DEPT. OF AGRICULTURE ISSUE BULLETIN ON FIGHTING FARM FIRES

A bulletin just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, shows that the greatest farm fire risks are those presented by chimneys, the cellar, roofing, fireplaces, stairways and heating and lighting equipment.

This department, in co-operation with fire prevention organizations, has been working to eliminate farm fire hazards and minimize those hazards which are unavoidable.

Prevention is mainly up to the individual. Poor building construction is a menace. Fire-stopping in framework and fire-resistive floor construction are important.

Lack of adequate maintenance is another great danger. Buildings and equipment should be regularly inspected and any needed repairs should be made immediately.

The farm fire loss is high, partly because of lack of near-by fire-fighting organizations. But a little care by every farmer will do wonders in lowering the waste.
