New Executive Building.

The new executive building contains a central reception room about which are arranged a spacious cabinet room, a suit of rooms for the president, offices for his secretary and for one of the assistant secretaries, a telegraph and telephone room, a large room for the clerks, one for the press and adequate filerooms. Planned under the supervision of Mr. Cortelyou, the president's ex-secretary, the new office building contains every convenience for the dispatch of the great and constantly increasing work of the executive. Intentionally subordinated to the White House, both in location and architecture, or lack of it, the president's offices in time will be made still less coaspicuous by the growth of vines, and when once the public becomes used to the building it will be comes used to the building it will be comes used to the building it will be conflicted than the try covered wall it replaces.—Charles Moore in Century.

"I spend all my time making money enough to buy food and clothes, but is a never failing sign of a healthy stomach. When the breath is bad the stomach is out of order. There is no remedy in the world equal to Kodol Dyspepsia and all stomach disorders. Mrs. Mary S. Crick, of White Plains, Ky. writes: 'I have been a dyspeptic for years—tried all kind of remedies but but continued to grow worse. By the use of Kodol I began to improve at once, and after taking a few bottles am fully restored in weight, health and strength and can eat whatever I like." Kodol digests what you eat and makes the stomach sweet. Grover's City drug store.

A Mystery.

A very small boy was watching his mother sew whalebones in her dress.

"What are they, ma?" he asked.

"Bones," she replied.

"Whose?" continued the little fellow.

"Mine," she answered.

He regarded her a minute in amazement and then asked solemnly, "How did you get 'em out?"

His Shady Observation.

Mr. Brown—Oh, no; I calculate not. You see, now, they're all different shades of Brown.—Life.

"Yes, I consider my life a failure."
"Oh, Henry, how sad! Why should you say that?"

KITCHEN HELPS.

The quickest way of extinguishing the flame of a gasoline stove is to put a little flour on the burner.

Tinware may quickly be cleaned by rubbing it with a damp cloth, dipped in soda. Rub briskly and wipe dry.

A woolen rag wet with kerosene and rubbed over the galvanized iron kitchenware or the zine sink lining will brighten them brilliantly with little labor.

brighten them brilliantly with little labor.

Scalding water poured on apples will cause the skin to slip off easily, saving the labor of paring. The same treatment of bean pods will simplify the shelling of the beans.

A little wood ashes thrown into kitchen utensils, tea or coffee pots that have become discolored, the vessels filled with water, placed on the stove and allowed to boil for a few minutes will cleanse them thoroughly.

Every kitchen should have a set of the little brown or blue earthenware cups for custards and other bakings. Popovers are delicate baked in them, as are also soft corn bread, rice muffins and other luncheon bread.

and other luncheon bread.

Helpful Children Are Happlest.
It is a pathetic truth that more children are spolled by too much love than by too little, or, rather, by love shown in the wrong way.

So anxious is a young mother to see her little one happy, smiling and amused that she often excites it by playing with it, talking and tossing, when she would better let it rest and sleep. The happlest and healthiest babies are those accustomed from the very first to lie on a thick, warm rug on the floor, cooing and crowing to themselves and not expected to be picked up, nursed, rocked, tossed and excited.

And later on the happlest children are those taught to wait on and "help mother," not those perpetually expecting mother to put aside her work to amuse them. It is neither wise nor kind to wait on a child's pleasure and to spend your time picking up its ball, building houses with its bricks, fetching and carrying, for this destroys its powers of self reliance and makes it grow up selish and unit for a world in which the most helpful are the most happy.

Unaired Bedrooms.

In the unaired bedroom long before morning a blanket of heavy carbonic acid gas bovers over the sleeper. As it lowers, the unoxygenated blood grows sluggish, and the sleep becomes a heavy stupor, which exhausts rather than rests the unconscious victim, and he rouses to the morning's duties with utmost reluctance, utterly unfit to perform them. Restful sleep, during which the body is recuperated, the wastes of the working day being repaired by metabolism, which assimilates nourishment and casts out waste products, can be had only in pure, oxygenated air. There is no necessity for its being cold, but it had better be cold than impure. If the air be pure, with the protection of warm, light covers, the body will be warmer in a lower temperature than in a warm, close room under thin covers. Every sleeper in an unaired bedroom is doing for herself slowly what is done instantaneously to helpless dogs and fowls when they are lowered into caves and wells to demonstrate how deadly is the air in their depths.

High Heels and Finished Step.
A young woman vehemently defends the use of high heels. She maintains that they are more in accordance with the laws of nature than heavy, stodgy, so called "common sense" shoe heels. "All the "finishing schools' which teach young women how to attain a graceful carriage," she says, "have one inexonable law that is dinned into one's ears morning, noon and night, 'Do keep off your heels, my dear,' or, what is the same thing, 'Walk more lightly, Miss Blank.' And when you step lightly you invariably rise on your toes more. Try it yourself and see. If you will keep an eye on your low heeled girl, you will see that her movements are anything but graceful. The reason lies in what I have told you. She settles back on her heels, and the result is a logy, stodgy, stiff and uncomfortable gait."

ANNIE'S DOLLS.

ANNIE'S DOLLS.

The One She Liked, the One She Whipped and Their Party.

Little Annie was a very good mother to all her dolls, but not one of them did she think as much of as poor, unfortunate Martha, who had passed through many trials and was sorely afflicted. She once had beautiful black eyes and long golden curls, and could cry, and because she was so pretty Annie deighted to take care of her. She had a companion doll, but Annie was a little tired of her, and when either doll had been naughty the old doll was sure to get whipped more than she deserved.

One day Martha fell and broke a large piece out of her chin, and Annie's sorrow was great. The tears ran down her cheeks, and, taking up dolly, she tried to comfort her. "Come to your mother," she said, "and I will rock you to sleep, and when you wake up I will mend your chin and make you comfortel." So she rocked Martha in a tiny cradle and tucked the sheet over her face to hide the hole in her chin and put her in the closet till afternoon.

Then when Annie's father came home she was brought out and the dreadful wound shown to him, and he was asked to mend it. So he took some wax and heated it and put it carefully over the chin and soon made her look as good as new. Annie jumped up and down with delight and took dolly in her arms and told her not to mind it, as she could not get cold through that hole in her chin any longer.

One day Annie had a tea party for her dolls. She had a table, with pretty toy cups and saucers, a tablecloth, napshir rings at each plate and chairs for the guests. And who do you think the guests were?

On one side of the little table was a grownup chair, on which were standing a wooden goat and a horse. On the next side was the "darling love of a doll," as Annie called her, with the mended chin. On the third side was the unhappy doll who got all the whippings, and on the fourth side was Mother Annie, wishing the hole in the favorite's chin was not stopped up, for it would have been a beautiful place to poke in bread and cake. It would seem so much like eating. Annie did all the eating also, and just as she was finishing the last morsel of cake Martha happened to tumble off the chair. This new accident made her head very weak, and it would keep turning round and round, so that sometimes her eye were toward her back and she would look very funny.

Oh, my, it is such fun.
For this is the train
That's flying from Maine
And arriving at Washington!

Once more I am off like a flash
To carry the New York mail.
I am sure you would guess
'Tis the lightning express

Traveler's Alphabet Game.

The players sit in a row, and the first begins by saying, "I am going on a journey to Athens" (or any place beginning with A). The one sitting next asks, "What will you do there?" The verbs, adjectives and nouns used in the reply must all begin with A, as "amuse alling authors with anecdotes."

If the player answers correctly, it is the next player's turn. He says perhaps, "I am going to Bradford." "What to do there?" "To bring back bread and butter." A third says, "I am going to Constantinople." "What to do there?" "To carry contented cats." Any one who makes a mistake must pay a forfeit.

Included All the Days.

Included All the Days.

Little Johnnie had been toid to write a short composition in which he should say something about the days of the week.

The little fellow thought a few minutes and then triumphantly produced this:

"Monday father and I killed a bear, and there was meat enough to last over Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday."

A CLEVER ILLUSTRATION

WITH CONCLUSIVE PROOF.

There is an old formula in philosophy which says that no two things can occupy the same place at the same time. As a simple illustration, drive a nail into a board and you will find with every stroke of the hammer, the nail will force aside the particles of wood into which it is being driven, finally making a place for itself, and proving that the nail and the wood do not occupy the same place at the same time. It you will be same place at the same time. It you be same place at the same time. If you have you're knewly cannot occupy the same place at the same time. If you have you're knewly cannot occupy the same place at the same time. If you have you're knewly cannot occupy the same place at the same time. If you have you're knewly cannot occupy the same place at the same time. If you have you're knewly cannot occupy the same place at the same time. If you have you're knewly cannot occupy the same place at the same time. If you have you're knewly cannot occupy the same place at the same time. If you have you're knewly cannot occupy the same place at the same time. If you have you're knewly cannot occupy the same place at the same time. If you have you're knewly cannot occupy the same place at the same time. If you have you're knewly cannot occupy the same place at the same time. If you have you're knewly cannot occupy the same place at the same time. If you have you're knewly cannot occupy the same place at the same time. An Ancient Clock.

Perhaps the most interesting gift to the pope on his pontifical jubilee was an ancient clock in the form of a planisphere, dating from 1725. It was constructed at Plaisance by the mathematician, Barnardo Facini, who presented it to the wife of Philip II. of Spain. The planisphere gives the hours and the minutes according to the Italian and Spanish style, the length of days and nights according to the seasons, the daily position of the sun according to the signs of the zodiac, solar and thus recipieses, the real seasons and the seasons according to astronomy. Notwithstanding the enormous progress made in mechanics since its construction, the movement of the wheels is absolutely unknown. When once it broke down, no one was found able to repair it.

The Plumb Line In Porto Rico.

The Plumb Line In Porto Rico.

One of the curious things that men of science have discovered in their innumerable efforts to measure and map the earth with the least possible error is the fact that there are places where the direction of a plumb line is not vertical. Irregularities of density in the crust of the globe may produce this phenomenon. A remarkable instance has been found in our new is and of Porto Rico, where the deviation from the vertical is so great that in mapping the island the northern and southern coast lines as-shown on the older maps had each to be moved inward half a mile.

Bo You Enjoy
What You Eat?
You can eat whatever and whenver you like if you take Kodol. By the use of this remedy disordered digestion and diseased stomachs are so completely restored to health, and the full performance of their functions naturally, that such foods as would tie one into a double-bow-knot, are eaten without even a "rumbling" and with a positive pleasure and enjoyment. And what is more—these foods are assimilated and transformed into the kind of nutriment that sappropriated by the blood and tissues.
Kodol is the only digestant or combination of digestants that will digest all classes of food. In addition to this fact, it contains, in assimilative form, the greatest known tonic and reconstructive properties.
Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia and all disorders arising therefrom.
