Greens And Reds Key Colors Decried By Fashion Experts

By FANNY FERN

(This is the second of a series of fashion articles being prepared exclusively for The Dallas Post by Fanny Fern.)

Greens and reds are unquestionably the key colors of the Fall and Winter Season with Brown and Blue playing a very prominent part in the color scheme for day time wear. Of course there is an almost unending variation of shades in the colors being used and Black still continued to perform the duty of stabilizer.

Red varieties of shade range from bright red to deep wine tones with American Beauty the outstanding choice, while the pastel shades and white are almost missing.

The shades and combinations most prominent in the creations of the World's leading designers are as follows:

White, Lelong and Bouslogue have used American Beauty. Bouslogue—Soldier Red and Dubonnet.

Mainbocher and Rochas—Fuchsia, a purplish shade of red. Bouslogue—Chocolate Paper Red. Worth and Lavine—Brick. Molyneux, Patou and Chanel—Pale and Azalia Pink.

Green shades are a bit less vivid than the reds but avoid the pastel influence very carefully. Lavin, Molyneux, Paray and Schiaparelli use many shades of green—Bluish, Verouse and Olive predominating while both Chanel and Bouslogue confine themselves to Reseda as a base with a generous use of Mint, by the former, and Ming Green by the latter in minor color combinations.

Very few of the outstanding Designers are using Orthodox Brown but the Rust and Ginger shades are fairly well represented in day dresses. Chanel, Rouff, Rouslogue and Creed show a few gowns in Rust and Ginger.

Lelong, Patou and Pignat—Chestnut and the darker shades while Bouslogue has used Marigold in a striking model for formal afternoon wear.

The Blues used are strikingly like the jewel of that color. Dilkusha, Lelong and Molyneux have selected Turquoise and Lapis-lazuli. Schiaparelli, Rochas and Bouslogue—Cobolt, Royal and Sapphire.

It is interesting to note some of the outstanding color combinations employed by these great designers, and after all color combinations play almost as important a part in the distinctive effect of a gown, as does line and decoration. Daring in the use of color combination is hardly the word.

I think courageous more fittingly expresses the quality of character displayed this year and you will agree I am sure after reviewing this summary.

Dynamite Black and Ming Green—"Bouslogue".

Rust and Green—"Chanel". American Beauty and Royal Blue—"Lelong".

Soldier Red and Sky Blue—"Bouslogue".

Cornflower Blue and Fuchsia—"Schiaparelli".

Rust and Scarlet—"Patou".

And so you see you may be gay this season with the use of a limited number of colors that will easily permit of a continuous interchange of accessories among your gowns without fear of clashing color schemes.
