markable Condition of Preparedness. It is generally conceded by military experts that Switzerland is the best organized country in the world from a military point of view, and that its haws governing military service and the organization of the militia are practically perfect, writes the Wash-ington correspondent of the New York Commercial Advertiste. These laws could not be adopted entire in a country where military service is pure-hy voluntary, for they are based upon the compulsory military education of every citizen, but there are many points in the Swiss system and organi-zation which, it is believed, will in time be adopted by every civilized na-tion in the world.

action which, it is believed, will in time be adopted by every civilized na-tion in the world. Switzerland has about 16,000 square miles of territory and a population of about 3,000,000. The active army or "eilte," as it is called, comprises 135,-000 men. These are apportioned among the various branches of the service about as follows: There are about 120,000 infantrymen, less than 3000 cavalry, about 9000 artillerymen and 6000 engineers. The sanitary or meli-cal and administrative troops number 4100. This, the peace strength of Switzerland, is practically 140,000 men. The war strength of that com-try is about 500,000, not on paper, but in actual soldiers, for there are $2,000 trained men in what is known as the first reserve and 275,000 in the second reserve. These two reserves compose what is known as the "landwehr," into which pass all soldiers of the "olite" or active army, after a term of service varying with the different arms. The active army is thirty per course, have no application whatever to the United States, for in this com-try, with its 57,000,000 people organ-ized on the same military basis as Switzerland, there would be a stand-ing army of over 4,000,000 men, and if organized on the basis of territory, the American army would be 250 times as great as that of Switzerland. In Switzerland every able-bodied citzen is enrolled in the military serves.

as great as that of Switzerland. In Switzerland every able-bodied citizen is enrolled in the military serv-ice, beginning at his twentieth year. His term of service, that is the time of life during which he can be called upon by the Government, contnues un-til his forty-fourth year. Government officials, employes of the postoffice and telegraph institutions, government telegraph telegraph institutions, government workshops, hospital employes, peni-tentiary guards and customs officers tentiary guards and customs officers are among those exempt from this war duty. Other exemptions are clergymen, public school teachers, rail-road men and a number of other em-ployments necessary to the transac-tion of public business. Every able-bodied citizen who is exempt, however, must take part in a course of a mili-tary instruction and be enrolled. Crim-inals are excluded from the military service.

mais are excluded from the military service. The "ellte," or active army, is com-posed of men from twenty to thirty-two years of age. The "landwehr." or reserves, is composed of men from thirty-three to forty-five. The army is composed of a general staff and the staffs of the different branches of the service, infantry, cavalry, artillery and engineer corps, medical corps and ad-ministration corps. The examinations for recruits are fairly severe, and no one is permitted to enlist who fails to possess the requisite physical at-tributes of a soldier. The general di-visions of the army are governed by the political division of the country, each district furnishings its quota of troops, so that no soldier when he goes to muster or drill is compelled to un-dertake a long journey. In all the branches of the service the poneonumissionad officers are present.

In all the branches of the service the non-commissioned officers are promot-ed by the captains on the recommenda-

Under this law Switzerland is converted into a single military organization, which, at the first alarm, can turn a warlike face toward the world. Such a state of effectiveness is made necessary by the geographical situation of the country, and the Swiss people do not appear to find anything obnoxious in this all-prevailing military organiza-tion. One reason for this is that it is comminal, a feature of the entire Swiss government in the exercise of all its functions. It would not be necessary nor would it be possible to secure the adoption of the Swiss sys-tem in any country of the character of the United States, but in the mili-tary law of Switzerland, going as it does into the most minute detail of the organization of a people for the in-stant defense of the integrity of their country, many valuable suggestions can be secured for a uniform organiza-tion which will necessarily be effect-ed sooner or later.

The Grand Medicine Man. The crementy of the Grand Medi-cine is an elaborate ritual covering several days, the endiess number of gods and spirits being called upon to minister to the sick man and lengthen his life. The several degrees of the Grand Medicine teach the use of incantations, of medicines and poi-sons, and the requirements necessary to constitute a brave. "When a young man seeks admission to the Grand Medicine Lodge, he first fasts until he sees in his dream some animal (the mink, beaver, otter and fisher being most common), then ornamented with beads or porcupine quills, and the spirit of the animal becomes the friend and companion of the man." The med-leine men have only a limited knowl-edge of herbs, but they are expert in dressing wounds, and the art of ex-tracting barbed arrows from the fesh can be learned from them. In olden times—yes, to within the memory of living Ofibways—the medi-cine man at the funeral ceremony thus addressed the departed: Dear friend, you will not feel lonely while pursuing your journey toward the set-sting sun. I have killed for you and have scalped him. He will ac-company you and provide for you, hunting your food as you need it. The scalp I have taken, use it for your moccasins."—The Open Court. Soon after she said: "Can't you hit him on the head so as to wake him up a bit?" Looking at the young lady, the cabby exclaimed: "Well, miss, I're 'it the hanimal all over 'is bloomin' body except 'is left ear, and I'm savin' that for the last 'ill"-London Answers.

The Cecopa Indians of the Lower Colorado (in both Baja, California and Sonora) are of interest partly because they have practically escaped atten-tion on the part of scientific investi-gators until within a few months ago, and partly because of the customs which distinguish them from most neighboring tribes. They are essen-tially an agricultural folk, though their agriculture is of the most primitive sort, affording, indeed, a better pic-ture of prehistoric agricultural meth-ods than those of any other known tribe. Their customs well illustrate, too, the dependence of primitive in-dustries, modes of life and even habits of thought, on surroundings; for, like the fellaheen of the lower Nile, they are creatures of the river along which they live, driven from the bottom lands by the annual freshets, and byonght back by ensuing droughts to plant anew in the soil fertilized by the annual silt deposit. Perhaps of primary interest among their customs is their disposal of the dead. They not only distribute the properiy of the de-ceased among non-relatives, but burn the body and the habitation together. A considerable part of the tribal lore is connected with the mortuary cus-tom; and custom and lore together afford the remarkable insight into the esoteric life of primitive peoples.
