FOND OF THE GIRLS.

The Love Agains of the Father of His Country.

George Washington's love affairs began at a very early age, and he was to the day of his death "fond of the girls." The first sweetheart was one Mary Bland, with whom he fell in love when he was only 14 years of age. This is ascertained from an entry in one of his diaries, where he refers to her as his "lowland beauty." Having tired of Mary, he wrote to a friend that he had decided to "bury his chaste and troubessme passion," which, having done, he soon found himself enamored of Lucy Cary, a sister-la-wo of Colonel Fairfax. His affection for this young lady lasted for some years, being only interrupted now and again by his natural Virginia passion of making love to every pretty girl whom he met. In: 1752 his first serious love affair was skatteed. Having fallen in love with a certais Miss Betsy Fauntleroy, he determined to ask her to become his wife, but the fates had destined him to marry another, for she rejected his proposals. He afterward came back to her, but found that she had not changed her mind on that score.

His next heartache was caused by a girl in New York after he had become a colonel. She was the helress Mary Phillipse. His business called him away from her; but, having finished this, he returned to New York and proposed to her, but was here, as before, disappointed by her refusal.

In 1753 at. Waynes Ferry, while traveling to Williamsburg with dispatches, he met his future wife, Mrs. Martha Dandridge Custis, the wildow of Daniel Park Custis. We learn from history that she was young, pretty, intelligent and rich. He had been with her all of an afternoon and was to ride away to his home the next morning. On his way he stopped at her home and then and there told of his love and asked her to become his mate for life. This time, contrary to his previous proposats, he was accepted.—Chicago Times-Herafd.

A Rattlennake Story.

In "Life and Sport on the Pacific Const," Horace A. Vachell relates one of his narrow escapes from a friend's bullet: "My cousin and I had been camping and hunting for several days in a sort of paradise valley. One duy, during a leng ride on horseback, we had seen a great many rattlesnakes and killed a few, an exceptional experience. That night my cousin woke up and saw, by the light of the moon, a big rattler crawling across my chest. He lay for a moment fascinated, horror struck, watching the sinuous curves of the reptile.

"Then he quietly reached for his six schooter, but he could not see the reptileslessly, yet quickly, dreading some movement on my part that should precipitate the very thing he dreaded, and then he saw that it was not a snake at all—only the black and yellow stripe of my blanket, which gently rose and fell as I breathed. Had he fired—well, it might have been bad for me, for he confessed that his hand shook."

Expensive Tastes Satisfied.

Nell—I didn't think Cholly would ever nake up his mind to get married. He and such expensive tastes.

Bølle—That accounts for it. He says ils wife is the dearest girl in the world.
