FIRST BRIDGE BUILT
The bridge over the Susquehanna between Kingston and Wilkes-Barre was built in 1816. It was a covered bridge. In 1819 the pier nearest to Wilkes-Barre was undermined and two reaches of the bridge lost. In 1834 the entire bridge was blown from the piers by a hurricane and deposited in the ice some distance below its original location. This was replaced by a sturdy iron structure.

HORRORS OF WAR
By C. H. HOOD

has altered much, basically he has changed but little from the primitive barbarian whose one delight was to kill and follow up with thorough plunder. And loosed from all conventional restraints man—on the front lines—is ideally situated to indulge in an orgy of licentiousness and violence to release himself of all unfulfilled desires and frustrations.

Scenes of carnage incite in him sadistic urges. His thirst for blood and torment becomes contagious, sordid, unquenchable. Victorious troops sweep like the very holocaust to deal rape, rapine and systematic robbery. Man's regression to barbaric instincts dominates his every act on the battlefield, despite the sentiments of stay-at-homes.

Discounting the inevitable crop of propaganda tales of every war, no veteran denied that the spoils of victory included a good deal of spoliation. From official investigations by British, Belgian and Austrian commissions, the following emerge as typical incidents when a mass of adult men span the centuries of "culture" to the animal infante-primitivism of the Stone Age.

"At Mary-sur-Marne, when M. Mathe attempted to hide under the counter of his wine shop, he was bayoneted to death because he had refused to serve wine.

"Soldiers caroused through the streets of Liege; Louvain, and Aerschot were sacked and set on fire; civilians were violated.

"The Cossack patrol of five men forced its way into our house. Immediately they told my parents: 'Give us some girls.' One of the Cossacks caught and dragged me into the bedroom. I was twenty-five years old, a farmer's wife."

Perhaps the greatest martyr of human savagery was the little nation of Armenia. Atrocities of such hideous brutality were perpetuated by Turks that one is tempted to discount them, were not proof overwhelmingly indicative. Allied accounts of violence fade into insignificance before those of savage attacks on pregnant women and dismembering of infants. The following are reported by Lord James Bryce, former ambassador to the United States, in the British Blue Book of 1915.

"Things which we find scarcely credible excite little surprise in Turkey. Not a few of the Armenian women were stripped naked and made to travel beneath the burning sun of the desert. Four thousand in Trebizond were taken out on the Black Sea, thrown overboard and drowned, five thousand perished by mass slaughter. Others securely tied, were rolled down cliffs at the bottom of which they were slashed to death."

Thus were massacred 1,100,000 innocent members of a nation which adopted Christianity in 363 A. D. It is the toll of modern war.

(The second installment of "The Horror of Modern War" will appear in this paper next week.)

Lots of people are planning comfort this winter. Our Mechanics have recently installed a bathroom for Mrs. Ella Broughton on Putnam Street, a heating system for Grant Ball at East Lemon and a HOT AIR PUR-NACE for Hoag's Service Station at Laceyville.

The fight against tuberculosis is a great cause. We can all help by buying Christmas Seals this year.

Our stock of varied priced Kitchen Ranges attracts buyers from long distances. Last week E. H. Phelps of Auburn Four Corners bought two new Ranges, and O. P. McNulty bought still another for his home at Hop Bottom. We can give you choice of 3 high quality Ranges—WIN-CROFT, MAJESTIC, WEHRLE.

100 percent paying investments are almost as scarce as hen's teeth, but we know of one, and that's installing STAR WATER BOWLS for cows. The cows actually increase enough to pay for the job in one winter. STAR BOWLS are being installed by Arthur Cole at Meshoppen, Carlo Saprito at Vernon, and George Norris at Montrose. It's true the cows pay the bill.

Last Sunday's snow is a sample of what's coming. We can supply you with heavy truck chain material, ready made weed chains and repair links. Also gloves for you and shoes and blankets for the horses.
