The undersigned executor of the estate offers, beginning today, every article on or about the premises, located in the P. O. S. of A. Building, Freeland, Pa., at price sacrificing unheard of in modern merchandising. Positively nothing reserved, as everything must be sold preparatory to taking inventory for the settlement of the above estate. Everything must be turned into cash. Prices are no object. Sale begins today and the earlier you call the greater the selection to choose from.

How the Discussion Ended.

It was whispered in Washington that as the Montague Browns were not as rich as other members of the smart set they had to practice economy where it did not show. But tonight there was certainly no hint of economy anywhere. There were strawberries, hothouse grown, and terrapin and canvasback duck, though both were exorbitant in the market. The handsome tablecloth had been ruthlessly cut, and through the opening a cluster of American Beauty roses, their stems on the floor, shot up two feet above the table. It was the most effective table decoration of the winter.

Mrs. Montague Brown, young, pretty and ambitious, smiled a smile of rare pleasure. She reflected complacently that she had captured a cabinet officer for this dinner. The conversation was bowling along smoothly, and she leaned forward to listen. The guest of honor was speaking:

"And still I insist that no woman can do society all the time without neglecting her household and children."

"Not at all," smiled Mrs. Montague. "I think I can persuade you to the contrary if you"—She paused, observing that he was staring with wide open eyes at the doorway. A tiny, half clad figure stood there.

"Mamma, Mary's in the kitchen, and I can't find my nightgown," piped Montague Brown, Jr.—Harper's Magazine.

Too Extravagant by Half.

The manner in which one defaulting cashier was detected was rather peculiar. It was all due to the curiosity of the women of his neighborhood. He went to no expense in the way of dressing, they never heard of his gambling or drinking to any extent, he was a model husband, but he loved a good table. There was nothing unusual in this, but one day when the ladies of the vicinity were discussing the best method of cooking meats the wife of the cashier declared very innocently that her husband doted on ham, but he would not eat it unless it had been boiled in champagne. "Boiled in champagne!" exclaimed the listeners. "Heavens, how expensive! We couldn't afford to have ham on our table often if we cooked it that way."

It was soon noised all around the neighborhood that Cashier Blank was a high liver indeed, and the men began telling of his uplifted ideas of cookery. This soon reached the ears of the directors of the bank, and they concluded it might be wise to investigate the accounts of such an epicure. Plain water was all they could afford for their hams, so the champagne lover was called up and subsequently relegated to the pen, where he had to forego his pet dish for many, many weary days.—Louisville Times.

A Long Separation.

"Home again at last, darling." "John, dearest, you don't look a day older."

"I must. Centuries can't roll over a man's head without leaving traces." "It was ages and ages, wasn't it? And, oh, John, how lonesome I have been!"

"You poor little wifey! If ever I have to go away again, you shall go with me. But you're more beautiful than ever, sweet one. What have you been doing with yourself all the time I was away?"

"Thinking of you, darling, and longing and longing for you to come home."

"If that is the secret of beauty, I ought to have grown a perfect Adonis. And you're sure you recognized me straight off without thinking at least a minute?"

"Of course, you old dear. Do you suppose I could ever forget you?"

"Good gracious! It doesn't seem possible that I've been away only since the day before yesterday, does it, sweetheart?"

"Not a bit more, husband mine, than that we have actually been married a whole month tomorrow."—Pearson's Weekly.

Scotch Medicine.

A stranger came to a provincial Scotch town one day. He looked somewhat of an invalid, and he asked one of the inhabitants to direct him to the chemist's shop.

"The what, sir?" "The chemist's shop."

"Aye, an what kin' o' shop's that, na?"

"Why, the place where you can buy medicine."

"Eh, sir, we've nae sic shop as that here."

"No? What do you do, then, when any one falls ill? Do you take no medicine?"

"Deed, no; not a drap. We've just whisky for the folk an' tar for the sheep, an' that's a' the fessick we deal in."—London Answers.

It Was Strictly Modern.

"She has received a strictly up to date education, you say?"

"Well, rather. She hasn't a bit of practical knowledge about household affairs, but she has more theories than you could get in a book, and she can talk about parliamentary law in a way that will make her shine in any woman's club you can pick out."—Chicago Post.

His College Days.

"Mike," said Plodding Pete, "do you think it does a man much good to go troo college?"

"Not much," replied Meandering Mike. "I went troo a college once, an' all I got was two dictionaries an' a suit of football clothes. De swag wasn't wort' de risk."—Washington Star.

It has been found that a dozen Portuguese oysters contain about six grains of phosphoric acid. French oysters have about four grains per dozen.

It is human nature to deride what we cannot possess, to deny what we cannot understand and to insult those we envy.—Chicago News.
