THE JOY OF SERVING

This beautiful morning I left my bed early, put on part of my clothing and went to a front window where a rocker stood waiting. I love to watch early morning passers, while my morning paper is coming.

The newsboy presently appeared. With him was a much smaller boy—evidently a brother—not over five at the very most. This little fellow carried three or four papers under his senior, his eyes dancing with delight, at the trust reposed in him. I could hear his words, be he evidently asked if he should deliver my paper; the big brother nodded, as any great personage might nod in approval of a subordinate.

The tiny boy dashed up my steps—seven of them, and it required effort for his short legs to accomplish the man-size elevations; how he swung and glowed and smiled in the sweet morning air, wholly oblivious to his spectacled eyes that watched him from behind the lace curtain! With an expression of profound interest he singled out one of the three papers and placed it carefully at the bottom of my door, just as near to putting it into my hand as possible; then he turned and sped away, laughing, as fast as those short legs could carry him.

His financial accomplishment could not have been over a half-cent—no it was not that; the little fellow was in glass because he could do something good—something useful for somebody and do it well. For him, the delivery of that newspaper was a super-accomplishment. Had I been fully dressed, I might have frightened him by rushing out and seizing the darling in my arms.

Do we grown-ups get a "kick" out of the worthy deeds we do for others, if any? Sometimes I have to study awhile, before I can recall any good deed I have done lately. I have not quite become "as one of these."

Of self-same color is her hair, whether unfolded or in twines. Heigh-ho, fair Rosaline!

The feminine hairdress calls for more than distinctive style to be perfectly successful. It calls for texture, gloss and finish as well.

And this is not alone to be attained through purely artificial means. The credo of hair beauty is the belief and the practice of the (tremendously important) daily brushing. There is no better way to develop hair beauty. The softness and lustre which come from this regular care cannot be duplicated, not even with a paint of brilliantine.

It is more than merely surface beauty which brushing develops. It is the sheen of health and scalp activity and no artificial aid can stimulate this.

The more successful way to brush the hair is with military brushes. When using hand brushes the pressure falls directly on the hair instead of being distributed between the scalp and the handle of the brush. Also, the military brushes make for an ever regularity of movement.

After one week of regular brushing you won't recognize your hair. I cannot understand why so many women neglect this so easily cultivated part of their beauty.

Next in importance in developing the loveliness of your hair is the frequent use of a good tonic. Many of you, I find, ask me about hair tonics when there is definite injury to be corrected, whether it be premature graying, falling hair or broken dry strands. A hair tonic should be more than a corrective to you. It is first of all a preventivity of all those conditions of hair ill health.

There are three classifications of hair—the normal, dry and the oily, and the tonic you select should be specifically suited to your particular type. Rub it well into the scalp, a drop at a time, using the very ends of your fingertips, not the cushioned pads of the first joint of your fingers. Not only will the tonic stimulate hair growth and strengthen the roots, but it will help along the good work of brushing until a fine, natural gloss has become a permanent feature of your charm.

The third important unit in cultivating the high lights of hair beauty is that much used, often abused product—brilliantine. There are certain arrangements of the hair which demand the maximum of lustre. The satin-smooth bob is one such style, and to those who wear this type of hairdress, I address the caution—a very little brilliantine goes a long, long way. One single drop in the palm of your hand and then rubbed briskly into the hair brush will be more than sufficient for the average person. Another method of applying brilliantine is by placing a drop or two in the palm of the hand, rubbing both hands together, then smoothing on the hair.

Making Friends

Making of friends, says a philosopher in the Woman's Home Companion, half the time does not mean going out to meet people; it means going in to meet and correct ourselves.
