New Styles in Armories.

The Thirteenth regiment, Pennsylvania National Guard, is to have a fine new armory in Scranton. The plans of the structure have been adopted, and as outlined by the Scranton Tribune, they show a decided change in the manner of construction from that which hereto-fore prevailed, when armories were built for our citizen soldiery as places in which beautiful exhibition drills could be given, banquets or dances were held and all the comforts of club and social life were found. Our readers are probably more or less familiar with the old-style armory, erected as a sort of pleasure-house for the militia. Let us see what the armory of the future is like, taking the proposed Scranton fortress as a sample.

"The side walls," we glean from the description of the plans, "will extend several feet above the roof, thus making ection for men on top. In case o an attack upon the building a garrison could be stationed there that could work havoc upon an attacking party. The top of the wall is to be made so that it can be patroled by pickets. At each corner and at the entrances towers surmount this wall. These are furnished with firing loops and furnish protection for the guards."

Thus it is seen the structure is not to

for the guards."

Thus it is seen the structure is not to be built for peace, but for war. The thoughtful man will naturally ask himself with whom are the militia-men of Scranton going to war. It is possible that the minute provisions to "work have upon an attacking party" were made to repel the assaults of the Filipinos or the Chinese Boxers? Why is such an impregnable fortress built a hundred miles from the sea coast, at a point where a foreign army can never, except under almost impossible circumstances, expect to reach?

The suggestion that the builders of the Scranton fort are dreaming of a foreign army attacking their city must be cast aside. It is too ridiculous for consideration.

But, nevertheless, the building is to be erected, and according to the plans stated above. A foe is seen in the future, or those gigantic preparations to annihilate him would not be made.

When that foe is a sund for whom the serious proper Prince Tuan then gained complete control over the dowager empress.

stated above. A foe is seen in the future, or those gigantic preparations to annihilate him would not be made. Who that foe is, and for whom the Scranton coal operators and vosted rights owners are pouring out their money to provide against, is the question which the wage-earners of northeastern Pennsylvania can solve by looking across the Atlantic to the imperialistic countries of Europe, where the laborer is kept with his face to the ground from birth to death, through the persuasion of numerous such structures as the Scranton philanthropists have taken the initiative in erecting.

Forthcoming events are said to cast their shadows before.

London, July 11.—Dispatches from the far east continue optimistic, and the disposition is to believe these reports though from Chinese sources, but no rea confidence is possible until the legations if still in existence, are permitted to communicate with their governments.

Alleged official reports received if Shaughai Monday night say that the empress on June 30 resumed the reins of government and appointed Yung Laprime minister. It is said that she sent a dispatch to Nankin by courier at the rate of 100 miles a day thanking the viceroys of the Yang-tse Kiang provinces for their loyalty and urging that they protect foreigners at any cost.

The report reaches Tien-tsin from Chinese sources that the foreigners at Peking have taken possession of one of the prince's palaces, opposite and commanding the British legation, and that the native Christians have been installed there in.

Officials of the Chinese legation declare that the present trouble is entirely the work of Prince Tuan and that the government, the dowager empress and the Chinese generally are against the Boxers. The officials add that they have reason to think that the situation at Peking is improving and that Prince Ching will be able to protect the foreigners. Constitution For Cuba.
Havana, July 11.—At a meeting of the secretaries the question of the formation of an assembly to draw up a constitution for the island was discussed. A desire was shown that the members of the assembly be educated men, having higher qualifications than mere electors and that they have properly interests in the island. A question was raised as to the advisability of having new elections for the members of the assembly or whether the recently elected municipalities should be allowed to choose them. In all probability elections will be held. It is likely also that there will be a new registration in order to give many who have not hitherefor registered an opportunity to vote. The general plan as outlined consists of the election of 25 members, who shall choose ten others from among the leading public officials, such as secretaries, civil governors and judges of the audiencia.
