

Rural Baseball League Revived By Eight Teams

Twenty Game Schedule Will Start With Sunday's Game

PRYNN IS PRESIDENT

After a lapse of three years, the Rural Baseball League, once one of the best circuits in this section, has been revived and eight teams are poised for the opening of a twenty-game schedule next Sunday.

The first games will be Trucksville at Chase, Carverton at Jackson, Fernbrook at Beaumont and Dallas at Alderson.

The reorganization and revival of the league took place this week, when the following officers were elected: President, Willard Prynn, Carverton; secretary, Link Hablett, Chase; treasurer, Joseph Layaou, Trucksville.

The teams will play a series of games for the league championship at the end of the regular playing season. One game will be played between the team finishing first and third, another by the teams finishing second and fourth, and the winners of these contests will meet in a three game series for the championship.

Each team will carry fifteen players. All players must be residents of the rural section, and must be signed by June 15.

Mrs. Augustus Johnston is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Ralph Brown.

POST SCRIPTS

of us are trying to better ourselves to the detriment of our neighbor or "closest" friends. Little Iris knew her work here was done, and she wanted to return to Heaven. Nothing could stop her.

"She called her father Daddy. She called me Pop. All who heard her call me Pop agreed that she did so because she had heard my own children call me that. I know better. She called me Pop because she knew I liked it. She knew how to make friends and influence people. She called everyone all over the lake by the name she knew they liked to be called. She drew my family closer together. Her own family was knitted into a closer whole because of her stay among them.

"She often ran from the rear end of her play lot to the front road in order to wave a greeting to the trainmen as they passed by. Childish actions you say. Yes, I'll agree, if it were only done occasionally, but little Iris did this every day. She never failed because she knew that giving others attention, no matter what their age, was what they liked, and when people were pleased they were kinder to each other.

"Iris would go down to the Squire's and talk to him and Mrs. Squire for hours. Childish talk? Oh! no, it was the conversation of a seer. If you do not believe this, ask Mrs. Squire, and she will testify that because of the wishes of little Iris, souls that had become wrathful in the usual turmoil of the day, were quieted by Iris' talks.

"Physically nervous, Emily, who had the privilege of loving this child, returned home, calmer after "taking care" of Iris. Other neighbors who disliked each other for small, insignificant, petty things, forgot their dislikes after Iris had made them a visit.

"Could her parents keep her close to home? No, that was impossible. Iris had a duty of God to perform, a striving to make us love one another. She blazed a trail of Christianity and succeeded. Her work was done, and she went Home.

"When anyone who has met Iris leaves this earth and goes to Heaven, I know that in meeting their friends and relatives who have preceded them there, it will be necessary that they apologize to them first, before facing God, for the mean things they have done. But Iris they will meet with a smile and she will smile at them. She will take their hands and bring them to God and say, "These persons loved me and I loved them," and that introduction will suffice. A better ambassador no one could ask."
