

DALY AND HACKMAN.

New Story Told of the Late Montana Copper King.

When Marcus Daly was in Washington last it is told that he performed a humane act which very nearly brought a brutal hack driver into the police court, and was a topic of conversation at the hotel and other places which Daly frequented. The story escaped the vigilance of the local newspaper fraternity, and is here published for the first time. Daly was coming out of Chamberlain's one morning when he espied a negro hackman brutally laboring a crippled old horse with a heavy whip in an almost futile effort to increase its speed from a walk to a slow trot, says the Washington Post. Daly hailed the driver, who quickly drew rein and approached the curb with the prospects of obtaining a fare. "Where do you want to go to, boss?" inquired the negro. "I'll want to go with you to the police court if you don't stop beating that poor old horse," replied the millionaire. "You could coax the nag along faster with a handful of oats and a wisp of hay in front of him than you can by beating him from behind. When did you feed him last?" The negro complained that times were hard, that fares were scarce and that he could not afford to provide better for his horse. Daly saw the force of the argument at once and inquired how much the cabman averaged a week, and was told that $8 or $10 was considered a good wage. Daly reached down in his vest pocket and drew forth a roll of bills, from which he peeled a $20 note and handed it to the astonished negro. "There, take that," said the copper king, "and put that rack of bones in the barn and treat him to a banquet of hay and corn and if I see you with him on the streets in the next two weeks I'll have you arrested."

THE DUTY OF MOTHERS.

What suffering frequently results from a mother's ignorance; or more frequently from a mother's neglect to properly instruct her daughter!

Tradition says "woman must suffer," and young women are so taught. There is a little truth and a great deal of exaggeration in this. If a young woman suffers severely she needs treatment, and her mother should see that she gets it.

Many mothers hesitate to take their daughters to a physician for examination; but no mother need hesitate to write freely about her daughter or herself to Mrs. Pinkham and secure the most efficient advice without charge. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass.

Mrs. August Pfalzgraf, of South Byron, Wis., mother of the young lady whose portrait we here publish, wrote Mrs. Pinkham in January, 1899, saying her daughter had suffered for two years with irregular menstruation—had headache all the time, and pain in her side, feet swell, and was generally miserable. Mrs. Pinkham promptly replied with advice, and under date of March, 1899, the mother writes again that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured her daughter of all pains and irregularity.

Nothing in the world equals Mrs. Pinkham's great medicine for regulating woman's peculiar monthly troubles.

Compothe of Oranges.

To prepare a compote of oranges, pare, slice and remove the seeds from six large oranges. Put these in alternate layers of two tablespoonsfuls of sugar in a glass dish and stand in a cool place for three hours. At the end of that time drain off the syrup from the fruit and put it into a saucepan. Add to it the juice of one lemon and boil the mixture slowly for ten minutes. When it is cool turn it over the fruit.

Nourishing Jellies.

Chicken broth and meat juices—the diet usually recommended for "grip patients"—soon becomes tiresome when regularly served as a hot broth or soup; and the same amount of nourishment may be served in a much more appetizing manner in the form of jellies. Chicken jelly alone may be served in variety of ways.

Pieces of the white meat of the fowl may be cut fine and put into a jelly glass and the liquid jelly poured over them. When cold it is appetizing sliced and put between thin slices of bread, buttered, and with the crust taken off, or serve slices of jellied chicken with toasted crackers.

To make the jelly take a fowl weighing about three pounds. Clean and remove the skin and fat. Cut it into pieces and put them into a saucepan with two generous quarts of water, a bay leaf and some pieces of celery. Cover and heat slowly up to the boiling point. Let it simmer for four hours. Then season with salt and strain into glasses and set away to cool. When cold remove the fat. This jelly may be used cold or heated and served like soup.

Proper Way to Cook Beets.

Wring off tops and tap-root instead of cutting, so the beets will not bleed too much in cooking. Boil until very tender, and be sure the water is not too salty; drop in cold water, peel and set on ice until wanted. They may be served in a dozen ways, sliced with vinegar, as a salad, or made very hot and dressed with melted butter and lemon juice. Do not mistake melted butter for drawn butter. Anything with flour in it spoils a beet. Melt the butter with a very little hot water, say a teaspoonful to the tablespoonful of butter. Beat in the lemon juice thoroughly, adding a dash of white and cayenne pepper, also a little sugar, unless the beets are very sweet. By choosing red and yellow beets of equal size and shape, slicing them in half lengthwise and arranging them to alternate around the dish, you may make it very decorative. Another way is to make a rich meat gravy by stewing half a pound of round steak to rags in a pint of water, taking out the meat, then thickening the liquor with a tablespoonful each of butter and cream, and pour it over the sliced beets, after which they must be baked for ten minutes in a very hot oven. Dust with white pepper just as they go to table, and either serve with quartered lemon or squeeze a lemon over the dish.

Household Recipes

Chipped Beef and Mushrooms—Put into a saucepan, with enough cold water to cover it, one-quarter pound of finely shaved dried beef. Let come to a boil, then drain off and add one level tablespoonful butter and two shakes of paprika. Have ready on a hot platter a half-dozen nicely broiled large mushrooms. Put on each of these a shake of paprika and a few drops of lemon juice, also sprinkle over all a quarter-teaspoon salt. Turn over these the beef and gravy, and, if liked, add four tablespoons sweet cream, serving hot.

Cabbage with Cheese—Cut the cabbage in good-sized pieces. Put one piece at a time into rapidly boiling water, having added a tablespoonful of salt and one-fourth teaspoon of soda. Boil rapidly without covering for twenty-five minutes. Turn in a colander, drain and cool. Then chop. Make a sauce of one tablespoonful of butter and flour each, one cup of milk, saltspoonful of salt and a dash of cayenne. Spread a layer of cabbage in a baking dish, cover with sauce, then a layer of grated cheese; repeat, and on top place a layer of crumbs which have been rolled in butter. Bake until the sauce bubbles through the crumbs.

Marlboro Pie—Into two cups of stewed and sifted apple sauce stir while still hot two tablespoonsfuls of butter; beat the yolks of two eggs, add one cup of sugar, the juice of one lemon and half the rind grated, one-quarter teaspoonful of salt and one-half cup of fine cracked crumbs; mix thoroughly and turn into a plate lined and bordered with rich paste; bake in a moderate oven, and when done make a meringue with the whites of four eggs, four teaspoonsfuls of powdered sugar and one tablespoonful of lemon juice; pile it lightly over the surface and set it in a moderate oven until slightly colored; serve cold.

RED SEA EMERALD MINES.

Known as Cleopatra's Mines and Worked by the Romans.

What are known as the emerald mines of Cleopatra lie in the mountain range that extends for a long distance parallel to the Red Sea, and a few leagues west of its coast, in the latitude rather south of Eoofu on the Nile. This, like some other parts of the region—such as the porphyry quarries of Jebel Dokham—was far better known than it is now, and more thickly populated, about twenty centuries ago, and only during the present one, so far as we know, have isolated explorers at long intervals found the way into the treasure houses of ancient Egypt.

When its rulers first used the emerald for personal adornment is uncertain. Whether the large, clear green stones which, according to ancient authorities, ornamented the Egyptian temples were really emeralds is a matter of dispute, but as this gem—owing to its regular shape, which is commonly a six-sided prism—with its beautiful tint, stands less in need of the lapidary's art than many others, it probably formed part of the regalia of princes at a very early period.

That it was known to the Romans is certain, and the mines now revisited used to send their treasures to the gem cutters of the capital. Ever since then the stone has been highly esteemed.

These mines of the Northern Ethiope seem to have remained untouched since the decline and fall of Rome caused them to be deserted. Certainly Edward VII.'s proclamation naming Milner as a paramount lord of the Transvaal would seem to point in this direction. If England doesn't compromise with the Boers they will make her tenure of the country a disagreeable and expensive thing. I believe they can keep up the guerrilla system of warfare they have embarked on for years, and so long as any of them are left in the field bearing arms England will be forced to maintain a heavy military establishment in South Africa, so heavy indeed, that it will soon prove a heart-breaking strain to the taxpayers.

Boers' Prospect of Freedom.

Howard Gregg, of San Francisco, who spent several years in Johannesburg, says that the Boer is not fighting for a hopelessly lost cause. By that, he continued, I do not mean that he will again occupy the position he did prior to the commencement of hostilities, but I am inclined to the opinion that sooner or later a peace will be declared, in which greater or less freedom and independence for the Boers as a nation will be guaranteed. Certainly Edward VII.'s proclamation naming Milner as a paramount lord of the Transvaal would seem to point in this direction. If England doesn't compromise with the Boers they will make her tenure of the country a disagreeable and expensive thing. I believe they can keep up the guerrilla system of warfare they have embarked on for years, and so long as any of them are left in the field bearing arms England will be forced to maintain a heavy military establishment in South Africa, so heavy indeed, that it will soon prove a heart-breaking strain to the taxpayers.

Girls and Their Feet.

"Girls between the ages of sixteen and eighteen generally have big feet," said a fashionable shoemaker, "and they are at such periods of their lives disposed to be fat and flabby, but at twenty-two a remarkable change takes place. The foot then completely subsides, the flabbiness disappears, the flesh of the foot becomes firmer, the muscles and tendons get stronger and the bones become well set. Altogether a great difference is noticeable."

"Yes; we have great difficulty with girls of about seventeen or thereabouts, for then they require a shoe as large as a full-grown woman. When they get older and the foot becomes settled new boots made on the old last will be found too large, and it is only when the young ladies complain that their new shoes are too big that we know the foot has undergone the change just described. Then explanations have to be given, but the shoemaker doesn't mind this so much, for a woman as she grows older likes to be told that her foot is getting smaller."

"After forty the feet of a woman go back to the fat and flabby state, and herein grows the trouble for the shoemaker, who has to state in explanation why the last pair of shoes do not fit, that the cause lies in the fact that her feet are getting bigger."

"No, I don't think that cycling increases the size of a girl's foot. True, one or two of our lady cycling customers have asked us to make their new boots a shade larger, but this difficulty is gotten over by making them 'full.' We have never altered the length."—Washington Star.

Queer Affinities in Names.

The mysterious affinity sometimes existing between a man's name and his trade is a peculiarity often noticed by those who have to do with business directories.

A Canadian town boasts of an undertaker named Death, and in an English town the firm of Foot & Stocking manufactures hosiery. In another town in England Mr. Toe is a shoe-maker and Mr. Heel a clog-maker. Philadelphia has several lawyers named Law, one named Lex and one Judge. Among the teachers in a well-known boys' college preparatory school the music master is a Professor Scales, and it follows as a matter of course that in a Western town Mr. Corner is a broker and Mr. Pie a pastry cook.—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.
