The complete 1931 accident "picture" is an interesting study in contrasts.

Motor vehicle deaths numbered 33,500 — a new high record. Accidents were the second most important causes of deaths in men, heart disease being first. On the other hand, industrial plants reduced employes' injury frequency rates 38 per cent. in two years, and railway crossing accidents declined 10 per cent.

In the past decade, industry has made amazing strides in preventing accidents and in lessening their severity. Part of this has been accomplished in improved guarding of machinery. The larger part, however, has resulted from a new spirit of safety first that has been instilled into workers and management alike. Precisely the opposite has occurred on our highways. Recklessness grows, rather than slackens; improvements in cars breed more deaths and injuries, not less.

What has been done in industry can be done with automobile driving. Just as industrial management disciplines the heedless worker who endangers others, so must the state discipline the heedless driver. If industrial workers can learn the gospel of accident prevention and take it to heart so that it becomes a part of their mental operations, so can the automobile driver learn care, competence and courtesy.

It is time to take drastic action to make our streets and highways safe.

In the passing of Frank F. Morris this community loses a man who has exerted a powerful influence not only on this community but on the lives of outstanding men and women of the State who came under his guidance as a school master.

A man of keen intellect he was quick to recognize that which was good and to encourage it with praise and assistance. He was just as quick to recognize that which was bad and had the courage and spirit to fight it with all his faculties. He was one of that decreasing group of older residents of the community who could remember when Dallas was a community unto itself. His interest in life and in men led him to contribute articles often to this newspaper on subjects of local, State and National importance.

The plain signature "Morris" at the end of any article was the signal to the reader that here was something worthy of reading and worthy of thought. The subject might be of controversial nature and readers might not agree with the writer but they never failed to respect his knowledge, logic and reason. Those opposed to him found him a worthy antagonist who called forth their best reasoning and mettle.

It was a source of pleasure to the editor of this paper to visit with Mr. Morris on the occasion of his frequent visits to this office. His encouragement and comment upon our work gave us courage and was one of the bright spots in our early career in Dallas which we shall always remember. Among the men of this community he stood out as a rugged rock upon which age had left its furrowing mark and imprint but whose beauty in strength of intellect remained firm and fine to the end.

There is, as a rule, too much prejudice and not enough logic in discussions of the transportation problem.

It is an inescapable fact, no matter how much is said concerning the decline of the railroad, the rail transport is the backbone of the nation's industries.

It is also a fact that there is room for busses, trucks, waterways, oil pipe lines and other means of transport. The problem is how to correlate these agencies so that each may be run on a profitable basis and serve the shipping and traveling public well.

The public interest is the main thing at stake. The people want fast, economical and adequate transport, at reasonable rates. They want greater industries, such as the railroad, to maintain a high standard of purchasing and employment. Until the national government perfects a transport policy that affects all interstate carriers impartially in regulation and taxation, the public interest is not served and the stockholders and employes of the railroad are unjustly discriminated against.

Anti-Venom Serum Saves Child's Life
In a letter to the State Department of Health an up state physician reports the saving of the life of a little 8 year old girl, who had been bitten on the leg by a rattlesnake while picking huckleberries on the mountain side. She was rushed to the nearest town, given first aid by a state nurse, and the doctor was fortunate in having a single package of anti-venom serum. By promptly applying it, he was enabled to report within a few days, that the little miss would recover from the effects of the bite. In recounting his experience, he ordered another supply of the serum, so that he might be prepared for any future emergencies of a like nature.

While there are many things that may be done when a person is bitten by a venomous snake in Pennsylvania, the one absolutely safe thing to do, is to be prepared to use anti-venom serum, whose results are well authenticated by long practice and experience. A great sum to set over against the cost. The cost of a package is not fact that it may save a human life.

FRUIT GROWER'S FIELD DAYS
Luzerne County Fruit Growers will hold two Field Days on August 24th and 25th. Previous to this year, only one day was devoted to the fruit growers summer meeting, but this year there will be a meeting for the growers of the northern portion of the county the first day, August 24th at the B. J. Winter's Orchard located on the Orange-DeMuns Road, adjacent to Cumming's Pond.

The second meeting, for the growers of the southern end of the county, will be at the Walp & Abrams Orchard in Salem Township, two miles from Foundryville.

At both of these orchards, the mornings will be devoted to an inspection of the farms, where interested growers will find trees that have been properly nourished and well sprayed for the control of prevalent diseases and insects. The afternoon will be devoted to a few short talks and growers discussions.

Carveth Wells Sails

Carveth Wells, known as "the man who makes the truth sound like a lie", sailed this week to discover Noah's home town at the foot of Mt. Ararat in distant Turkey. Previously, Wells has found that "wild" animals of Africa are not wild, that lions are afraid of men and that you can skate on the equator. His destination this trip is the Caucasian range where women are rumored to be most beautiful in the world, where one community owns armor worn by Middle Age crusaders and where another group of natives profess to be descendants of Noah, of Ark fame.

Sterilization

Sterilization of 18,000,000 mental defectives in United States to prevent them from producing children which might inherit some of their defects was urged this week in a pamphlet of the Human Betterment Foundation at the meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in Syracuse.
