

Besecker Requests More Co-operation

Gives Rules For Helping Firemen In Public Safety

"If you want to do your share to help the local Fire Department handle fires with maximum effectiveness, don't call the telephone operator when the alarm is sounded and ask the location of the blaze."

This request was made yesterday by Fire Chief Jim Besecker.

"Simply as a matter of public safety," said Chief Besecker, "Citizens should refrain from asking the operator for the location of a fire. When a flood of curiosity deluges the switchboard immediately after the alarm is sounded, it is impossible for the operator to give precedence to emergency calls which members of the Fire Department are seeking to put through."

"The telephone operator has no means of distinguishing between these needless calls and important emergency calls. The practice impedes the efforts of the Fire Department, and those who have been in the habit of making these calls should stop to think of the serious results they can cause."

"Everyone can visualize what would happen if, when a serious fire breaks out here, a flood of curiosity calls should make it impossible for us to call Fire Departments in nearby towns for assistance. A disastrous period of delay could very easily result."

Advices Health Tests of Pupils

Asks For Co-operation During Summer Months

Every child who will enter school for the first time next September should be examined by a physician before the opening of school, Dr. James N. Rule, Superintendent of Public Instruction, today advised all county and district school superintendents and supervising principals. He has sent each of these school officials a memorandum designed to establish uniform procedures with the organization of health examinations.

The plan has been endorsed by the Pennsylvania Department of Health, the Pennsylvania Congress of Parents and Teachers, the Pennsylvania Department of Public Instruction and the State Emergency Child Health Committee, and is commended by Dr. Rule as a necessary State-wide project. It recommends steps for organization of health examinations which would include vaccination, immunization, and the correction of remedial physical defects.

Examinations are recommended on the same plan as was followed successfully last year. This includes examination by the family physician where possible; by group examinations held in connection with the summer round-up program developed by the parent-teacher associations; by local health agencies; or by examinations conducted under the auspices of the County Emergency Health Committee. Follow-ups for the correction of physical defects should be shared by the school nurse, principals, teachers, parents, health agencies, or by other organizations in the community.

Each year approximately 166,000 boys and girls enter Pennsylvania public schools for the first time, and Superintendent Rule says if the child can enter school physically fit it will mean a saving in time and money.
