Girl Scout Party

Invitations have been issued to the captains of the Girl Scout troops of the Dallas district requesting the presence of each member at a "Little Girl Party and Rally" to be given by the members of Troop No. 19 of Trucks-ville M. E. Church to be held at the church tomorrow afternoon from 2 to 4 o'clock. Miss Frances Keeler, captain of Troop 19, will be assisted in the preparations for this party and rally by Miss Ruth Chapman, lieutenant, and by members of the troop committee, which includes the following: Mrs. A. E. Jones, Mrs. Thomas Hughes, Mrs. C. W. Reynolds, Mrs. William Conyngham and Mrs. George Metz.

The following troops are included in the Dallas district: Troop No. 7, Dallas, Mrs. A. D. Hull, captain; Troop 9, Shavertown, Mrs. Harry Henry, captain; Troop 30, Lehman, Mrs. F. U. Zimmerman, captain; Troop 39, Shavertown, Miss Kathryn Phillips, captain; Lone Troop 1, of Ideton, Mrs. Harry Rosman, captain.

Each girl must come dressed up like a very little girl and a children program will be arranged and children's games will be played. Zuzsanna, the little girl from Hungary, whom the Girl Scouts of the Wyoming Valley Council have adopted, will be remembered by the Girl Scouts of the Dallas district. It is expected that every girl scout in the district will be present at the party tomorrow.

Entertains S. F. M. Society

Mrs. Harry F. Henry of Shavertown entertained members of the Searchlight Foreign Missionary Society at her home recently. She was assisted by Mrs. Ernest Kellar and Mrs. E. C. Kocher. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Maude Leek presided. Miss Pearl Averett reported seven new members to the "Friend." Mrs. Mary Hess presented the chapter of the text book. Luncheon was served to the following: Mesdames Bell, H. Williams, E. C. Kocher, F. J. Werner, Mitchell, H. Averett, Faucett, Bronson, Hoffman, Rodgers, W. Hess, Achuff, Swan, Gossart, Keithline, H. Leek, Greenwood, Ide, Evans, Howe, Heale, H. F. Henry, Miss Pearl Averett and Miss Lena Hallock.

Some More About Birds

RAVEN—The raven is so rare that it is hardly worthy of consideration from the economic standpoint. From the historical and literary standpoint the species is exceedingly interesting and important. It is known that the chief food of the raven is dead fish, crayfish, snakes and refuse. Hundreds of pellets examined near nests in Huntington county showed very little evidence which would incriminate the species.

CROW—The crow has been so widely discussed that everyone is probably pretty well aware of the status of the bird in Pennsylvania. There is no doubt that in the nesting season the crow destroys a great many eggs and young birds, as well as the young of certain game mammals. The point is that if other food is easily available crows do not as a rule destroy valuable bird and animal life. They prefer smaller rodents, frogs and snakes, snails, various insects and a good deal of vegetable matter. During the winter when crows gather in great numbers and when food may be scarce they doubtless do a great deal of damage and they must be shot or poisoned if the game birds and mammals are to survive. Probably no one should want to see the crow exterminated but this species has so ably solved its problems of existence and is so adaptive that three-fourths of the crows may be killed without endangering the standing of the species.

BLUE JAY—This species is not protected in Pennsylvania chiefly because of its habits of destroying the eggs and young of smaller birds. The Blue Jay is fairly common and adaptive and probably does not need protection. Some of its food habits are decidedly beneficial.

STARLING—Examinations of the stomachs of many starlings have thus far shown that they are not particularly destructive to economically valuable vegetation. The species is known to play upon Japanese beetles and other noxious insects so that much may be said in its favor. Its habit of ousting and occasionally killing our native cavity-nesting birds is very objectionable, however, and in sections of the State where the starling is becoming so terrifically abundant we will probably have a considerable problem in controlling the species.

ENGLISH SPARROW—The English sparrow is unquestionably becoming rarer as a result of the disappearance of the horse, or because of the presence of the European starling. It may be said with some certainty that the English sparrow now is not a very great enemy of our native birds except in occasional instances. Some of the food habits of the English sparrow are decidedly praiseworthy. During the nest period these birds destroy many insects which our native sparrows and warblers pass by—foul-smelling, hard-winged species which are not usually considered palatable.

GREAT BLUE HERON, BLACK-CROWNED NIGHT HERON and GREEN HERON—The herons of the State do some damage locally in capturing valuable fish. They are especially destructive in the vicinity of hatcheries and when they become numerous in these localities, must be LOON—While the loon occasionally captures valuable fish, it is usually so rare that it is not of economic importance.

KINGFISHER—The kingfisher is never an abundant bird. It is widely distributed, but in the scheme of nature occurs in such numbers as will not dangerously decimate the population of fish in any one part of the State.

Fahrenheit First

Fahrenheit introduced his mercury thermometer in 1714. In 1742 Celsius proposed a Centigrade scale, the temperature of melting ice being 100 and that of boiling water being 0. Christen, working independently, proposed, in 1743, a Centigrade scale similar to that of Celsius, but inverted, and this is the one now generally used.
