

Headlines Of The Week

A summary of this week's news of international interest, reviewed for Post readers.

CHAMP

Upon being made a godfather for the thirtieth time, Alfred E. Smith this week considered claiming the championship.

CRASH!

A crowd estimated variously from 300 to 700, all helping the Nanticoke Unemployed League to celebrate its picnic, jammed into a dance pavilion at Croop's Glen on Saturday afternoon while a thunder storm raged. Overloaded, the timbers under the floor groaned and creaked. Finally, in the middle of a baby contest, they broke, plunging hundreds into shallow Hunklock's Creek below. At a hospital, 174 were treated.

PRAYER

For 71 hours, stopping only to sleep fitfully and to pray on Sunday, 9 men and 3 women deliberated the fate of Philip Bruno and five kinsmen accused of 4 slayings in the Kelayres election eve massacre. On Monday the jury came out, told Judge Benjamin E. Jones Philip Bruno was guilty of manslaughter, acquitted his five kinsmen.

LOST

On her way to Buck Hill Falls to attend a housing conference Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt lost her way, reached her hotel early in the morning, had to walk upstairs because elevators were out of commission. Next day she swam, knitted, danced, and smiled at hotel guests who pressed their noses against the glass-enclosed conference room to see her.

CANTOR

A few months ago Father Coughlin said Jews have only three enemies to fear—Bernard Baruch, Eddie Cantor, and the motion picture industry. This week Eddie Cantor gave his answer. Addressing 1,000 delegates to a B'nai B'rith convention, Cantor said "Father Coughlin has not an atom of sincerity in his entire system".

INDEPENDENCE

"Thank God!" declared William Randolph Hearst on Tuesday. "We again have a House of Representatives." What had happened was that the House, in flaming revolt, had rejected President Roosevelt's "death sentence" provision for utility holding companies, 216 and 146. It was the most effective defeat for the President since the Senate turned down adherence to the League Court.

SCIENTIST

On the heels of Col. Charles Lindbergh's success in science came word that Harold Lloyd, spectacled film comedian, is working with fine instruments in his home laboratory seeking bacteria to combat the poisonous black widow spider.

ICE-BOX

Provoked because his ice-box was being looted, Edward Woods, Washington, D. C., rigged a contrivance so that when the box was touched a flashlight would snap and a horn sound. A few nights later the rigging worked but the quarry fled, leaving an eerie photograph of a tall, lean man, bending over the box. Police said it was Alex Page, Maryland pen parole-breaker. Last Friday a speeding train killed a forlorn tramp in Maryland. The body was unidentified until some one found the ice-box photo, discovered it was Alex Page.

PIETY

In New York Paolo Aiello, 50, engaged in the pious business of selling Bibles and prayer books, was arrested for the not so pious business of giving counterfeit quarters in change to his customers, some of whom happened to be agents of the Treasury Department.

COMEBACK

Less than 24 hours before he wed a coffee-shop managress in Washington, Max Baer was still talking comeback and promising to "take Joe Louis in six rounds." Primo Carnera had said the same thing.

653

After almost a month in the air, Fred and Al Key brought their borrowed plane, Ole Miss, to earth on Monday, having set a new world's record for endurance flying. They had been soaring for 653 hours, 34 minutes, over Meridian, Miss.

THIS IS THE YEAR TO BUILD

YOU CAN HELP YOURSELF and at the same time very materially help the other fellow—the men of this section who are now unemployed—and you can extend this helping hand without seriously obligating yourself and at NO ADDITIONAL EXPENSE.

The Federal Government has made it possible for you to build a home or improve your present home under a new financing plan which is as economical as paying rent. Millions of dollars worth of construction are already under way. As a result, people of moderate means who have dreamed of owning their own homes soon will have them and thousands and thousands of men are finding jobs that will revive and stabilize business.

There are hundreds of homes here that need improvement. Many new homes will be built in the next year. If you do not understand the provisions of the Better Housing Program after reading the story on Page 1 ask your bank, any contractor, or any loan association for details, or fill in the coupon below and send it to The Post.

compliance with the request, however neighborly, would only counteract the effect of his remedy. The next day the witch sent again but Mrs. _____ was firm. Then the witch's husband loaded her on a wagon and conveyed her to the home of Mr. _____, where she confessed she had bewitched his cattle and implored the doctor to unstop the gun barrel. Sure enough, as soon as the saline fluid began to flow from the muzzle the witch was relieved and the cows and hogs cured.

The following contribution is submitted by Dorothy Carter, who spent yesterday evening for an old-fashioned Fourth of July celebration:

The sun's hot here on the courthouse steps;
Say, that bunting on the speaker's stand,
Looks kinda sad, the color's run.
Oh, Look! Here comes the band,
Why don't they start, it's past two now!
Ain't a seat left anywhere.
Think it'll rain? It always does!
Whew, ain't a breath of air—
Those younguns are still shootin' fireworks—
They'll burn themselves, what'll you bet?
They're fetchin' two pitchers of water
(The speaker's the driest one yet!)
Who are those folks settin' yonder?
They're the Campbells from out Spring Creek way?
Shh! Here comes Congressman Turpin
I wonder what he'll have to say.
Want a cone? Bub, we'll take vanilla.
Watch! The band is a fixin' to play.
Git up! It's the Star Spangled Banner.
Gee! Ain't it a peach of a day?

monument stands was purchased and in December, 1832, the work of delivering stone from a quarry on Kingston Mountain for the foundation and vault began.

The bodies were removed from the common grave and taken to the office of one of the men interested, where they were kept until December, 1833. The corner stone of the monument was laid on July 3, 1833.

Construction was completed in 1843, but the grounds were not properly graded and fenced until 1864.

Since then, as one of the most historic shrines in Pennsylvania, it has attracted thousands upon thousands of persons, all of whom thrill to the services and sacrifices of the men whose bones it covers.

It is sixty-two feet, six inches in height. Explanatory inscriptions are carved in marble tablets on the sides. On the Northwest side is the brief story of the Battle, written by Edward G. Mallery, great grandson of British Colonel Butler, mute evidence that the hatred and bitterness held by the opposing forces of the struggle have been erased by time.
