A friend of mine has an Irish servant, who is an old soldier who brought an ugly scar or two from India. One day he was describing his part in a battle—the long wait, the nerves tense, the advance, the gallop, the charge—how the rider some yards ahead of him fell from the saddle and shot his own horse dead with the death grip of his fingers on his revolver as he dragged; how the men behind uttered oaths at the sight, and set their teeth to win. "And what struck you most when it was over, and you looked back upon it?" asked my friend. The servant reflected a moment, and then, with simplicity, repiled: "What struck me most forcible, sir, was the builets that missed me." Quite rish, that.—Parts American Register.

"DEAR Mrs. PINKHAN: — Before I commenced to take your medicine I was in a terrible state, wishing myself dead a good many times. Every part of my body seemed to pain in some way. At time of menstruation my suffering was something terrible. I thought there was no cure for me, but after taking several bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound all my bad feelings were gone. I am now well and enjoying good health. I shall always praise your medicine."— Mrs. Amos Fescher, Box 226, Romeo, Mich. success of the fusionist forces in the coming campaign is conceded in Washington at present. President McKinley and his Republican congress are in a very gloomy state of mind.

They fall to satisfy the trust interests, whose dictation is responsible for many of their troubles, and the whole country is making its revolt against imperialism felt.

President McKinley changes his mind with every new shade of public opinson that presents itself. That pliability of his is very trying to his followers. Each one has a different story to tell when he comes from the White House.

The administration's immediate official family are not a source of comfort. Secretary Hay is said to be positively ill over his fasco in the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. Secretary Gage is wondering if the Republican majority can shield him from further investigation of his deals with the Standard Oil bank. Secretary Root is in Cuba trying to persuade the Cubans to be good children and not bother the administration just now, and so it goes. Without doubt the administration now wishes that it never whipped its followers into voting for a Puerto Rican tariff, and it certainly wishes it never heard of the Philippines.

Then, too, a wrathful delegation of Idaho miners, ex-prisoners of the "bull pen," went up to the White House the other day and told the president what they thought of his scheme of martial law in Idaho. His courteous manners and soothing remarks did not soothe these indignant citizens at all. They wanted to know what he proposed to do about it.

wanted to know what he proposed to do about it.

So really the president is not happy at the moment nor does he see great promise of re-election. It is significant of his depression that he no longer talks in high-sounding platitudes about fais imperial mission.

The gloom from the White House affects congress too. The opposition have good reason to be cheeful. Their Republican colleagues are hoisted with their own petard, and if the sensation is not pleasant they have only themselves to thank.

The Republicans are so thoroughly disorganized that they are only thinking how quickly they can adjourn longers and get away from Washington.

Their lesson on the Puerto Rican.

thinking how quickly they can adjourn congress and get away from Washington.

Their lesson on the Puerto Rican tariff bill has not given them the courage to confess their error and come out and stand by the constitution. Their only notion of repairing the blunder is to pass a bill keeping Puerto Rico and the Philippings under military law, and then depend on inventing some explanation that will satisfy the people.

The failure of any legislation for the new possessions will not offend the trusts, for it will leave the Dingley duties in force. The Republicans are so tied up in trust control and so dependent upon them for the financial part of the coming campaign that they cannot stand out for principle and the rights of the people.

The opposition have a clean and consistent record from the beginning of congress. They have stood for the keonstitution and for the protection of the people against the trusts.

The Democrats pointed out some time ago that the popular sentiment was growing against imperialism and the trusts. It is useless to beat about the bush. The Republicans are in power and are going to be held responsible for every omission of duty as well as for the positive injury done along certain lines.

as for the positive injury done along certain lines.

The table of our exports to the Philippines for the last seven months shows only a million and a half of dollars for the total. This is entirely for the army. In fact, not all of the supplies for the army are sent from this country. It costs about $10,000.000 a month to carry on the war of subjugation in the Philippines. Every time you help pay the war taxes you can reflect that, even commercially considered, we get back about one dollar in ten that is expended. Spain used to sell Cuba, Puerto Rico and the Philippines an aggregate of about $40,000,000 in normal times. Our total trade to these islands falls far short of that even when we count the exof that even when we count the expenditure for our big army. This idea of trade following the troops seems to e a bit expensive.

A Trust Represser.

A Trust Represser.

The hugest joke of the year is the amendment to the bill for the ship subsidy steal which proposes to bring shipping trusts under the Sherman anti-trust law, by a declaration that the provisions of that law shall be "specifically applicable to the builder, owner, or either or both of them, of any vessel entering into any contract provided for by this act, and any such vessel is hereby declared to be property in the course of transportation within the intent of said law." Mark Hanna must have devised this scheme. Nobody else in the country would have the cheek to take up a law that has been utterly discredited, and shown not to be effective for repressing any kind of trusts, and offer it as a preventive for a new trust. To go to the people on that sort of a proposition at to rely on their lack of intelligence. If the republican party in congress have any desire to prevent a shipping trust from gobbling up the $9,000,000 a year which this bill fliches from the pockets of the people, it could tasily put an effective anti-trust provision in the bill instead of this ridiculous pretense of one. But it has no such purpose. The ship subsidy steal is for the special benefit of a trust. It is made to enable a trust to collect tribute from the people just as the provisions of the Dingley bill were prepared for that purpose.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

Sliver Not Dead.

The currency bill that has justpassed congress fastens us to the financial system of the old world and subjects us to all the disturbances which affect them while it places the control of the volume of paper money in the hands of a bank trust, which will be as merciless to the people of this country as Weyler was to the reconcentrados. The fight for bimetallism at the ratio of 16 to 1 has not been lost. The increased production of gold has shown the advantage of more money and has answered the argument so often made that the parity could not be maintained because of the overproduction of silver. The fight against bank-note circulation will grow stronger as the big banks swallow up the little ones, and as the people learn that a permanent national bank-note circulation, secured as at present, necessitates a permanent and increasing national debt.—William J. Bryan.

World's Most Remarkable Whirlpool.
The Maelstrom, which means literally, "grinding stream," is situated on the Norwegian coast, southwest of the Loffoden Isles, and is the most remarkable whirlpool in the world. It runs between the island of Moskenes and a large solitary rock in the middle of the straits. The strong currents rushing between the Great West Fjord and the outer ocean through the channels of the Loffoden Isles produce a number of whirlpools, of which the maelstrom is by far the most dangerous. During severe storms from the west, for instance, the current runs continually to the east at the rateofsix knots an hour, without changing its continually to the east at the rate of six knots an hour, without changing its direction for rising or falling tide; and the stream will boil and eddy in such mighty whiris that the largest steamer could hardly contend successfully with the waters. The depth of the whirlpool is only twenty fathoms, but just outside the straits soundings reach from 100 to 200 fathoms. The great danger to vessels is of course not of suction into the heart of the whirlpool, as legends have supposed, but of being dashed to pieces against the rocks.

Should One Sleep After Eating?
We would not revert to this oft-discussed question to give any one's theoretical views or personal belief in the matter, or to bring forward the familiar argument, that because animals sleep just after they have eaten, hence the human animal should do the same, says the Medical Record. Dr. Schule of Fribourg has, however, approached the subject from the chemico-experimental side, and his results are worthy of record. Having analyzed the stomach's contents in two normal subjects a few hours after meals, some of which were followed by sleep and others not, he finds that sleep has for its constant effect the weakening of the stomach's motility and at the same time there is an increase in the acidity of the gastric juice. On the other hand, simple repose in the horizontal position stimulates the motive function of the stomach, but does not increase the acidity of gastric juice. The conclusion is hence reached that, while one should stretch himself out for a rest in the horizontal decubitus after a hearty meal, he should resist the tempting Morpheus, especially if there be present a dilated state of the stomach or if its juices be hyperacid.

Napoleon Bonaparte, when a poor lieutenant, took the agency for a work entitled "L'Histoire de la Revolution." In the foyer of the great Palace of the Louver can be seen today the emperor's canvassing outfit, with the long list of subscribers he secured. George Washington, when young, canvassed around Alexandria, Va., and sold over 200 copies of a work entitled "Bydell's American Savage." Mark Twain was a book agont. Longfellow sold books by subscription, Jay Gould, when starting in life, was a canvasser. Daniel Webster paid his second term's tuition at Dartmouth by handling "De Tocqueville's America" in Merrimac county, New Hampshire. Gen, U. S. Grant canvassed for Irving's "Golumbus." James G. Blaine began life as a canvasser for a "Life of Henry Clay." Bismarck, when at Heidelberg, spent a Vacation in canvassing for one of Blumenbach's handbooks.

Wearing Out Needlessly.
Many people wear themselves out needlessly; their conscience is a tyrant. An exaggerated sense of duty leads a person to anxious, ceaseless activity, to be constantly doing something, over-punctual, never idle a second of time, scorn to rest; such are in unconscious nerve tension. They say they have no time to rest, they have so much to do, not thinking they are rapidly unfitting themselves for probably what would have been their best and greatest work in after years.

Admiral Dewey's body servant, who moved with him from the flagship Olympia to his new home presented to him last autumn in Washington, is Ah Maw, the Chinese boy. Ah Maw is an interesting character, and about as bright and shrewd a Chinaman as one ever meets. He is an enlisted salior in the United States navy, and is temporarily detailed for duty with the admiral. He speaks English with remarkable clearness and fluency, is good natured to an unusual degree, and is markable clearness and fluency, is good natured to an unusual degree, and is perfectly devoted to his gallant master. Ah Maw has sole charge of Admiral Dewey's wardrobe, lays out his clothes to be worn each morning and keeps the admiral's trousers pressed and creased. As Admiral Dewey is exceedingly fastidious about his wearing apparel the duties of Ah Haw in this respect are quite exacting. In a short time the Chinese servant is to return to his native country. He is of a saving disposition and has accumulated a snug fortune, which he is anxious to invest in China.

QUAIL HUNTING IN EGYPT.

A Million a Year Are Ensuared by the Natives by Ingenious Methods.

Much has been said lately of the cap ture of quail in Egypt, touching the protest made by Frenchmen against carrying the birds across French ter-ritory for English use. Until this matthe rose nobody seemed to know that quait existed in Egypt; but they do—by the million. The passage of bands of quail over the coast of the delta of the Nile, from Port Said to Alexandria, between the test settlers are settlers and less a work of the coast of the settlers are settlers. Alle, from Fort Said to Alexandria, begins in September and last a month and a half, the birds arriving in little groups and alighting on the dunes Generally, the chase is made by means of nets of five meters high, which the active results for the said natives extend on corda fastened to poles, in the fashion of curtains gliding on their rods. In reality the net is double. The first near the side of the sea is of meshes very large and loose, but on the back-is another net where the bird will really come and perch itself in the folds formed by this second net of small meshes. There is another method of capture which is more picturesque. Rows of dried branches are placed on the shore. At the foot of each branch is disposed a tuft of fresh herbs in the middle of which is arranged an opening which ends in a snare. The quall, tired by its journey, takes refuge in the branch, then in the bunch of herbs, naturally, without figuring to itself that it is going to put itself into a trap where a native will surprise it and kill it. With these perfected means of destruction, it is not astonishing that each year more than half a million of these poor little birds are taken.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch. natives extend on cords fastened to poles, in the fashion of curtains glid
