated Nov. 4. From Durban it was sent to Pretoria and reached Mr. Macrum in its mutilated form. The circulars to consuls issued by the department, not in themselves important, but nevertheless "official meil," never reached Mr. Macrum. They were confiscated without apology or explanation by the British censor. As for Mr. Macrum's personal mail, he never heard of it.—St. Louis Journal.

Our British Secretary.

Our Knickerbocker breeches British secretary of state seems to think he ought to be complimented for his effort to fool the people of this country by forcing a defensive and offensive allance with England on us under cover of a pretended canal treaty. He thinks such an alliance is necessary, because he fears that the "United States will not be able to maintain the Monroe doctrine against the nations of Europe" without the "assistance"—save the mark!—of England. He might have waited at least until England whipped the little Boer republics—about such a task as whipping the states of New Jersey and Rhode Island—before asking her help in sustaining the Monroe doctrine. We have managed to take care of the Monroe doctrine for seventy-seven years without any help from England, and we shall probably be able to blunder along in our usual clumsy American style for a few years more without calling on her. Meanwhile we repeat our suggestion that our British secretary of state ought to pack his knickerbocker panties and his Tuxedo coat "with gold lace around the edges" and go back to England and swear allegiance to "Victoria Regina." If he has any self-respect left that is what he will do.—Ex.

Who Pays the Wages.

An absence of benevolence is particularly noticeable in the coal trusts.

There has been an increase of coal miners' wages, but do the profits and dividends of the coal trusts suffer?

We wonder who does. Perhaps the following item from a Chicago paper will tell.

following item from a Chicago paper will tell.

"Eastern coal is to be 25 to 50 per cent dearer than at present, April 1, according to Col. W. P. Rend, who is in Pittsburg. He says the advance is brought about by an increase in wages to the miners, by the low prices which have prevailed and by the coal famine in Europe, which has made it hard for operators to fill orders. Chicago coal dealers say the European famine already has begun to tell on this market and the supply of West Virginia and Pennsylvania coal is decreasing fast. It is almost impossible to get West Virginia smokeless coal in Chicago and there is a great deal of substitution of other coals for the West Virginia product.

A Fory Alliance, but—
It is interesting to know that Great Britain made to the United States a vigorous offer of a formal alliance as late as December last. Lord Rosebery is the authority for the statement. It is a long time since so much talk of a thing has been heard in two hemispheres, with so much denial of it at this end of the line. Mr. Chamberlain said, in substance, that there was an alliance; and Lord Rosebery now mentions the month when an_offer of an alliance was made. The truth is probably this: No alliance can possibly exist, but there could easily be some sort of an understanding, vague enough to warrant President McKinley's repudiation of it, in case the exigencies of American elections required it.—

Driest spot on Earth.

Payta, in Peru, is said to be the driest spot on the face of the earth, as the average interval between two showers of rain is seven years. The species—of these seven are annuals, the seeds of which must remain dorman in the ground for eight years. Notwithstanding the scarcity of rain, the natives subsist by the growth of the long-rooted Peruvian cotton, which is able to maintain itself without rain for seven years in the dried-up river bed, and yields profitable crops of coltored short staple cotton.—Cincinnat Enquirer
