THE PRESIDENT AT PLAY

THE PRESIDENT AT PLAY

You should have seen the president at play a few weeks ago. It was a very, pretty sight. Little Leonora P., a child of 5 or 6, came one day to the White House to see Mrs. McKinley. Leonora arrived all starched and frilled and with her best and primmest manners to the fore. Her old black mammy nurse was with her, and it was evident that Leonora had been instructed to be very polite and not to sit down in the presence of the mistress of the White House unless pressed to do so and, above all, to answer all questions promptly. Both the president and Mrs. McKinley received the child. They did all they could to make her feel at home, but Leonora was evidently a good deal awed. At last Mrs. McKinley, observing the years of the old black mammy, pressed her to sit down and the child, too, but Leonora said admonishingly to her nurse in an undertone and holding herself bolt upright:

"No, mammy. Servants must not said admonishingly to her nurse in an undertone and holding herself bolt upright:

"No, mammy. Servants must not sit."

"Why, Leonora," said Mrs. McKinley, much amused, "mammy's an old woman. And you sit down yourself."

"Oh, yes'm," returned the child gravely, "But, then, I'm people."

This reply nearly bowled the president over, and he and Mrs. McKinley smiled broadly. Then Mrs. McKinley stook out her watch, which contains a portrait of the president. She held it out and said coaxingly:
"Leonora, you cannot tell me of whom this is a picture."

Leonora drew near and scanned the open watch. A bright look swept over her face.

"Oh, yes'm! I know who it is."

"Well, who is it, Leonora?"

"It's Dewey."

This was altogether too much for the president. He went off into a fit of laughter, long and loud.—"The Congressman's Wife" in Saturday Evening Post.

His First Railway Ride.

An old man who has been a farmer for 57 years in Missouri says; "When I began farming, I plowed with a wooden plow, cut wheat and oats with a skekle and thrashed them out by the tramping process, cut the meadow with a seythe and used a wooden tooth harrow. Much of the wheat and corn I raised was eaten by deer, turkeys and prairie chickens. It was no uncommon sight to see as many as 20 deer in a herd. Just think of the jump from an ox team to a railroad! I remember my first trip on the cars. It was in 1876, I think. My wife and I drove from Harmony to Ashley to see some friends. When at Curryville, we concluded to take a trip up into Audrain county to Vandalia. Well, when the train started and we were moving over the prairie the experience was so pleasing and novel that I couldn't help thinking of the wonderful age. It felt so good to be wheeling through space that we remained aboard until we reached Mexico, the county seat of Audrain county. It was wonderful to go that far and back in a day."

that far and back in a day."

Lake Strigeon Becoming Scarce.

Inspector O. B. Sheppard of the Canadian department of fisheries says in his annual report that unless something is done to prevent it sturgeon soon will be practically extinct in the Lake Huron and Georgian bay district. In the northern part of the district, especially in Lake Nipissing and rivers leading therefrom, they are still plentiful, but they are being slaughtered at a fearful rate, one firm having shipped 70,000 pounds of cavine in the season. As the roe is the part of the fish that is of the most value, and it is taken just before spawning, the sturgeon has no chance to reproduce itself, and the cond must shortly come. Mr. Sheppard strongly advises drastic measures of protection for the fish for a few years.

THE HOUSEHOLD.

How to Ventilate a Room-By a Wo-man For Women-Some Beau-tiful Desserts.

But in spite of this constant changing by natural renewal from outside it is a good idea to give a quick and complete change once a day to the air of living rooms, smoking rooms, bedrooms and dining rooms. This is best effected by opening windows that will make a direct draft, keeping in mind that a few minutes only are required to accomplish the purpose. Make this change of air when a room is to be vacant for, say, 15 minutes, which will give time for somewhat heating the cold air taken in. For the sickroom a fireplace is the safest ventilator, lacking which adroit management or devices too elaborate to be here detailed will secure a proper atmosphere. In a large house with few occupants this clean sweeping out of stale air need be resorted to but rarely, as sweeping days, the natural renewal from the cracks and crevices, with the opening of doors from goings and comings, are sufficient.—Ella Morris Kretschmar in Woman's Home Companion.

By a Woman For Women.

Here is a woman's device for keeping the bottom of the skirts dry and clean on rainy days. It consists primarily of a wide strip of waterproof cloth which is designed to be attached to the clothing in such a manner that it forms an elongated pocket around the bottom of the skirts. This pocket may be used as an addition to either a storm skirt or mackintosh, being secured to the inner edge of the skirt by any convenient method. The lower edge then falls considerably below the dress and underskirts and is provided with safety pins. The latter are utilized to fasten the protector to the innermost skirt as high up as is possible without stretching the fabric. It will thus be seen that an inclosing pocket is formed to contain and protect the skirts from all moisture. As the tendency of the device is to raise the clothing from the ground it is not necessary to hold the skirt up with the hand. When the wearer reaches home, the protector can be detached and hung up to dry.

Some Beautiful Desserts.

It is well to go to the caterer for the fancy cream to close an elaborate dimer. There are beautiful shapes to be had in single forms or in a large piece. For a white dinner there are large lilies molded with pistache leaves and stem, or for a pink dinner there are pink roses, also with foliage. An ice cream basket filled with molded fruits of various kinds—apples, pears and peaches—is always attractive, especially if it is passed on a tray covered with sprays of fern.

A large basket made of strips of sponge cake woven like a peach basket and lying on its side, with a quantity of ice cream peaches falling from it, is also pretty, and there are of course any number of other forms. The cakes served with the cream should be the small ones iced in colors purchased at the cateror's or a good bakery, says Harper's Bazar.

Fruit is not necessary at a dinner, but if it is served it should be the choicest to be had, and not a great quantity should be passed. Coffee should be offered in the drawing room to the laddes and to the men wherever they smoke their after dinner cigars.

Fuenture Polish.

A good polish for brass, nickel plate and pewter can be procured of a druggist under the name of tripoli. It is an exceedingly fine powder made from small shells and is sold for a few cents per pound. Moistened with sweet oil it is used like whiting upon silver. With these two simple materials, whiting and tripoli, on hand the house-keeper will have no necessity for special preparations. Tripoli is the best cleansing material for brass bedsteads, andirons and fireplace fittings as well as for exposed plumbing and for bronzes. To polish fine carved wood and cabinet work mix one-half pint linseed oil, half pint of ale and the benten white of an egg with one ounce of alcohel and the sarea countity of an
