THE DALLAS POST is a youthful weekly rural-suburban newspaper, owned, edited and operated by young men interested in the development of the great rural-suburban region of Luzerne County and in the attainment of the highest ideals of journalism. Thirty-one surrounding communities contribute weekly articles to THE POST and have an interest in its editorial policies. THE POST is truly "more than a newspaper, it is a community institution."

"Get acquainted with your competitor you may like him" is a good thought. Why not fight in this game of business and politics the same as we do in athletic games. If an opponent beats us by fair methods, more power to him. We do not hate a man because he is a better golfer than we are.

A movement was started this week which may have its culmination in the establishment of a hospital in the back mountain region. Those back of the project have been assured strong financial support and meetings will be held within the next few weeks to determine public sentiment with regard to the project.

Those instrumental in starting the movement believe that there is a need in this county for a hospital located on high ground amid quiet surroundings and away from distracting noises of city traffic. It is their belief that there are many suitable locations for such a hospital in the back mountain region and if established that such a hospital would meet with the united support of towns in Wyoming county as well as all of the communities of the back mountain region and many of the communities of Wyoming Valley.

There is a growing belief among physicians and surgeons that harsh city noises have a decided ill effect upon hospital patients. Beside this, surgeons and nurses can not work efficiently among the distracting noises of city traffic.

Such a hospital would be non sectarian and free from all commercial connections. It would be a community enterprise backed by some of the wealthiest men of the region. It is one of the ideals of the backers to get away from the old millionaire and pauper idea in the management of the hospital. Rates and fees they believe should be gauged to meet the purse of those in moderate circumstances.

In order to learn the views of citizens of the region, The Post has been asked to urge its readers especially physicians to write their reaction to such a movement. This we gladly do. If you don't think the establishment of a hospital here is advisable let us know. If you are in favor, give your reasons. The Post will be glad to publish all communications. Names will be omitted if requested.

Editorial Briefs

Speaking of civilization, what do you care about the drowning of nearly half a million Chinese?

Beauty may be an asset to a young woman starting a business career, but unless she uses her brains there won't be many raises in the pay envelope.

We admit that we know nothing about them but we have often wondered how some women could smile while taking a sarcastic fling at another sister.

One trouble with moving pictures is that the producers seem to know nothing about what small town people like. Moreover, they seem to care less.

The greatest distress this winter will be among the laborers in the crowded cities. Farmers may be broke, but at least have something to eat.

Some die hard; the man who abandoned his spring garden to the neighbors chickens and the weeds is now contemplating the blessings to be derived from a fall planting.

Good advertisers know that writing an advertisement is a job that requires care, even if it is going to be inserted in THE POST where results are almost certain.

Whenever you think of your own importance in the affairs of Dallas just remember that a few years after your death your memory will linger in a very few places.

It may be no use, but let us remind prospective writers of articles for publication in THE POST that they must sign their names or their contributions will not be printed.

If the world could retain in its educated youth the faith and ambition that the first grade pupil carries into school most of the problems of society would be solved in the present generation.

Let us urge citizens of Dallas to make all possible efforts to pay their bills. Under present business conditions even small payments on large accounts will help restore confidence, which is what we mostly need.

Primary Notes

The voting machine was a white washing machine for a lot of the candidates on Tuesday.

Nathan Hale had only one life to give to his country but plenty of modern patriots had only one vote to give for five dollars.

If the fire company could souce all fires like it does its clam bakes, insurance men would soon be out of business.

Excitement ran high at the polling places in Kingston township where there was unusual interest in the school director contest. In one of the polling places partisan supporters were not content to fight it out at the polls, but resorted to fighting it out with fists outside of the polls.

Enthusiastic supporters of candidates and tickets had most of the polling places, bridges, poles and buildings in the vicinity of the polls covered with pictures and cards of their favorite candidates long before the actual voting began.

The day was ideal to get a large number of voters out. Before nine o'clock it was evident that the largest vote in the history of the back mountain section would be polled.

It cost $300., last Saturday day for the county to move two trucks loaded with gravel from the county line near Centerville to the county road near the Ambrose West Farm. Ten men were employed to fill the trucks and forty to unload them. Men employed doing the work were so disgusted that fully half of them voted against the county organization in the primaries.

Election board officials appeared to take a keen interest in explaining the voting machine and everything possible was done to help the voter understand its workings.

Dallas borough voters were confused when they found all of the candidates for school director listed under the six year term with instructions to vote for one. The mechanism of the machine was set for one vote so that it was impossible to cast two votes. Two directors are to be elected to the board so that it is possible that all three candidates, Jack Roberts, Dr. G. K. Swartz and J. T. Jeter will run again in the November election.
