"AFTER THE ELECTION"

All around me lies the wreckage of an election just gone by. And as I gather up the flying papers I am forced to leave a sigh Over are the nasty things that both parties said, Over are the lonely nights that most women dread.

'Tis true both sides could not expect to win, And it's proper for the loser to give in. Friendship ceases when at politics we play, But after the election we should feel quite proud to say

I fought a losing battle, but I fought it very clean. Perhaps I said some things I really didn't mean. But now that it's all over and we know whose in the lead, Let's all shake hands and forget the past I plead.

Surely the majority can't be wrong. This time the Democrats were really very strong. So let us all combine and lend a helping hand, Make the New Deal a square deal and everything will be just grand. —Mrs. John A. Girvan.

Close Race

Official returns on the McFadden-Dietrich Congressional race show that Elmer E. Dietrich won by a majority of 667 votes. Originally it was thought that his lead was larger but 704 votes on the Prohibition ticket cut Mr. Dietrich's lead.

Doug, Mary Meet—on Business

Were it not for the man in the center, this would look like that long-awaited reconciliation of Douglas Fairbanks and "our Mary." But, despite their smiles, Miss Pickford and her athletic hubby hadn't just made up. This scene was snapped at a directors' meeting of a film company in which both are interested. The man in the middle is Joseph M. Schenck, movie executive.
