"The Tracy cyclone toted the little lady all around the lot, showing her off to everybody from the president to the office boy, until she was gasping for breath and begged for a recess!"

"But don't think she didn't love it, bless her."

Mrs. Tracy, for the benefit of those who aren't upon their Back Mountain celebrities, lives in a little white house on the lower side of the Mt. Greenwood road, where Lee visits her frequently.

Incidentally, Mr. Tracy's next release will be "You Belong To Me," a silly title if we ever heard one.

From The Sunday Independent:

"D. N. Blocksage is preparing to install steam heat in his residence and printing shop to replace hot air." Is that fair, Squire?

A Wisconsin scientist finds that copper makes ailing babies well. It's okeh now to let the baby play with pennies.

That Ohio onion strike has been a serious thing, but it has probably saved a lot of tears.

If "The Coming American Boom" arrives, we can look for another book, "The Coming American Bum."

Pocket Radio Invented by Nebraska Youth Is Successful—Headline. No wonder; it just fills the spot where people used to keep their wallets.

Judging by the bathing suits the girls wore this year, it would have been better if they had gone down to the sea in slips.

"Cat's Paw" Coming To The Kingston Theatre

Continuing its run of the screen's finest and most pleasing film hits, the Kingston theatre will present that rollicking comedy hit "She Learned About Sailors" this Friday and Saturday starring Alice Faye.

It's fun galore when these jack-tars set out on a spree that will have you laughing until you cry.

Coming for two days only, Monday and Tuesday is that popular star who has been away from the screen for two years, Harold Lloyd in "The Cat's Paw", which is his latest film triumph.
