A Shawl Worth $200,000

This Paisley shawl, which has been in the family of Francis Scott Key for centuries, is shown here gracing Debora Key, a descendant of the man who wrote "The Star Spangled Banner." The shawl will find a permanent shrine in the former residence at Frederick, Md., of Chief Justice Roger Brooke Taney of the U. S. Supreme Court, the author of the Dred Scott decision. Hammond Clary, a banker and collector of Americana, has bought the shawl and will place it with other objects relating to American history. Brides of Key men and daughters of Key men wore this shawl at their weddings.

EDUCATION

The amount of schools in the United States today is brought about through democracy. During the Colonial period a few of the colonies provided schools, but these were not sufficient for the needs of the children. It was not until people began to come forward as masters of the government that provisions were made for the education of children.

The constitution of the United States says nothing about education. The States manage their schools as they wish. Each State has its own system of public schools.

The details of educational policy is left to local government. The details of educational policy is left to local governments. The school management deals with the election or appointment of teachers, branches of study taught, use of textbooks, between what ages children must attend school. In some States school officers are independent of other public officers. Each community is left to manage its schools pretty much in its own way.

A school district is a unit of school government. This area may take in just a community with one school or a wider area containing any number of schools. For each district men are elected as a governing body. This is called the school board.

In addition to the regular teaching force there is an elaborate system of superintendents. In the county there is a superintendent, and in the city is the city superintendent. In the State the officer is called superintendent of public instruction. The superintendent, in most cases, does not exercise a great deal of power, but his work is more of an advisory nature.

The State first provides a system of common schools, in which the fundamental branches are taught. Above the common schools is the system of high schools. In high school the higher sciences in literature, history and civics and higher mathematics. In most first class high schools the ancient and modern languages are taught. The university is provided by the State so a pupil may attend without paying a tuition. At least one normal school is maintained by each State. These provide a supply of good teachers for the common schools. In Pennsylvania there are thirteen State normal schools.

Although the constitution says nothing about education, the government at Washington has engaged in a number of educational activities. The Federal government supports and controls two great training schools, the Military Academy at West Point and the Naval Academy at Annapolis. There are a few other schools brought about by the Federal government, such as Indian schools and higher military schools.

The government appropriates a certain amount of money each year for the financing of schools. Each sum of money contributed by the Federal government must be matched by an equal amount contributed by the State.

The chief educational officer of the Federal government is the Commissioner of Education. The schools in our country are among the very best in the world.

We have completed our football schedule for this season and feel that our boys have learned a great deal about the game. We are deeply indebted to our coach, Earl Young, who gave his time willingly after school during the week. We quote the following: "For when the one great scorer comes to write against your name, he writes not that you won or lost, but how you played the game."

We think the above quotation sums up nicely the teaching instilled into our boys by our popular coach, Earl Young. At no time did he teach the boys to be unfair or to take advantage of the other fellow. Being well versed in this great sport, Earl taught the boys the way they should play the game and at times people misunderstood some of the plays the boys were legitimately allowed to use. When our boys leave our Alma Mater for some higher school of learning they will say that their time under the direction of Coach Young was profitably spent, that they, too, will be able to participate in this sport, and who knows but that one of our boys may some day be on America's All-American football team.

We are not forgetting what Earl Young did for us, and the wonderful backing of our parents and fellow townsmen.

Basket Ball Notes

Beginning this week our boys will start basket ball practice. We hope that all our boys will turn out and try for the first team. We will also have a girls' team and positions on the team will be keenly contested. Jack Roberts, the ever-smiling Dallas booster, received permission from the board to use the gym so that his all-star team may practice evenings. Jack is out to give Dallas a good all-star team that the town will be glad to boost. He is also forming a ladies' all-star team, which is also an added feature. Come out and boost the men and women. The proceeds from the games will be placed in the treasury of the Dallas High School Athletic Association to help pay our present deficit.

Some Outstanding High School Boosters

Mr. Addison D. Hull on Monday evening donated his services and machines to clean the gym floor. He arrived at the school at 6:30 and at 11:30 the job was completed.

When Mr. Hull, with the aid of a number of the high school boys and men from the town finished the floor looked like new.

Thanksgiving afternoon he returned and with the aid of a number of men the floor received an application of floor dressing which certainly made it look very attractive.

The men and boys were loud in praise of the work he did and when he left they said "there goes a good sport."

We think they hit the nail on the head.

The members of the Dallas All-Star team have a move under way to install shower baths in the high school that the boys and girls may enjoy the benefits of a shower after each game. We hope they succeed and hope to be able to give you more information about this in the next issue.

Easy for Politician

Foxes in the Alps

Quite a number of silver foxes have been sent from Canada to ranches in the Italian Alps, where it is stated that ranching conditions are ideal, and where the fox farming industry is having quite a steady growth.

Basket Ball Season Opens at Lehman High School

Students at the high school are starting basket ball practice for the coming season. The girls had their first basket ball practice on Monday evening. Many were for head and considerable spirit was displayed. Mrs. James Robinson coaches the girls and they already show improvement in their style of playing.

The boys opened the season with a good practice on Tuesday evening of this week with a large squad repeating. The prospects are good for one of the best teams Lehman has ever had. The boys' coach is Charles Learn, manager of the Wilkes-Barre Barons of the Penn State Basketball League. The boys are progressing rapidly under his coaching. Vacancies caused by last year's graduation are already filled.
