Pittston Locale For Dramatic Hit

"Personal Appearance", Current Success, To Play At Irem Temple

"Personal Appearance", the sensational comedy success that has given this section of Pennsylvania national advertising for the past year at the Henry Miller Theatre, New York, will be seen in Wilkes-Barre next week.

It will be presented at the Temple Theatre, Scranton, on Monday night and in Irem Temple, Wilkes-Barre on Wednesday night, with a special cast headed by Barbara Brown which will begin a run at the Garrick Theatre in Philadelphia Thanksgiving Week.

Written by Lawrence Riley, a Bradford newspaper man, "Personal Appearance" deals with the visit of a Hollywood film star, Carole Arden, to Scranton, Wilkes-Barre, and other nearby Pennsylvania cities for a series of appearances in movie theatres. Her attempt to vamp an innocent young attendant of a gasoline station where her automobile breaks down near Pittston supplies most of the fun, which builds to an uproarious climax in the last act, when her scheme to kidnap him and carry him off to Hollywood is frustrated.

The advance sale of seats is open at the Ritz Theatre, Scranton, and the Capitol Theatre, Wilkes-Barre.
