MR. GRUNDY EXPLAINS HIS TARIFF PESITIO ..

Telis Senate Commitice enna. is Agricultura. as well as ndus- Walsh, of Montana, and Blaine, of trial State. Justifies activities.

Washington .- Briefly summarized, Dakota. the following embodies the principal points made by Joseph R. Grundy in his statement submitted to the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee in position to revision of the industrial Washington when he was called upon to testify.

Mr. Grundy's opening statement was that there was "nothing new or strange" about his being in Washington during a tariff revision, inasmuch as he has been coming here in such periods for the past 32 or 33 years. He reminded the Committee that no member thereof was in Congress when he first came to Washington in connection with tariff legislation, in 1897, and that, as a matter of fact, there is but one man now in Congress-Senator Warren, of Wyoming---who was a member that long ago. Referring to his own position as a protectionist, he said:

"Some of the members of this Committee may not like to admit it, but there are few left who will attempt to deny that the entire industrial and financial structure of the United States has been erected upon the principle of tariff protection."

As a preliminary to his categorical statement of the reasons why he has been in Washington for the past ten months, Mr. Grundy offered the Committee a copy of a tariff resolution which he had prepared and which was unanimously adopted by the 76 Pennsylvania delegates to the Republican National Convention in 1928. It was then sent to the Resolutions Committee, of which Senator Borah was a member, he said, and, according to his information, was the basis of the Republican tariff plank in the 1928 campaign.

activities in that campaign, at the request of the Republican National Committee, and then referred to the notice of tariff hearings sent out by the Ways and Means Committee last December, emphasizing that these notices were to the effect that there was to be a "general" tariff revision. "I received one of those invitations alone.

and it was in response thereto that I came here," he said. "Very probably, however, I should have come anyway. I merely mention the fact that I was invited. The complaint seems to be that I have stayed. There have seemed to me to be no reasons why I shouldn't, and several why I should. "First, it was merely consistent with an active interest in tariff revision which, as I have said, has extended over a period of some 32 or 33 years and considerably antedates the tenure of office of any member of broad tariff needs of Pennsylvania, could not be working for anything other than the best interests of the country as a whole."

The witness then hit squarely at four of the five members of the Committee-Senators Caraway, of Arkansas, chairman; Dorah. of Idaho; Wisconsin-as well as Senators Pat Harrison, of Missistipai; Ashurst, of Arizona, and McMarler, of South

Referring to the manner in which Senators from the mid-West and West dwell upon the "agricultural" interset of their States, in their opschedules of the tariff law, Mr. Grundy produced a table showing that while Pennsylvania is the second industrial State in the Union, it also has "77,000 more farms and some four hundred millions of dollars more of farm investments than the average for these seven so-called 'agricultural States."

This line of attack by the witness was carried even further when, in another tabular presentation, he took the same seven States, added fifteen others to them, and then showed that the total income tax paid by the entire 22 was $5,000,000 less than that of Pennsylvania.

"Perusal of these figures," he said, "justifies the statement that if wolume of voice in the United States Senate were proportioned to population, productive power, or the total sum contributed toward the national upkeep, some of those States which are now most vocal would need amplifiers to make their whispers heard. The truth of the matter is that such States as Arizona, South Dakota, Idaho, Mississippi, etc., do not pay enough toward the upkeep of the Government to cover the costs of collection, and States like Pennsylvania, hamstrung as they are by adverse legislation, support these backward Commonwealths and provide them with their good roads, their postoffices, their river improvements and other Federal aid, figuratively on a golden platter."

The climax of the witness' statistical presentation was in a table in which the same seven States were compared with the seven industrial States of Connecticut, Illipois, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania. The industrial comparison was crushing, and as to income tax it was shown that the He also told of his Pennsylvania seven industrial States pay in excess of 64% of the country's total, while the whole seven "so-called 'agricultural' States" pay only slightly more than 21/2%.

Mr. Grundy also presented a table showing 25 States whose total industrial importance, measured by value of output, is equalled by Pennsylvania

The witness went directly after Senator Borah, of Idaho, one of the members of the Committee and author of one of the movements in the Senate to have the tariff revision limited to agricultural products. He not only emphasized Borah's membership on the Resolutions Committee which drew the Republican tariff plank promising "revision wherever necessary," but quoted the following from the Senator's campaign speech in the Boston Arena, November 2, 1928:

"Now, my friends, there is nothing more vital in the closing hours of this campaign than the preservation of the policy upon which the industries of this country have been built up and the standard of wages has been built up. Let us keep it in the hands of those who have believed in it from the beginning. Let us entrust it to those who are not in danger of having any lapse of mind after the election. What we want, my friends, in the next four years, is a policy which will undoubtedly and effectively protect American labor and American industries against the inroads which may come from Europe both in manufactured goods and in labor." "This," said Mr. Grundy, "is Senator Borah-not in 1929, standing in the United States Senate, doing his utmost to limit tariff revision to agricultural products, but Senator Borah on November 2nd, 1928, standing on the platform of the Arena in Boston, interpreting and proclaiming to the industrialists and the industrial workers of Massachusetts and the country at large, the Republican Party's pledge, and his own pledge, of adequate and effective tariff protection for American labor and American industries. "What influences have caused the esteemed Senator from Idaho to completely reverse himself within a period of a few months: what changes of mind have prompted him to regard the Republican Platform as a 'mere scrap of paper.' I do not pretend to say. But I do say that he is the embodiment of one of the many reasons why I or any other Republican and industrialist who has the courage to fight for his rights. should be here in Washington to do whatever he legitimately can to offset the determined efforts of one who, in the campaign, publicly proclaimed himself and his Party to be for one thing, and when the campaign is over, and the people have voted for the pledges made, stands for quite another thing. "The Senator from Idaho, who speaks so eloquently for agriculture, fifth the number of farms that are in Pennsylvania, only two-fifths of the than one-fifteenth of the industry of Pennsylvania, and which contributes to the national treasury the mag-

Recalling the days of the World War, many women still make pajamas and other hospital garments, many knit sweaters, and more than 2,500, 000 surgical diessings were rolled by volunteer workers for the American Red Cross Chapters all over the nation, in the year just closed.

The hospital garments are given to veterans and the surgical dressings go to civilian or Veterans' Bureau hospitals, or wherever needed Many Chapters also maintain well stocked closets of surgical dressings and garments, in order to be prepared should a disaster strike their communities. Volunteer workers make children's clothing and layettes which are distributed in time of major catastrophes. The Motor Corps of Red Cross women and the Canteen Service, also first created during the World War, still are maintained by many Red Cross Chapters. Last year the various Motor Corps, some with ambulances, answered about 30,000 calls, and the Canteens served more than 20,000 persons. They were especially active where floods or forest fires or other catastrophes called for feeding refugees or firemen engaged in active work fighting disaster. Another activity of women volunteers is that of filling Christmas bags -small cretonne ditty bags-to send to soldiers and sailors who are stationed at posts or ports abroad. More than 40,000 of these are sent each year for distribution to the Americans

CHURCHMEN ASK SUPPORT OF RED CROSS ROLL CALL

Leading churchmen of the nation have joined in asking public support of the annual Roll Call of the American Red Cross. Two distinguished leaders who have sent messages to their congregations all over the country are quoted, as follows:

"I plead for an extension of our Red Cross membership until we can call a roll of every adult American," stated the Most Reverend Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore. "I would like to see the children listed in the organization by their parents. I plead for it because of the spiritual reaction I visualize in our millions of contributing members."

"As president of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. I bespeak for the Roll Call of the American Red Cross the fullest cooperation of all the churches in the constituency of the Council," writes Francis J. Mc-Connell, president of the Federal Council. "I cannot imagine that there is any minister who will not be grateful for the opportunity to call the attention of his people to the work of the Red Cross and to urge them to enroll in its member-this Committee.

"Second, I felt a certain pride of indirect authorship in the Republican Party's pledge of tariff revision wherever needed.

"Third, I had responded to the Republican National Committee's request to help win the election in order that the policies of the Republican Party, as expressed in its platform. might be carried into effect, and it seemed to me that in carrying forward that work I had assumed a sort of moral responsibility to the Pennsylvania citizenship to give whatever assistance I could to the fruition of the foremost economic pledge made by the Party in that campaign.

"Fourth, I was not here seeking any special privilege, or exercising any improper influence, or in support of any particular rate or schedule, or in behalf of any particular industry. or as the representative of any particular organization. My primary interest has been in seeing the basis of our ad valorem rates changed from the foreign valuation, which practically permits the foreigner to name the duty he shall pay, to some domestic basis, which would bring that phase of our tariff law under the administration of our own customs authorities.

"Fifth, in common with many others, I have the firm conviction that members of Congress, elected as the servants of the people, can learn a great deal more about the actual tariff requirements of American industry from men who have invested their money and spent their lives in it, than they can from some of the so-called 'experts' of the Tariff Commission, many of whom are swivelchair economists who never have spent an hour in an industrial plant and never have had first-hand contact with any of the practical problems which are the very essence of that upon which they assume to speak with authority.

"Sixth, I have for many years taken some part in the public affairs and Republican activities in Pennsylvania, and I think I fairly well know the State's economic requirements. I know. too, therefore, that the needs represents a State which has only oneof Pennsylvania, representing as it does practically every agricultural crop and every industrial activity in farm value of Pennsylvania, less the country as a whole, are an index to, and a cross-section of, the economic requirements of the entire nation. Anyone, therefore, acquainted nificent sum of five one-hundredths of with, and seeking to procure, the one per cent of the total income tax."
