"You must be kinda crazy about that guy in San Francisco . . ."

"What guy are you talking about? What did Stephani tell you?

"Oh, he made a couple of cracks."
"All right. Now I'm going to make a couple of cracks. My sister, Kay, and I met this Stephani-and his brother Alix-last summer in New York. When they found out who we were, Alix gave Kay the old Contenental rush swept her off her feet—she's just a kid—eighteen. I pleaded—did everything I could-but she's in her way to San Francisco with him now. They plan to be married in Honolulu. I've got to stop them. It's all my fault for letting her know such people. I can't let her suffer from my stupidity."

"Humph!" A great load seemed to lift from Jack's shoulders. "The outlook isn't particularly bright at the moment, but if there's any chance of getting you to the Coast before noon tomorrow I'll grab it." "Did you see it?" Ann burst in upon them, closely followed by Waldemar. Then, realizing that she had disturbed an important conversation, she stammered. "I mean the light. It came and went—like a match. Do you suppose it was Palmer?"

"Probably," shrugged Jack. "I think he'll wait for daylight before coming back, though. That would help his aim. Our only chance is to get off in the morning before he shows up." "And if he gets here first?" inquired

"I'd give my left ear for a gun," was the glum reply. Suddenly he looked at the girl appraisingly and demanded: "How's your nerve?"

"I think it'll get by." Her blue eyes met his brown ones steadily.

"That's swell—because we're going to give it a workout. See that? reached through the cockpit door and unhooked the fire extinguisher which hung on the cabin wall. "I got some of that stuff in my eyes once-couldn't see or breathe for five minutes. And it squirts yards—like a gun."

"He'll never give you the chance to use it," said Felice.

"Not me, maybe. But he won't be watching you. Now if the party gets rough you hide it under your coat and "Trouble! You've got trouble!" she laughed hysterically. "That's a good one. What about Freddy lying out there all alone—bleeding to death—while you stand there and keep me from . . ."

Realizing that she was rapidly going into hysterics, Jack slapped her hard across the face, then spun her toward the plane, "Sorry," he said quietly. "Now go on back. I'll find Freddy."
