THE ALL MOUNTAINEERS

Two weeks ago there appeared on the High School Page of The Post an editorial written by a Lehman High School student. In subject matter and style the editorial was one of the best that has appeared in The Post this year. At the time of its appearance the editor refrained from comment feeling that such an editorial would surely bring forth a generous number of letters for The Contributors' Column. To date no letters have been forthcoming. The editor, therefore, takes this opportunity to personally congratulate the youthful writer and commend the enthusiasm and the idealism that appeared in that brief editorial on an "All Mountaineer Football Team" for this section of the county.

The idea of picking a football team from among the best players on the school teams of this region is a good one. Such a team would be able to meet the best teams of Wyoming Valley on an equal basis and would be able to bring recognition to this locality in an athletic way which none of the present high school teams are now strong enough to do. By the very nature of the case "The All-Mountaineer" team would have only one game to play and that a post-season game. It would rally back of it an enthusiastic group of supporters from every community in this district and even if the team were defeated its purpose would have been accomplished in bringing the citizens of all of the communities in this section together backing one common project. Let's hear something from our readers on this subject of picking an "All-Mountaineer" football team to represent this section in a post-season game?

WHERE'S THE REFORMER?

The question now seems to be, "Who was back of the recent punch board raids in Dallas?" Whoever it was he certainly has the courage of his convictions and about as much backbone as a jelly fish. If the person back of the raids really had the welfare of Dallas at heart he would come forward now and carry the fight to a finish. If he were really interested in this community and its well-being he would have accomplished the cleaning out of punch boards without all the nasty publicity connected with it. He, then would have won a place in the admiration of decent citizens of this community. Some day sixth-rate politicians will use their heads and realize that Dallas has some civic pride and that there are some of us who like to call it home and are not just existing here to further our political ambitions.

EARL MONK

This fellow Earl Monk who now resides at Shavertown who has made large improvements and extensions in his plumbing business, can now boast of the finest hardware store this side of Luzerne. Earl has now taken over the agency of the Bemer-Tully radio, a radio that is known for its performance, quietness and selectivity.

GEORGE GAERTNER

When the boys that take interest in borough affairs were active before the primary, why did they not take into consideration George Gaertner for a position as school director or council. Mr. Gaertner would be an ideal person for either of these positions, is a home-owner, takes great interest in the affairs of the town, and is a citizen Dallas can feel proud of. Perhaps in the future, he will allow the use of his name for some borough office.

HUNTING SEASON

Many of the boys that follow the paths through the fields and woods in search of game are anxiously awaiting November 1st. Dallas seems to have plenty of persons who are followers of hunting and fishing, and after all, what is nicer or more satisfying than for a couple of men to enjoy mother nature by tramping over hill and dale with the fellowship of his friends and to have a good faithful dog, help him in the hunting of his game.

HUNTING LODGES

Several groups of men of Dallas and surrounding communities can boast of fine hunting lodges and private hunting grounds in and around the various counties.

HUNTERS

Wardan Kunkle, Jim Oliver, Clyde Veitch, A. L. Turner, Ralph Hallock, Harry Garrahan, F. F. Morris, John Wilson, Joe Wallow and a score of others are all waiting for hunting season to open. The scribe is supposed to be a hunter but we usually depend on our game dinners to come from invitations or a few rabbits with the compliments of the real hunters. SO don't forget boys, we like rabbits.

A SURE BET

Jim Beseker looks like a sure bet as our next school director. At this writing Stanley Doll has not stated whether or not he intends to make an active canvass of votes.

Wild Pigeons Go As Forests Are Cleared

Bears, Wolves and Foxes Also Become Scarce So Daddy
Emmons Takes Up Fishing at
Harvey Lake

As the forests were cleared away and the country became more thickly settled the pigeons grew timid and gradually ceased to return in such large flocks. In later years Daddy Emmons turned his attention to fishing, at which he was as successful as in trapping pigeons. His home was at Dallas, but early in each returning spring he went to Harvey's Lake and took possession of his cabin, which stood at the edge of a little grove near the eastern end of the old bridge at the southeastern inlet, and there lived alone, spending his whole time at fishing. He made a business of it, and for many years, until his strength failed on account of his age, he succeeded in getting a living out of it. His honest old face was for many years associated with the memory of Harvey's Lake, and with many of us it will never be forgotten. Harvey's Lake at one time abounded in speckled trout, but the artificial introduction of other fish has exterminated the trout. Game of every kind was also very abundant about there. It was a famous hunting and fishing ground. Ephraim King once informed me that he had killed over a hundred deer in and about Harvey's Lake. Hunting dogs were seldom needed in his best hunting days, fifty to seventy years ago. The deer were oftenest killed by rowing quietly up to them with a light in the boat while they were feeding in the shore grass or drinking just at the edge of the water. The torch dazed them, and its reflection in their bright eyes made a sure mark for the hunter. Bears and wolves ceased to be a terror before the first half of the century ended, but they were seen occasionally in and about Dallas and Lake township at a later date. Watch dogs were employed at one time to protect the sheep from attacks by wolves, but the dogs had to be of such a ferocious kind that it sometimes became a question as to which were the more destructive in the sheepfold, and many good watch dogs had to be killed for
