FREELAND, SEPTEMBER 24, 1902.

WILL DO AS HE DID BEFORE.

In his great speech at Carlisle ex-Governor Pattison said:

"From a rereading standpoint of the events of eight years of administration I have not one line or one act of that administration to change. If elected by the suffrages of my fellow-citizens I will do over again just what I did before. During my first period I was compelled to veto over one-third of the legislation enacted because of its iniquity and its unconstitutionality. During the second period about the same percentage of vetoes was necessary. They never succeeded in passing a bill over my veto, except in one instance, and they've been heartily ashamed of that ever since."

The riotous raid on the Union party convention in Philadelphia was a back-breaking blunder. The mendacity of the desperate machine never was more vividly shown than in its stupid attempts to lie itself out of this disgraceful affair. The absurd statements sent forth are too much for honest newspaper proprietors; hence their general refusal to print the false account. The fact is the people would scarcely believe the complete story of criminal doings that might be told. And this was but the beginning. These outlaws are planning still worse things. But the end of their wicked work is near.

One hundred thousand Independent Republican votes for Pattison is considered a low estimate at this hour and the rebellion against Quayism is growing stronger every day. Spread the facts. See that your Republican neighbor reads the story of Pennypacker's service to the boss. It shows why he was picked out to fool the people. But the game won't work. The mask has been torn off and cannot be replaced.

The Philadelphia Press was right when two years ago it said the people of Pennsylvania would never submit to the affliction of another Quay governor. That is why they propose to turn down Pennypacker, the creature of Quayism and its servile apologist.

Elkin's friends are not shedding any tears over the exposure of Pennypacker as an abject tool of the boss. They believe in open, manly fighting, and have no use for sneaks and pharisees. Thousands of them will be missing on election day.

Some Philadelphia Republican statesmen will not get out of jail in time to vote, but still it must be a comfort to them to know that their ticket is headed by a pious man, with a taste for genealogy and old snufflers.

Having whitewashed Quay, Pennypacker approaches the task of kalsomining the Browns with some signs of weariness.

What's the use of building a $4,000,000 capitol, if the state is to be governed from San Lucie, Florida?

It is calculated that "Teddy" will prove a good enough trust-buster until after election.

WHAT PENNYPACKER STANDS FOR.

No Quay machine candidate was ever more clearly branded than ex-Judge Pennypacker. A desperate effort has been made to prevent the truth being known, but in vain. The light has been turned on and the crushing facts so plainly revealed that successful denial is impossible. It was hoped to play another confidence game upon the voters of Pennsylvania; but the scheme of deception has been shown up and each passing day adds to the discreditable story. The past week an effort has been made to excite the interest of young men in behalf of the so-called Republican candidate for governor, while the record of his subserviency to evil influences shows this misguided creature of Quayism to be a most unworthy example. He has earnestly sought to cover the manifold and grievous sins of a political malefactor, who seeks to retain power through using him as a cloak to hide evil doings and purposes.

It is seldom that the story of political intrigue which all honest men must condemn has been so vividly told within the household of Quayism itself. In another column we give the indignant declarations of the most faithful journalistic supporter of the Quay machine in this state. No one can read the bitter denunciations of the Philadelphia Inquirer without perceiving the unprecedented, yet justifiable bitterness caused by Mr. Quay's conduct. What was so freely and frankly said, by way of protest and warning, fairly represented the feelings of nine-tenths of the Republican workers in Pennsylvania; and what they thought and said before and at the time of the state convention, they are still thinking and saying to themselves. They have no love for Democracy; ordinarily they are active and zealous partisans, but they believe in fair play. They are neither sneaks nor hypocrites nor political highwaymen. They have given the Democratic party many a hard tussel, and were ready to do so again this year, until an arrogant boss, to carry out his own selfish purposes, showed his contempt for their wishes and rights.

It is no wonder the Republican party organization in half the counties of the state is standing still in this campaign. The men concerned knew Elkin and believed in him and wanted him for their leader, no matter what other people thought about him. They know nothing of Pennypacker, except that he is the subservient tool of Quay and they don't care what becomes of him. They know that Pennypackerism and Quayism mean one and the same thing, and that is enough to chill the marrow in their bones—at present. Delamater was unpopular enough, but he made a manly canvass of his own, and had earnest friends in many parts of the state.

But Pennypacker is absolutely without personal following or strength anywhere. He is the sole creation of Quayism and has made it abundantly clear that if elected to the governorship he would sink his own feeble will within that of the tyrannical and conscienceless master to whom he owes everything he has been, all that he is and all that he hopes to be in public life. This candidate, indeed, is the biggest sham ever put up by Quay, and his weakness is giving the boss the deepest anxiety.

As the days go by the poll-parrot candidate will grow smaller and smaller, until even the Quay stalwarts will be ashamed of him. Meanwhile, the great battle for the redemption of Pennsylvania from the thralldom and curse of Quayism goes grandly on. Let every good citizen do his part to help this great cause of the people against the bosses; of fair play against machine tyranny; of freemen's rights against political slavery; of honest government against official knavery; of patriotism against despotism.

The enthusiasm of little Democratic Fulton, at the opening of the campaign for the redemption of the state, is an indication of the coming uprising all along the line. In every county the people are preparing to overwhelm Quayism this time. Let every voter do his share of the work.

The Harrisburg convention was bossed by one man, who threw down and cheated his best friend. The Erie convention represented the people and nominated candidates who own themselves. Pennypacker is Quay's own; Pattison is the choice of freemen.

OPEN CHARGES OF BRIBERY

The Story of a Political Crime as Told by Quay's Own Disgusted Friends.

REPUBLICANS UNDER THE LASH

The odious and disgraceful records of political bossism and corruption in Pennsylvania may be searched in vain for a parallel to the shameful story of the nomination of Samuel W. Pennypacker as the so-called Republican candidate for governor. This recent history will not soon be forgotten. The name of the machine candidate was not mentioned until a short time before the Harrisburg convention. At Quay's orders Durham deserted his friend, Attorney General Elkin, who was making a most successful canvass for the nomination, and turned in over eighty delegates from Philadelphia for Pennypacker. At the same time Elkin was ordered out of the fight. He publicly refused to be thrown aside and challenged Pennypacker to a contest in the counties yet to be heard from. In a number of places the lines were thus drawn and in every instance, despite all the resources of the Quay machine, the hard work of his federal office-holders and the corrupt use of money, his choice was beaten. Apparently, the Republican voters taking part in the primaries were overwhelmingly for Elkin. When the convention met Quay bulldozed everything and everybody, taking forty-one pledged delegates from Elkin, and thus forced the unpopular nomination of the candidate of his own choice. Herein is given daily extracts from the editorial columns of the Philadelphia Inquirer, the most stalwart machine and Quay paper in the state, during the days immediately preceding the convention:

Republicans Under the Lash.

"The Republicans of Pennsylvania are today under the lash of Senator Quay. In various counties Elkin and Wattres have met and fought it out, and in every instance Elkin has won by a direct vote of the people. Everything was going smoothly, when suddenly Senator Quay broke away and plunged his party into confusion. It was an outrageous thing to do. Pennsylvania Republicans are today under the lash. The sentiment of the people must be throttled. The Quay orders are out to line up for the Quay candidate. It is not what the people want, but what Quay wants, and he is going to Harrisburg himself to lay violent hands upon the convention."

Quay's Method of Making Candidates.

"Elkin has been making his canvass before the people. Is Quay appealing to the people? By no means. It is easy enough to give orders, but sometimes the people decline to take them, and we shall see whether the people or the orders of Senator Quay are going to prevail in the convention. The Inquirer has great faith in the people; apparently Senator Quay has lost faith in them. There is a splendid opportunity for the people to make themselves heard and to win the fight for fair play."

The People and the Governorship.

"The one question before the Republican party of Pennsylvania to-day is whether the people themselves shall name a candidate for governor, or whether a single individual shall dictate one. Majority rule or one-man dictatorship—that is the question before the Republican voters of Pennsylvania today."

Quay's Political Crime.

"I refuse to be ordered out, bartered or forced out," said Elkin. He will not withdraw. He has been gaining in strength since Quay committed his political crime. It does not seem to be Mr. Quay's way to appeal to the people this year."

Give the People Their Way.

"Some years ago the popular choice of the Republicans of Pennsylvania for governor was General Hastings. Senator Quay insisted upon taking the convention by the throat and nominating Delamater. The result is history. They made up their minds there had not been fair play, and Pattison was elected governor. History repeats itself sometimes."

Trying to Bribe Delegates.

"The Inquirer is in possession of evidence in several cases, showing attempts to bribe Elkin delegates. The coming convention must be conducted in all fairness, or the result may be disastrous."

Elkin's Appeal For Fair Play.

"Elkin is making a grand fight for fair play against the power of federal office-holders and ring rule. Here is what he says: 'Under the circumstances, I would be lacking in a proper appreciation of the duties of citizenship if I failed in standing for a principle that is dear to every Pennsylvania heart; that is to say, that each man shall have a fair chance in an open field before the people on every question in which the public has an interest.'"

Desperate Work of Bootleggers.

"It is Philadelphia and bootleggers against Elkin. We do not believe a single delegate can be bribed, bought or stolen. The fight against him is not that of the people, but cash offers of desperate politicians, who seek to strangle the people, the work of federal office-holders. Quay has tried to cut the throat of the best friend he ever had. He has demanded that Republican leaders join hands in this crime. It would be ruinous for them to do so."

The Dollar Mark of Infamy.

"Any instructed delegate who refuses to vote for Elkin will have the dollar mark of infamy on his brow. All sorts of debauchery is being attempted. One Schuylkill county delegate has been offered $10,000 and a good position thrown in. A Commonwealth strangled or bought would invite destruction."

The Crime Consummated.

On the morning of the convention the Inquirer's Harrisburg special telegram said:

"The straits to which Quay was driven was shown by the direct steal of four delegates by the state committee, acting under his orders. Two Schuylkill men were offered $8,000 each, and refused to take it, so they were thrown out. It was brutally done; but, as Senator Penrose said, the votes were needed and they had to be taken."

Forty-one Delegates Taken.

The day following the convention the Inquirer's Harrisburg correspondent reported Elkin as openly declaring to his friends that "41 delegates, pledged and elected," had been taken from him.

A TRYING ORDEAL.

The Fattening Process of a Marriageable Girl in Tunks.

The marriageable girl in Tunks has a trying ordeal to go through after her betrothal to the man not of her choice, but whose choice she is. She has to be fattened to the required size before the ceremony can take place. As soon as the betrothal takes place she is taken to a room and there cooped up till the fattening process is concluded. Silver shackles are fastened round her wrists and ankles, and the task of her parents and future husband is to increase her bulk till her wrists and ankles fill up the shackles. If the husband is a widower or has "discharged" his first wife, the girl has the shackles of the first spouse placed on her, and she must fill them out.

It takes a long time to do this as a rule, and sometimes it cannot be accomplished in spite of all efforts. It is then open to the future husband to cry off the bargain or waive the condition. In the case of a bachelor he takes care to see that the bracelets and anklets are not too large—that is, if he is fond of the girl—but if he is being forced into the marriage by his parents, he is a great stickler for custom. Stout girls are the more quickly snapped up in Tunks.—Pictorial Magazine.

Alexandrian Scientists.

Among the great scientists of the Alexandrian school, or, rather, mathematicians, were Pappus, one of the greatest of ancient mathematicians; Theon, and his unfortunate daughter, the famous Hypatia—who appears to have been a better mathematician than her father—the story of whose life and tragic death is familiar through Kingsley's novel. Unfortunately none of her works is extant. She was the last of the Alexandrian philosophers who attained any fame. She lived about 415 A. D.

Not only is this old university renowned for the impulse which it gave to science, but it also extended its protection and aid to literature, poetry and the fine arts. For example, Ptolemy Philadelphus did not consider it beneath him to count among his personal friends the poet Callimachus, the author of a treatise on birds, who honorably maintained himself by keeping a school at Alexandria. Among the most distinguished poets may be mentioned Lycophron, whose work "Cassandra" still remains, and Theocritus, whose exquisite bucolics prove how sweet a poet he was.

Hal's Thanks.

"My niece Mary was always a well meaning girl, but she would say the wrong thing almost every time," said one old gentleman to another, "and she's got a boy that's going to be her very counterpart."

The old gentleman's eyes twinkled, and his plain, good natured face was puckered with enjoyment as he drew from his pocketbook a small sheet of note paper.

"I sent Hal a toy monkey that plays all kinds of pranks when it's wound up," said he, chuckling; "sent it to him for his birthday. Now, you listen to this letter of thanks I got from him today. He's just eight years old: 'Dear Uncle Ned—I am delighted with the monkey, thank you. He makes me think of you very often. And whenever mamma winds him up, and he begins to jump mamma and I feel as if we were back at your house where all those toys are, and mamma will look at the toy and say, 'That's your Uncle Ned all over.' Goodbye from your grateful HAL.'—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Apprehensive.

"Please, sir, I wouldn't go out today if I were you," said the old landlady. "Why not?" asked the surprised artist. "Because a crowd of men were looking for you, and they said they were the hanging committee."—Chicago News.

A Difference.

Recently a girl in a public school was asked by her teacher to explain the difference between the words balance and remainder. Her answer was, "You can say 'a man lost his balance and fell,' but you cannot say 'a man lost his remainder and fell.'"
