This writer has heard no more pointed comment on Tuesday's election than that made by a Mr. Pinchot who, if memory serves, ran for Senator several times.

He said "Gee Whiz!"

It was expected, of course, that there would be a general ratification of the New Deal, but that Pennsylvania should show such a sudden and violent dislike for her long-time Republican leaders was a decided surprise.

Tuesday's election was a confusing affair. Primarily it was an expression similar to that landslide which swept Mr. Roosevelt into the Presidency two years ago. A people, bewildered and tired of long waiting, grasped at a promise of better things. Tuesday's election differed from the 1932 es in the process of being carried out and apparently they Fred Kiefer of Shrineview spent liked them.

But it is likely that most of the voters lacked a complete ter Betsy of Trucksville motored to the Lafayette—U. of P. game where understanding of the significance of their vote. It does no harm to shuffle up the "ins" and the "outs" once in a while and undoubtedly Mr. Earle and Mr. Guffey will carry out their jobs well. It is probably too much to ask Miss Helen England of Scranton, a that disgruntled Republicans forget their defeat for the former school teacher at Trucksville attended the Kingston Township-Semtime being and support the measures the State's new Demo- inary game on Saturday. cratic Administration will sponsor. "As individuals, one farmer's strength cancels another's," said Chester C. Davis, AAA Administer, recently. "Through organization, his strength multiplies. Only as he can and will express himself through orgnaization is the farmer's influence felt in national councils."

That brief statement concerns every American farmer.

IN UNION THERE IS STRENGTH

One of the greatest difficulties faced in the past, both by private and public bodies in seeking to stabilize and improve farming conditions, has been lock of organization. Too many farmers existed solely as individuals, and had no one to speak for them. In brief, agriculture lacked centralized authorities of the farmer's own choosing, who could exert continued and aggressive efforts to bettering his status.

That was true, and is probably still true, of the majority of farmers. But a minority of farm producers have a different story to present. These farmers have joined in creating great organizations. They have elected directors who hire trained, experienced executives. And no one who has watched agriculture during recent years can help but be impressed by the progress these associations have made. Dealing in milk, cotton, fruits and other products, they have met and solved many problems. They have had their ups and downs. While they haven't brought about an agricultural millenium, members of these co-operative farm organizations have had a much happier time of it than have unorganized farmers.

The old saying that "In union there is strength," was never more apt than it is today—and it goes for farmers as well as all other workers and producers.
