

Neuralgia's Pangs

Are the warning cries from overworked, worried, weak, hungry and exhausted nerves—nerves that have been abused and neglected until outraged nature could stand the strain no longer without a protest. Every piercing, cutting, tearing, burning, pressing pain of this dreadful disease is a call for help. Why not heed this call while relief is within your reach? Now is the time to begin; and the best of all remedies to use is

"For years I suffered with neuralgia, which especially affected my eyes; and a plain, unvarnished story of my sufferings would read like exaggeration. Words are powerless to express the pain I endured. Three years ago I tried a bottle of Dr. Miles' Nervine, and it helped me so much that I bought a dozen more. Before they were gone the neuralgia was completely cured, and has never bothered me since."

REV. W. B. BALDWIN, Itasca, Texas.

Effective Soap.

The children's toboggan slide is quite an institution in a certain nursery. It is an old ironing board, a good wide one, and when its end is tipped up on a chair it furnishes all kinds of amusement to the small owners.

The other day the children discovered a new joy in the ironing board. They placed it flat upon the floor. Then they smuggled a piece of soap from the bathroom and sponged the board well from end to end. It made a famous slide.

The three boys and the girl, who is the wildest boy of the four, gave themselves plenty of room to run, and the board was long enough to make a good slide.

One after the other they ran. The chase grew exciting. Finally Alice, talking her turn, came with a rush down the hall and across the board. The impetus was too much. Her heels flew up, and she came down hard, very hard.

She gathered herself together with a bewildered look on her face. Then she stood up slowly.

"Dear me," she said, "I didn't know soap was so effective!"

A HOMEMADE HILL.

How Two Boys and Their Father Made a Fine Coasting Ground.

While Tom and Billy lived in New England they found plenty of hills to slide upon—nice, level hills, as Billy said, looking back to the delightful slides longingly. Billy always said "level" when he meant "smooth." But all about the new home the land was hardly broken by even a rippling undulation. The "hills" were really and truly very nice and level!

The sled runners would have grown rusty if the boys' father had not had an inspiration, which the three very speedily put into tangible shape. With a few sticks of joist, some strips of board for stays and a few short planks they put up such a framework as is shown in Fig. 1. There was no making of mortises or tenons. The posts were set in their proper positions right in the snow, and strips of board were then nailed from one to another, as shown. The "stringers" were laid right on top of the posts and nailed there. Then the planks were laid across the two that were inclined and over the level stringers at the top. Afterward a rail was nailed about the whole, as shown in Fig. 2, and the first snowstorm completed the work. Here was a "hill" made to order, and fine sliding it afforded, especially after a snowstorm that left a fine, hard crust. Down the incline the sleds would dash with force enough to carry them far out upon the level, and on this "hill" one did not have to keep watching out for teams that always will appear at the foot of country or village coasting stretches just as a boy and his sled are "unlimbering" for action at the top!

This coast that Tom and Billy's father built for them—with the boys' help, as I have said—was eight feet high, with an incline of 18 feet in length. Up and down one side were steps, each made by two bits of board nailed to the planking, as shown. When these were covered with snow they still afforded the foundations for steps that were quickly made over them in the snow, the steps occupying but 15 inches of space in the coast's six feet of width. The sketches are given with the idea that perhaps other boys and other boys' fathers may feel inclined to give nature a lift too. Such a coasting course is easily, quickly and cheaply built and can be taken down when the snow is gone. It affords sliding not only where hills are wanting, but where there is so much travel as to make coasting in the highway dangerous or where—and this is specially important—there is likely to be company in the coasting that is neither agreeable nor elevating.—Webb Donnell in Philadelphia Ledger.

Likely to Cause Trouble.

It is said that France is trying to buy 100,000 square miles of land from Brazil. The Monroe doctrine declares that the western hemisphere is no longer open to colonization by European powers. The colonies which they already held they could retain without infringing the Monroe doctrine, though they have since lost most of them. But they cannot, consistently with the established policy of this country, acquire new colonies or add to those they had before. The traditional policy of this country, therefore, would not permit France to acquire from Brazil a colony twice as large as England and half as large as France. If this were once permitted, the Monroe doctrine would no longer be respected by other European powers.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Persons who suffer from indigestion can not expect to live long, because they can not eat the food required to nourish the body and the products of the undigested foods they do eat poison the blood. It is important to cure indigestion as soon as possible, and the best method of doing this is to use the preparation known as Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. It digests what you eat and restores all the digestive organs to perfect health. Grover's City drug store.

It is becoming more and more common to line the staircase wall with pictures. On consideration the idea is a good one from other points of view than the artistic. The climb, particularly of a long, unbroken staircase, is to many persons an affair of minutes, and it is not at all unpleasant to be cheered its length by some attractive pictures. In some houses there are series of photographs along the stair, those of celebrities being more often selected than the pictures of friends of the family.
