An Overwhelming Thought.

Our sun is a third-rate sun, situated in the milky way, one of myriads of stars, and the milky way is itself one of myriads of sectional star accumulations, for these seem to be countless, and to be spread over infinity. At some period of their existence each of these suns had planets circling around it, which, after untold ages, are fit for some sort of human being to inhabit them for a comparatively brief period, after which they still continue for years to circle around without atmosphere, vegetation or inhabitants, as the moon does around our planet. There is nothing so calculated to take the conceit out of an individual who thinks himself an important unit in the universe as astronomy. It teaches that we are less, compared with the universe, than a colony of ants is to us, and that the difference between men is less than that between one ant and another.—London Truth.

ON THE FARM AT THE CLOSE OF DAY

ON THE FARM AT THE CLOSE O

O the farmer's boy is bringing
Up tha cows,
But the birds have ecased their sw
He can hear the squirrels chatter,
As if something were the matter,
While the chestnuts pitter-patter
Through the leaves!
While the big, red sun is sinking,
While the old cow bell is clinking,
He is thinking, thinking, thinking, thinking

And he grieves.

Far away the peacock's calling
To his mate,
And the night is falling, falling,
For it's late!
On the slope the light is dying,
High above, the geese are flying,
And the Past the slope solbing, sight
Past the slope is solbing, sight
Past the slope is solbing, sight
Or some pleasure past achieving
Or some pleasure past achieving
Or some error past retrieving—
Ah, how sad!

Summer's flowers have departed,
And he goes
Onward, home "d, heavy-hearted,
With his woes!
There is sadness in the flowing
Of the cows and in the flowing
Of the water that is going
Going where?
On the hill the shocks are gleaming
Where the sun's last rays are stree
ing—

And they stand like old men dreami Sadly there! Sadly there!

Ah, the day is dying, dying,
And the year
Soon with others will be lying
In the rear!
And the boy goes grieving, releving,
Not for triumphs past achieving,
Nor for triumphs past achieving,
Nor for errors past retrieving
He has had to pass through brambles
In his quest and in the rambles,
In his hurryings and scrambles—
On his toe
There's a bruise, and there are scratche
On his legs in bloody batches!—
'Tis no poet's view he catches—
We wast blame the briar patches
For his wee!

Macaulay's Expert Explanations."

Macaulay's Expert Explanations. The following excerpt from Margaret Macaulay's little volume on her brother, which was printed in 1864 for private circulation, shows Macaulay's cat-like ability to fall on his feet: 'One day Tom said jokingly that there are some things which always inclined him to believe in the predominance of evil in the world. Such, he said, as bread always falling on the buttered side, and the thing you always want being the last you come to. 'Now, I will take up volume after volume of this Shakespeare to look for Hamlet. You will see that I shall come to it the last of all.' The first volume he took opened on Hamlet. Every one laughed. 'What can be a stronger proof of what I said?' cried he; 'for the first time in my life I wished that what I was looking for would come up last, and for the first time in my life it has come up first.'"—Argonaut.

"Valnest Man in Twenty Stories."

"Valuest Man in Twenty Stories."

The elevator boy in a great Broadway building was talking (and a New York Tribune writer was listening):
"Did you see that fellow looking at himself so admiringly in the glass coming down. He's the valuest man in the twenty stories. I've picked out all the passengers who like their looks the best, and I know who is the champion glass user on every floor. There are over 300 men and 100 girls who ride up with me mornings. The men have twenty-one first prizes for conceit, and the girls have only three. The girls never look in the glass unless they are sure I'm ncc looking. If I was as pretty as the typewriter in 406 I would never go away from home. I'd stay in and just look at myself."

HINTS FOR LOCAL REPORTERS.

HINTS FOR LOCAL REPORTERS.

Don't Crowd the Unimportant Details to the Front.

The temptation to crowd unimportant details to the front is always before the reporter for a purely local paper in a small city. To yield is to lose perspective and to impair the vividness of the story.

Local dignitaries, local scenes and local muslcians are in view before the real proceedings begin, and the reporter often discusses them at some length at the opening of his account of the lecture, or political meeting, or other public function.

He does this partly because it is a habit, partly because he may feel the need of making copy and has nothing else in sight, and partly because the local people expect to receive this kind of attention.

The visiting reporter is more likely to pass over unessential preliminary details and bring out at once the spirit importance and genuine interest of the reader.

A close comparison of different reports of the same events long ago convinced me that the visiting reporter for an out of town paper, regardless of comparative ability, usually wrote a better story than the man for the home paper who lived on the ground and apparently had a decided advantage in his knowledge of the place and the people. Why this was the case it was hard to discover. I could only feel the fact and wonder why it should be so.

One night I went to a town fifty miles away and was a visiting reporter myself, sitting by the side of the man who was doing the meeting for the beginning of a political debate in which the whole Congressional District was intensely interested.

I looked at the scene, without doing so consciously, from the standpoint of the whole district, and had little to write until the debaters took the platform and the struggle began. The reporter for the local paper, on the contrary, was busy from the time of his arrival.

He described the stand, gave the names of the committeemen in charge of its construction, catalogued the local dignitaries seated in public view, and laboriously ground out a compliment to the band in this fashion:

"While waiting for the exercises to begin Professor Gustav ranged his band of fourteen pieces, in their new aniforms, on the platform and played a selection from Bohemian Girl' which was received with tremendous applause.

"The band shows remarkable im provement of late, and the suits made a handsome appearance. The band responded to an encore, giving 'Sweet Summer Days,' with its attractive clarinet solo, which was artistically played by Henry Dunn, formerly of the regimental band at Fort Crook."

I glanced at this copy and the secret of so many of my own failures at home stood revealed. Not one in a thousand cared for those fourteen band men, even "in their new uniforms," at that stage of the proceedings. They wanted the debaters brought on at once, and the sparks from their clashing forensic swords to br

The Imitative Blackbird.

A blackbird of Upton Village, Berkshire, has given evidence of a quality supposed to belong only to the caged and trained one—the faculty of imitation of other songs and sounds than its own, and as such an accomplishment must be of interest to the naturalist, perhaps the Spectator would not think its narrative unworthy of its pages. A blackbird native of the place has surprised us lately by adding to his song, and with much apparent self-satisfaction, four notes from the song, "Merrily Danced the Quaker's Wife," always the same and broken off abruptly, and this copied from a captive parakeet in a neighbor's garden, hung outside for its health and pleasure, and trained in its own art of initation and constantly exercising its acquisition, but renouncing it immediately upon perception of the theft. The special interest in this is that it is voluntary acquisition, no training, no teaching, no capture, no dark eage, but a wild blackbird following its own pleasure, and suggesting faculty in the bird beyond what has been attributed to it, and of necessity interesting to the naturalist or lover of birds, their songs and their ways.—The Spectator.

Turquoise Deposits Discovered.

It is believed that turquoise mines richer than heretofore discovered have been opened up at Cerillos, New Mexico. It was at this point, it is believed, that the early Indians obtained the stones brought back by the early Spanish explorers, which now grace some of the crowns of Europe. It is stated that stones of beautiful that as large as eggs have recently been taken out and polished without disclosing any flaws. These are said to be the largest stones ever found.

"She's" Good Points

A pretty girl, with a decided air of being aware of her charms, stood in front of the lion's cage out at the Zoo Sunday afternoon, says the Washington Post. Two young men were near her, and her elaborate unconsciousness of their presence betrayed the fact that she knew they were looking as her.

"Pretty, isn't she?" said one young man in a low voice.

"She's a beauty," said the other, enthusiastically. The pretty girl's cheeks turned a trifle pinker, but she went on talking elegantly to the elderly man with her.

"Beautiful head to draw," commented the first young man. "Look at the way she holds it."

"Uh, hum," assented the other; "that shoulder's beautiful."

The pretty girl turned pinker still, and looked more pronouncedly unconscious than ever.

"Look at those muscles," said the first young man. "Look at the muscles in that leg. You can fairly count 'em."

And the pretty girl turned very red indeed as it dawned upon her that the two admiring young men were discussing the lioness in the cage.

The great product of Poland is at present textiles of cotton and wood. The growth of the city of Lodz (pronounced as though spelled Lootch), a manufacturing center, four or five hours' ride from Warsaw, is really wonderful, and quite American in its rapidity and present proportions. In 1835 Lodz was a small, dirty village of 10,000 inhabitants. To-day it is one of the busiest cities in Europe, with a population of 450,000 and a rank among the first as a manufacturing center. Lodz makes cotton, wool and chemicals, but particularly cotton and cotton fabrics. It is known as the Manchester of Russia.—Russian Correspondence in New York Post.

Mrs. Lasher's Remarkable Story-Dr. Greene's Nervura Cured Her.

MRS. FRED. C. LASHER, JR.

The case of Mrs. Fred. C. Lasher, Jr., a well-known woman of Westport, N. Y., is one of the most interesting on record. It is an actual fact that headaches caused her head to split.

"For thirteen years," she says, "I suffered from terrible headaches night and day, until the bones of my skull opened so that the doctor could lay his thumb right into the opening on to my brain. Two doctors attended me and claimed that I was on the verge of insanity. I was under their care for nine years, but got no relief. Then I tried Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and inside of a year the bones of my head had taken their natural shape again."

That Mrs. Lasher's statements are true is vouched for by reliable men of Westport, and by a Justice of the Peace there. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy cured Mrs. Lasher when all other remedies failed, and it cures thousands of suffering women every year. If your head aches, if you cannot sleep and are weak and nervous, remember that this great curative agent, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy will make you well and strong.
