GLEE CLUB SCORES SUCCESS IN FIRST PUBLIC CONCERT

APPRECIATIVE AUDIENCE APPLAUDS CHORUS

The Dallas Junior Women's Club Glee Club presented to the public Wednesday night in the M. E. Church its first public concert. They were assisted by Mamie Robertson Bare, reader, and Jesse Williams, bass soloist.

Although the weather was inclement many braved the rain and snow to make a very appreciative audience. The church was artistically decorated with palms, ferns, and baskets of chrysanthemums and pom poms. The glee club sat in a semi circle with the director, Mrs. Sara Sanford, standing in the front. The entire organization was dressed in black and white and made a very affective appearance.

The program was as follows: Theme Song, "All Through The Night," "Sweet and Low," "Giannia Mia," and "Sylvia" by the Glee Club; Mamie Robertson Bare, readings; Jesse Williams, solos; "Sympathy," "Lullaby," and "Big Brown Bear," the Glee Club; more readings; First Novel, "When The Crimson Sun Sets," and "Silent Night." The last number was rendered very effectively with the organization humming the tune and all lights in the church darkened with the exception of the cross above the altar in brilliant relief.

Mrs. Maude Baker was the accompanist both for the club and the two assisting artists.

Santa Will Carry An A.A.A. Card

Santa came in the other day. Wanted to get his club membership paid up before he starts on his long trip. Wouldn't be without it" he said. "Never forget the time Donner threw a shoe over Norway. That A.A.A. man was right on the spot. Then, once over in China . . ."

Santa's right. Whether you travel behind a string of reindeer or a sleek, polished hood of a new 1937 model, a membership in Wyoming Valley Motor Club gives you that extra feeling of safety and protection. It makes a swell Christmas present, too.

Giving a club membership has a double benefit. It's a gift that's useful all year 'round and it helps to boost the club. Just say the word and we'll see that your gift membership is delivered in time for Christmas morning.
