PAYROLL TOTALS TELL WAGE TREND

With the President's Re-employment Agreement and most NRA codes setting minimum wages of $15 a week, statistics of payrolls in manufacturing industries by the bureau of statistics, Department of Labor and Industry, become more significant, officials believe. Latest tabulations reveal that average wages in manufacturing industries by industrial areas range from $12.13 a week in the Wilkes-Barre area to $20.42 in the Philadelphia district.

Auto Owners To Secure 1934 Tags

Application Now Avoids Rush In Closing Weeks Of Year

Motor vehicle owners were reminded this week by the Department of Revenue that only about six weeks remain for them to apply for and receive their 1934 tags. All 1933 tags expire at midnight, December 31. No extension of time can be granted on 1933 tags.

The Bureau of Motor Vehicles is prepared to issue tags at the rate of 50,000 a day. If car owners will take advantage of this service now they will avoid the danger of delays that may occur in the last days' rush through no fault of the bureau. The flow of applications amounts now to only a few thousand daily.

Any car owner who has not received the regular application form should communicate with the bureau at Harrisburg immediately, furnishing make of car, manufacturer's number, and certificate of title number. The applicant's home address, rather than the business address should be given. The application will be forwarded at once provided the applicant has not changed his address during the year and failed to notify the bureau of his new address.

Those who have changed their address and did not notify the bureau, should file the regular form for correction. This form is known as Form RVG-2. It can be obtained without charge from any motor club, notary public or justice of the peace. It also can be had at the bureau in Harrisburg.

New Market For Hard Coal Opened By Range

A large potential new market for anthracite in hotel and restaurant kitchens was tapped this week, hotel men said by the first exhibition of a stoker-fired cooking range at the Hotel Exposition at Grand Central Palace. The display of a large range to which the Electric Furnace Man was attached as an integral heating unit, was the center of interest for chefs all week. The range was designed by the Bramhall Deane Company, manufacturers of French ranges and broilers.

The equipment was said to be the answer to a long-felt want in hotel kitchens for a uniform heat that is sensitive to the most delicate control. Anthracite is favored by hotel men because of its steady heating qualities, and the stoker applied to the new range provides the variable control which has heretofore been lacking in coal burning equipment. The anthracite stoker method is favored over other automatic apparatus because it is neither so expensive as gas nor will it taint the food with odors that accompany oil combustion.

One small anthracite stoker of the Electric Furnace Man type operates the broiling, oven and general cooking functions of a range up to seven feet long. An additional small stoker, or a double fire-pot machine, will take care of longer ranges.

"THANKSGIVING"

In the days of long ago Thanksgiving had its start
Today it is of every one a very vital part

Each year the President issues his "Thanksgiving Proclamation,"
People read it everywhere throughout the entire nation.

How difficult things were in the Pilgrims' Day.

They were content to live in a simple way.

They toiled to earn their daily bread,
And in return a prayer they said.

Crude were the tools with which they worked,
Yet they never once their duty shirked.

They farmed their land and raised their food,
And their women cooked it oh so good!

Unknown were Moving pictures or the Radio.

Places of amusement there were none to go.

Yet they were content there was no strife,

Happy they were, with their simple life.

Today we have everything at our command

And the more we have, the more we demand.

We seldom think of those who have not

How many care as long as they've got?

We are going through a terrible Depression.

God sent it perhaps to teach us a lesson.

That we who have, can surely spare
There must be something we can share.

In the twentieth century we are living
Yet we have the same Thanksgiving

So let us all our voices raise
And to Almighty God give praise.
