

WOMAN'S WORLD.

THE TALENTED DAUGHTER AND ASSISTANT OF A FAMOUS SCHOLAR.

Small Industries For Women—Women at the Polls—Barrie's Strange Theory—Poems in Silk—The Very Latest in Note Papers.

Miss Rosamond Rodkinson is assisting her father to give to the world the first complete translation of the Babylonian Talmud ever prepared. For the last five years she has been traveling in every part of the United States, bringing the attention of Jewish communities everywhere to this great work, and interesting her coreligionists as well as prominent churchmen of other denominations in the significance and value of its contents.

Dr. Michael L. Rodkinson, who came to America with his family from Vienna ten years ago, has been laboring at his translation for over 40 years, giving up practically his whole life to it. The original work of 63 large volumes has been reduced to 25 by condensation and a more compact system of treating the wonderful range of subjects dealt with. Dr. Rodkinson's task has been made doubly hard because he is not a good English student, and a great deal of the labor of turning this translation into literary English has fallen on his daughter, who is probably the only woman living who has a thorough knowledge of the Talmud.

Miss Rodkinson, who is only 24 years old, was born in Vienna. "I have lived in the atmosphere of the Talmud ever since I was a baby," she said recently, "and my father, years before I was born, was looked on as the most prominent living exponent of the work. I am in love with my present duties, and I feel that in bringing people in touch with my father's achievement I am opening up to them a mine of knowledge that for sound sense, wide range of matters dealt with and the laws of health, social intercourse and jurisprudence that it lays down has no equal in the world. Its precepts are as valuable today as when they were compiled."

Small Industries For Women.

Two cases that have recently come under the writer's notice would seem to emphasize the statement that the making of homemade bread, cake and pastry offers a profitable occupation outside that part of the field that is covered by the women's exchanges. In one of the cases referred to a young girl living in a suburban town and known to make excellent bread for her own family's use was asked by a neighbor to include for her an extra loaf or two in every baking. Other neighbors heard of and duplicated this arrangement. From this modest beginning the friendly service grew to a business. The village is one much frequented in summer by wealthy New Yorkers, and from May to November the youthful baker has difficulty in filling her orders for bread and rolls even by working from 6 a. m. often till nearly midnight. Her custom has made necessary the replacement of the family cook stove with a fine new range, in whose ovens 16 loaves of bread may be baked at once. The second case is in a certain neighborhood of this city. Dwellers in the locality noticed, a little over a year ago, a sign on the basement door of a modest home in the quarter announcing the sale every Saturday of homemade cakes and pies. One after another the housekeepers in the vicinity made a trial of the wares, found them excellent, and the business has grown from a weekly to a daily industry. The goods are delivered in neat boxes. Certain specialties, such as soft gingerbread and raised biscuit, are provided on certain days of the week. Undoubtedly there are other suburban towns and more city neighborhoods where the service could be introduced to the mutual profit of supplier and consumer.—New York Evening Post.

Women at the Polls.

The fact that there was fighting on election day among the men of Denver is promptly seized upon by eastern papers as an argument against letting women vote. The Boston Herald says: "We do not mean that disturbances would not have occurred in Colorado if the men only had been permitted to vote, but it is clear that the participation of the women in political matters has not produced that amelioration of partisan asperity which it is sometimes assumed would follow." To judge of this, we must know what the political conditions were in Colorado before women voted. Congressman Shafroth, in a public address delivered in Washington about two years ago, said: "I have seen the time when a political convention without a disturbance and the drawing of weapons was rare. That time is past in Colorado, and it is due to the presence of women." What was formerly the rule has now become the exception.

In the old times there were disturbances in almost every city. At this election there was a disturbance in only one city and that under peculiarly aggravating conditions. It is not charged that any woman took part in the riot.

Let us reverse the case. Suppose that in one of the states where both men and women vote several hundred women had engaged in a free fight on election day, while all the men behaved in a perfectly orderly way. Would the bad behavior of the women have been a proof of the unfitness of men to vote? The Herald would hardly say so. It is a poor rule that will not work both ways.—"A. S. B." in Woman's Journal.

Barrie's Strange Theory.

A very strange theory is propounded in Mr. J. M. Barrie's new play. It is one of which those who hold the rights of women to be sacred will rightly disapprove, and assuredly the balance of justice does not seem to be very evenly held between men and women in this new dramatic problem, but the author would have us believe that the story he has set forth is not merely made for the stage, but is one of everyday life, and as such we are asked to accept his solution of the problem propounded as the best in the circumstances. Woman, it needs not to be said, is always forgiving and generous to the opposite sex, but why should a play be written to show that to save one man from the unhappiness which his own sin brings upon him two women must sacrifice themselves? The life of a pure and innocent girl must be clouded, the life of the "other woman" must be wrecked, because if either or both treated according to his deserts the despicable creature who has deceived wife and victim alike the punishment would be greater, we are asked to believe, than the sin warrants! Again, it is suggested in this production that a woman had far better marry a rake than risk spinsterhood, and indeed the character through whom this theory is propounded is even made to say that rather than lose the joys of wifehood and maternity a woman should close her eyes to the fact that her lover has wrecked another woman's honor, and, maybe, broken her heart. Surely it is as unjust to the noble band of spinsters to accept such a theory as it is degrading to the honorable estate of matrimony.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Poems in Silk.

For some years Japan has inundated the markets of the world with her squares of stuff called fukousaks, which are used to wrap up the presents sent to friends in that country, and Europeans have not hesitated to make of them brilliant ornamental designs for modern furniture. In cushions, screens, etc., they introduce a charming freshness; a flight of birds, a swarm of butterflies amid brilliant flowers, giving the eye a vague dream of cheerful light, of fancies and summers that have no end.

But words can only faintly evoke an idea of what these poems in silk really are. It sometimes takes ten years to finish one of these pictures. It makes one think of the embroideries of the "King's House" in days of old, who styled themselves "embroiderers and painters." It is the same obscure and anonymous labor as that of the artisans of the middle ages, who have bequeathed to posterity marvelous liturgical embroideries and sublime cathedrals.

One would really say that embroidery had revived in the country of its origin, Asia. But instead of returning to the land of its cradle it has followed the general evolution toward the north and taken refuge in Japan. No matter where these silks are placed, they are a delight to the eye, a symphony in lines, a poem in colors, and our frail modern art furniture harmonizes splendidly with the mural hangings of an art so intense and so new.—Exchange.

The Latest Note Paper.

Tinted note paper is again in fashion. More than this, the smartest papeterie is elaborately decorated, and the quality of the paper itself has been radically changed for the autumn-winter trade. Cadet gray, French blue, Yale blue and gray green papers, that have always been popular, as well as the bank note, cream laid, kid and linen finishes, are all quite out of the running today. The correspondence supplies now come in pastel or the deeper autumn tones, having a cartridge and burlesp finish.

The pastel tinted sheets are cut quite small indeed. It is an evidence of good taste just now to use small sized paper for letters as well as notes, and all the stamping is done in very small script or old English lettering. Furiously as the black letter fashion raged, it has with unexpected suddenness been dropped from general use, and it is a prevailing notion to have the address stamped across the upper corners of the sheets and at the left hand side. The dating must be given at the conclusion of the missive, and monograms and crests are rarely or never seen on anything but engraved invitations.

James R. Lowell and Women.

In reply to assertions made about James Russell Lowell's attitude toward women, William Dean Howells, in a recent paper, says: "He loved chiefly the companionship of books and of men who loved books, but for women generally he had an amusing diffidence. He revered them and honored them, but he would rather not have them about. This is oversaying it, of course, but the truth is in what I say. There was never a more devoted husband, and he was content to let his devotion to the sex end with that. He especially could not abide difference of opinion in women. He valued their taste, their wit, their humor, but he would have none of their reason. I was by one day when he was arguing a point with one of his nieces, and after it had gone on for some time and the impartial witness must have owned that she was getting the better of him, he closed the controversy by giving her a great kiss, with the words, 'You are a very good girl, my dear,' and practically putting her out of the room. As to women of the flirtatious type, he did not dislike them. No man perhaps does, but he feared them, and he said that with them there was but one way, and that was to run."

Civility Is Good Capital.

Look at the army of salesmen and saleswomen in our stores. There is not, I believe, as capable or honest a corps of workers in the world. Yet a French or English shopgirl will sell twice as many goods in the same time, and the customer will come again and again to be served by the same woman. Why? Because she is civil and courteous.

There is something pitiful as well as ridiculous in the indifference, the hauteur, the actual rudeness of many of the intelligent young men and women behind our counters. Yet civility is their capital. By selling gloves or tinware they earn their living, and the more civil they are the more they sell. Most of my readers know a few saleswomen who have remained in some of the old business houses until an honored old age and by their ability and courtesy have made for themselves hosts of friends. It is a pity that these foolish young people could not learn their business from them.—An American Mother in Ladies' Home Journal.

Praise For Clubwomen.

The Ohio State Federation met on Oct. 24, 25 and 26 in the old and historical city, Marietta. The meeting was admirably planned, and a fine and instructive programme was carried out. "Marietta men attended the opening meetings and enjoyed them," writes a correspondent of the Toledo Blade. Judge Follett, who is known all over the state, was one of these. He said: "It is wonderful what you clubwomen are doing in the way of child education and development. As a member of the board of charities and correction I am in a position to see this. While abroad this summer I went with Miss Hall of the state board to visit a prison in Brussels. She was denied admittance. The women of Europe are not allowed to do reform work in such places. But let our clubwomen go on with their kindergartens and playgrounds, and after awhile there will be no need to visit prisons."

Women at Rochester University.

The University of Rochester opened to women this fall. Two years ago the trustees of the university agreed to admit women on condition that $100,000 to offset the cost of the experiment should be raised. Subsequently the sum required was reduced to $50,000. The morning of the last day of grace dawned, and the women pushing the cause of education at Rochester lacked $8,000 of the amount necessary to succeed. Then Susan B. Anthony arose heroically to the rescue. She subscribed $2,000, and the balance she collected in person just in time to save women from being debarred from the university for another year.

Don't Get Excited.

Lady Georgiana Grey, the oldest resident of Hampton Court Palace, in England, has lately died in her hundredth year. She was once a celebrated beauty. She was the daughter of Earl Grey, the reform statesman, who preceded Lord Melbourne. It is said she believed that the way to live long was not to allow anything to agitate one's feelings and that she deprecated having any member of her family engage in politics, attributing the early death of her brother, the late Earl Grey, who died at 92, to that perilous hobby.

For Winter Furs.

Prudent women are now having their winter furs put in order. Provident women can cleanse their furs at home by applying bran to them. The bran should be heated in an oven, and when quite hot it should be rubbed well into the fur with a piece of flannel. After it has remained in the fur for several hours the garment should be thoroughly shaken to remove all particles and brushed until thoroughly clean. It is often necessary to apply the bran twice if the fur is very soiled.

The latest freak of society women is to perfume themselves with scented tablets, which are distributed in the hems of skirts, in the coat pockets, in the corsets, in the palms of gloves, and even in the coiffure. They are also scattered freely among laces and handkerchiefs. Violet is the favorite perfume, and more violet tablets are sold than those with any other scent.

The eldest daughter of the famous English artist, Laurence Alma-Tadema, poses as a Greek or Roman maid many times for her father, Sir Frederick Leighton and other distinguished artists. She is said to be engaged just now on a short play for Duse, the actress, who is an intimate friend. She is a namesake of her father.

ROUND THE REGION.

Fifteen Scranton councilmen are likely to have the indictments charging them with soliciting and accepting bribes withdrawn as a result of overtures that are now in progress. The agreement being considered is to the effect that the councilmen will resign their offices and refuse to ever again accept a public office of any description.

Generous Treatment.

"Charley dear," said young Mrs. Tokins, "politicians are real unselfish people, aren't they?" "They don't enjoy any such reputation."

"Then they are misunderstood. I never saw anything like the way one side gets up and warns the other that it is making a mistake in its candidate and its platform instead of letting it rush on to disaster and defeat. It is positively noble."—Washington Star.
