OF INTEREST TO YOU--

What is a Community without its own Newspaper?

ONE IS so used to the convenience and interest of the daily newspaper of one's own community that it is hard to appreciate the real importance, influence and service of the weekly paper in our life. The only way to awaken oneself to the necessity of a local newspaper is to know the experience of living in a town that has no local paper.

The Community that supports an enterprising newspaper is the active, growing town, alive not only to news of the day, but keenly awake to its own interests and affairs. Neighborhood and community activities thrive in such a place and civic management and affairs are more the public's concern. Local society, sports, church and municipal affairs are promoted and bettered where there is a local paper to keep the people in contact with each other.

The community without a newspaper is dormant and dependent on its neighboring towns, not only for news but for many if not all the daily needs of life that the stores of other places advertise in the local paper. The town with a good newspaper is the thriving place—self supporting, interested in Town affairs as well as those of the rest of the world—and usually helping to supply the daily needs of the less fortunate communities in its vicinity.

Such a town is Dallas with THE DALLAS POST to awaken its civic consciousness and to supply it with the news of its people and its neighbors—and, just as important, of its stores.
