Justice In His Answers.

The Rev. John McNeill was holding a revival service at Cardiff, Wales, and announced that he would answer any question about the Bible. At once a note was sent up to him reading as follows:

"Dear Mr. McNeill—If you are seeking to help paying men, kindly tell me who was Cain's wife."

That seemed a poser, and the audience waited with intense interest, tempered with amusement, to see how the good man would extricate himself. After a pause he said:

"I love young men, especially young inquirers for light, and I would give this answer upon a word of advice. It is this: Don't lose your soul's salvation looking after other people's wives!"

FISH WITH WINGS AND BEAK

A Cyrano de Bergerac in the Ocean Has Been Discovered.

Flying fish, called by naturalists "exocoetus," are a common sight to all voyagers in tropical and subtropical seas. Their usual length is from 10 to 12 inches, though one 18 inches long has recently been described. They are enabled to execute flying leaps by means of the great development of their forward or pectoral fins. During flight the fins are kept quietly distended, without any motion. Their flight is rapid, greatly exceeding that of a ship going ten miles an hour, but gradually decreasing in velocity and rarely extending beyond a distance of 500 feet.

Another curious fish is the halfbeak, which has an extraordinarily long protuberance from the end of the lower jaw. They usually attain a length of about a foot. Of course they have not the power of flight as the flying fishes have. Yet naturalists considered them closely related to the flying fish. The relationship has been fully confirmed by a unique specimen discovered in the ichthyological collection of the Academy of Natural Sciences and named "Hemilexocoetus caudimaculatus," or "the half flying fish with a spotted tail."

This curious creature, although only a little over an inch in length, is certainly one of the most interesting discoveries recently made in ichthyology. It has a tall and large forward fin exactly like the flying fish, but its head is wholly different, for the lower jaw is extended into a curious beaklike structure, the mouth being at its base. In this respect it exactly resembles the halfbeak.

Hemilexocoetus is therefore an intermediate form connecting two important groups of fishes, and his advent upon the ichthyological horizon will no doubt be hailed with much interest, as it is just such forms as these that are needed in zoological science to bridge over gaps in the genealogical history of many animate creatures. The specimen in question was obtained from the western coast of Mexico, in the gulf of California.—Philadelphia Record.

White Lead a Deadly Poison.

A vigorous campaign is being carried on in France against the use of blanc de ceruse (carbonate of lead) in painting. This is in accordance with a resolution passed by the superior council of hygiene of France, which ranked white lead among the deadly poisons. It is well known that this pigment is the common cause of the lead poisoning so widespread among painters.

The director of posts and telegraphs has forbidden its use in all the offices under his control, and in addition the painters of Grenoble have gone on strike to demand that all employers should use zinc white instead of lead white. Zinc white is far less poisonous, but more expensive, as owing to its want of "body" more coats have to be laid on.

The painters have sent out a circular to all medical men in France asking for their support. They also ask for the subscriptions of medical men to be paid into the strike fund in the name of those principles of hygiene and sanitation upon which medical men are always insisting.

Oddest of Modern Employments.

Every one who has seen the moving pictures, or kinesiograph exhibitions, which are a common feature of vaudeville shows must have been struck by the fact that these pictures prove that many people, especially women, make a living posing or going through all sorts of action for moving pictures. A few days ago persons walking on the banks of the Schuylkill, near Philadelphia, were startled by seeing what looked like a duel between two women. The regular duello was simulated in every feature, and the affair seemed so realistic that passers by ran for the police. It turned out that the ubiquitous picture machine was the cause of the affair.

What an odd world it will be when a number of people do nothing but simulate all sorts of acts for other people to look at—battles, courtings, duels, getting married, dying, acting the buffoon and in every possible way doing something unreal with no present audience to impress and no one to applaud or hiss except the photographer!

Fate of Longfellow's Birthplace.

The key has been turned in the door of the Longfellow house in Portland, Me., and it is now closed to the public until such time as it is definitely decided what will be done with it. Under the will of the late Mrs. Pierce the house is to go to the Maine Historical society, provided certain conditions are complied with. It is regarded by many members of the society that these conditions are so onerous that there is no possibility of being able to accept them within the time limit set by the will. The Historical society has the matter under consideration and in the hands of a committee. The Daughters of the Revolution and the Women's Literary union have also appointed committees to assist in the work if they are needed.—Portland Argus.

Women and Outdoor Sports.

Dr. Joseph Price, in a paper which he read before the Philadelphia County Medical society the other day, said: "I attribute the enormous increase of appendicitis among women to golf, cricket, the bicycle and other outdoor sports which at times subject them to prolonged physical exertion and inclement weather."

NERVOUSNESS

"I have been doing a little figuring on time," remarked an erratic citizen yesterday, "and I have reached some rather interesting conclusions. I wanted to find out how much time man consumed in keeping tab on time, and I found that, if the whole world is considered in the computation, years would be crowded into a second of time."

"To illustrate what I mean, take a city where 100,000 watches are wound up every day. Now, it takes probably an average of 15 seconds to wind a watch. It would take, then, 1,500,000 seconds to wind 100,000 watches. This would mean 25,000 minutes or 530 hours and 10 minutes, or 25 days and 16 hours. I suppose there are in the city of New Orleans 100,000 watches and clocks to be wound up every day, so that nearly a month is spent in the city every day in winding watches and clocks.

"One man in a year's time would consume 5,475 seconds in winding his watch if he is prompt about it and is willing to give 15 seconds every day to this useful article. This would mean several hours during every year that he kept up the practice. Allowing 25 years as the average life, a man would spend 191,225 seconds, or 3,190 minutes and 41 seconds, or 530 hours and 10 minutes, or 22 days and 20 hours, in winding his watch."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.
