Melvin Traylor Asks Curbing Mounting Cost of Government

Chicago Banker Shows Need Caution in Spending Taxpayers Money

Would Reform Tax Method

Speaking before the International Chamber of Commerce at Washington, Melvin A. Traylor, President of First National Bank of Chicago, in part:

Another field in which those responsible for leadership must do some hard, sound thinking if we are to avoid disaster is that of public expenditures.

In this country, government is supposed to abide with the people, and yet we know that in no other field does leadership exert so great an influence upon the thought and action of the people as in the political sphere.

In the fifteen-year period, from 1913 to 1928, our national income was estimated to have increased from about 34 1/2 billion dollars to 81 billion dollars annually, or 135 per cent; in the same period the expenditures of all governmental divisions in the United States have increased from a little less than three billion dollars to more than 12 1/2 billion dollars, or approximately 300 per cent.

It is perfectly true, of course, that insofar as the Federal Government is concerned, the major part of the increase in that direction is accounted for by our participation in the World War; but it is interesting to observe that for the fiscal year ending in 1928, Federal expenditures were only 31 1/2 per cent of the combined outlay for all political administration in the United States.

Local Expenditures Big Item

Figures are not available for the years following 1928, except for the Federal Government, whose expenditures increased 10.7 per cent for the fiscal year ending in 1929, and 6 per cent in 1930. It may be assumed that like increases have occurred in other political subdivisions of the country. For the year ending in 1928, the cost of administration of State Governments amounted to 14 1/2 per cent of the total; of the remainder, over 54 per cent went to sustain local governments.

Naturally, those responsible for government desire to give their country the finest educational facilities, the best roads, streets, public parks, playgrounds, and other facilities obtainable, but, after all, there is the fact that expenditures for such purposes bear a very close relation to the individual, because he mortgages his future earnings for a comfortable and rapidly deteriorating installment debt on the earning capacity of every individual and enterprise in the community affected. Not only does it involve installment amortization of the debt itself, but a constantly increasing charge for maintenance and upkeep if the improvement is to be preserved against early deterioration and quick ruin.

Most of the taxing machinery of the country was created at a time when the present volume of public debt was not thought possible; and it is, therefore, inadequately and inequitably adjusted to meet the emergencies of the present burden.

The consequences is that in almost every major political subdivision of the country certain classes of wealth escape taxation, or pay little, while other types of property are charged with an unbearable obligation.

The duty of leadership, therefore, in this field is two-fold. First, and most important of all, a greater degree of caution must be exercised in the creation of government obligations; and, second, an immediate reform in taxing machinery must be undertaken.

Effects of "Federal Aid"

In connection with the creation of indebtedness, it is high time that those responsible for State administration consider the pernicious and seductive influence of so-called Federal aid for public improvements.

In many instances, this policy of public expenditure approaches closely to political bribery and in almost every case, lends itself to political log-rolling, the surrender of state sovereignty, and a gradual impoverishment of fiscal units. Moreover, we have said nothing of the proposal and promotion of undertakings which in many instances are not justified by the necessity of the situation or by the utilization of the facilities contemplated. Let there be no mistake in this respect.

Let us face the facts. Unless there is a return to sanity in the matter of public expenditures, default and repudiation of public obligations cannot be much longer avoided.

Trusty Tomatoes

TRUSTY tomatoes are old friends—tried and true—and the longer one knows them the more fine things one discovers about them. That is the reason the tomato canning industry has grown 100 per cent in the last twenty-two years.

Long ago, people found out tomatoes were appetizing and good. Then they found out they were healthful. When decorative tables came into vogue, tomatoes were discovered to be one of the most decorative of foods. And, recently, science has discovered an additional health value to the many already established ones in tomatoes—the fact that they not only contain an abundance of iron but they contain a vitamin which aids in getting iron from other foods.

And, every day, dietitians are discovering delectable new ways to serve tomatoes.

A Tested Recipe

Tomato Rarebit with Eggs: Stew three cups of canned tomatoes, one-fourth teaspoon soda, one and one-half teaspoons salt and one-fourth teaspoon pepper for five minutes. Press through a sieve. Add three tablespoons of flour and three tablespoons of cold water smoothed together, and stir until it thickens. Add one and one-half cups of grated cheese, and stir until melted. Slice eight hard-cooked eggs over buttered toast and pour over the sauce. This serves eight persons.*
