 After the completion of the plays Victor Lewis, Professor of Edwardsville High School gave a splendid talk on "Personality." He was enthusiastically received. These monthly programs are becoming more popular each time as can be seen by the increase in attendance at each meeting. The Parent Teachers Association at this meeting authorized the purchase of a set of Compton's Encyclopedia for the school. The December meeting will be held Monday evening December 21 at 7:45 sharp. At this time there will be an elaborate Christmas program.

Getting Tags Now Avoids Xmas Rush

Pennsylvania motor vehicle owners can aid the Christmas "early mailing" campaign of the Post Office Department by posting their applications for 1932 registration now, the bureau of motor vehicles of the State Department of Revenue announces.
 "Mail your 1932 applications for motor registration now," said a bureau statement. "By doing so you will clear the way for the heavy pre-Christmas mail. Not only will motor vehicle owners help relieve Pennsylvania Post Office employees of the additional burden of handling applications and tags along with Christmas mail but they also will be aiding the bureau of motor vehicles in the prompt and efficient performance of its duty."
 "Send in your application now and get your tags before the Christmas mail rush is on. Your 1932 tags can be used on and after December 15. The Post Office Department is co-operating with the State Department of Revenue in facilitating prompt delivery of license plates. Let automobile owners co-operate with both by mailing applications now."

DEAD MAN FOUND

Mystery of Man Who Disappeared Is Now Solved

Coroner B. L. Billings was called to Centermoreland on Saturday by a message that the body of a dead man had been found near that place. He went, but concluded that the man died from natural causes and no inquest was necessary.

The facts in the case as obtained by Sergeant Miller and Private Wilson, State Police from Wyoming barracks, were as follows: A stranger came to the farm on which John Pogonis lived three or four months ago and wanted work. Mr. Pogonis took him in, but as he was evidently in poor health, he was required only to feed the pigs and do other light chores. The first of August he was so much worse that he was advised to see a doctor, or go to a hospital. He refused to do this, and next morning when the family arose he disappeared. Some search was made for him, but as he was not found, it was concluded that he had gone to stay with friends, lest he be sent to the poorhouse.

Last Saturday his decaying body was found by Frank Besteder lying beside a stone wall along an oat field. He had evidently started to run away, but being overcome with weakness, laid down and was unable to get up.

The body was brought to B. L. Billings' undertaking establishment, and later buried in the potter's field at Sunnyside. His name was ascertained to be Frank Covolesski and he was 65 years old.—Tunkhannock Republican.

GERMAN SALESMAN

A local clergyman who was a chaplain during the World War was seriously wounded and still suffers from the effects of those wounds, recently had occasion to do business with a manufacturing company selling stained glass windows for church purposes. When the salesman visited him, the clergyman noted that he spoke with a decided German accent, and questioned him with regard to his residence in the United States and whether he fought for Germany during the World War. The German replied that he had lived in the United States only a few years and that he had been a captain of German artillery during the War. The salesman in turn asked if the clergyman had been in the war. The answer was that he had been and that he had been seriously wounded on a certain day at a certain hour. The clergyman also told the German the location at Cieges in the Argonne where he was serving when the shrapnel came over that wounded him. The German pondered for a moment and then replied that there was only one battery of German artillery at that point, and that he believed that he was in command of it at the time the clergyman was wounded. To make sure, however, he said that he would look in his diary on his return home and find out if it was a shell from one of his guns which wounded the local man. His investigation proved that he was correct in his surmise. It was a shell from one of the guns which were commanded by the German salesman that wounded Father J. J. O'Leary of Shavertown.

LITTLE BLACK HEN

We believe Wilson Garinger has reason to be proud of a black Minorca hen he has in his flock. She was hatched on May 5, 1930 and during the year November 6, 1930 to November 6, 1931 has laid 351 eggs. The first egg was laid November 6, 1930, the following day she missed. Being of a patriotic nature she missed laying during two days of July and took a holiday of five days in August. She also missed three days in October and three in November. The hen has not moulted since hatched, and on some of the occasion when she missed laying the cause was overfeeding on green food. Which leads us to philosophize that chickens like humans frequently do much poorer work when well fed than when hunger spurs them onward. Overfeeding, too, among humans probably causes more deaths annually than starvation. There's a lesson for us all in the record of Mr. Garinger's little black Minorca hen.

STILL SMILES

There's a pleasant little Scotchman living in Shavertown who dropped in to call on us this week. For several weeks now he has been stopping in to see us and looking over our presses on each visit. Being an expert pressman and lithographer we are always glad to have him give us advice on the care and handling of presses. It was not, however, until this week that our conversation ever got far from the subject of printing, and then only when we began to ask questions. This young man of the sandy hair and pleasant voice, we learned had gone through four years of the worst hell ever conceived by man against man. In a voice mellow as Scotch mist and as crisp as the Scotch heather he related some of his experiences in the British army from August 1914 until the close of the war in 1918. He had been with the Manchester regiment at Ypres when the Germans first used poison gas. He had seen 1,500 of his comrades, sneeze, cough, strangle and clutch at their throats, gavel in the dirt and mud and die without knowing what was killing them and without being able to resist the attacker. He had seen them improvise gas masks of torn shirts and muddy water or handkerchiefs soaked in urine. Did he bear scars? Yes, there was the five inch hole in his arm and the deep scar on the other side where the shrapnel had ripped its way through the forearm and there was the scar across his back where a bullet had seared the flesh. Four years of the world's worst hell back of him and yet he still smiles, and his voice is soft and musical.

TIRED TIRES

It has been a long time since we have seen so many motorists repairing tires along the roadside as we have during the past two weeks. Perhaps it is the depression and car owners are buying new tires less frequently than is their custom. They are willing to take longer chances on old tires now than formerly and as is usually the case, they go to pieces at the times when they are most needed. On Wednesday night while driving from Dallas to Kunkle we passed six automobiles drawn to the roadside while the drivers by the light of matches and flashlights repaired flat tires.

HERMIT OF HUCKLEBERRY MOUNTAIN

fect that the rattlesnake hadn't bitten him but that he had awakened from his sleep just in time to kick one out of his bed before it had a chance to get in position to strike. Then another good friend came to us and told us that a hermit in Wayne County had been killed by rattlesnakes during the summer months and apparently that incident had become associated with Mr. Eastwood and that was how the exaggerated reports of his death had gotten into the city newspapers. Even with that tip we continued to hold to our policy that silence is golden when it comes to writing about a hermit who has many friends as Mr. Eastwood. Then this week we glanced through the Montrose Independent and came across the following letter to the editor of that paper.

Dear Sir:—

I was much interested in the article in the last issue of The Independent concerning the Hermit of Huckleberry Mountain, "Auc" Eastwood. The older residents of this township have always known him, and having seen him myself the article aroused my interest. I had not heard of his death and as I wished to verify it I made inquiries and learned that the day I received your paper, Friday, November 6th, he made a trip to the village of Forkston at the foot of the mountain. He had on an overcoat and other clothing befitting the season. He often makes trips to this village.

Since the death of his wife, a few years ago, he has lived alone.

About two months ago it was reported that he had been bitten by a rattlesnake, but this was false. No doubt the story printed in the Dallas Post started from the report. He is a very interesting character and prefers living alone on the mountain, coming to Forkston for supplies when needed.

Since many Susquehanna county people come to the Forkston-Mehoopany mountain to hunt, no doubt some of them have seen him. I thought perhaps you would be interested to know that the report of his "tragic death" is false and correct it.

Very Respectfully,
 Mrs. Clayton Baldwin.

There is a Bad Squeak in the Price Claims of Some Radios.... LISTEN FOR IT!

P. T. BARNUM, great man that he was, would have had nothing on some present day claim makers in the radio business. Fact is, Barnum would have been a novice compared with some of these modern exag-gerators.

With the skill of an artist they explain that their "low price" sets out-tone, out-sell and out-wear full-sized console sets costing two or three times as much.

And the most distressing part of it all is this: Now and then they catch an unsuspecting individual who actually believes this blah! Being misinformed, he buys . . . only to discover some day that he got only what he paid for, if he was lucky . . . otherwise he got less.

Don't you be "sold" that way. Price isn't everything. On the contrary, a price that is too low to guarantee fine quality is an extravagance.

Millions of Americans . . . millions, mind you . . . who have searched the radio market for its biggest VALUE have chosen Atwater Kent. They weren't thinking solely of the initial investment.

They were just as much concerned about the trade-in value . . . anticipating the time, years hence, when they might want to exchange their set for a newer model. And that is a vital consideration for all money savers.

Dollar for dollar, quality for quality, Atwater Kent is the finest radio yet produced . . . anywhere in the world. Finest in construction, finest in tone, finest in attractiveness, finest in sturdiness of mechanism.

So, if you are out to get the most enjoyable, easiest operated, best valued radio your money will buy, get an Atwater Kent. It may cost you a little more than some of the cheaply put together sets now so common, but the investment in an Atwater Kent will be an investment in happiness and you'll have a long-wearing set with a surprisingly large trade-in appraisal.

Remember, that's the verdict of America, as expressed in actual sales!

Our modern purchase plan makes it as easy to buy an Atwater Kent as any other radio made.
